Chance to Sacrifice

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Five-degree lower room temperatures in oil-heated houses, gasolineless Sundays, conversion to coal heating and other restrictions of petroleum products were suggested yesterday by leaders of the Nation's industry to meet an inevitable shortage of oil this winter in Atlantic Coast States.

The shortage, due to lack of adequate transportation facilities, was forecast in a report to Interior Secretary Ickes, recently named National Defense Petroleum Coordinator, by a fact-finding committee of the American Petroleum Institute. The study declares that due to the recent withdrawal of 50 tankers, turned over to British use, there would be an average tanker tonnage shortage equivalent to 494,000 dead-weight tons over the third and fourth quarters of this year and the first quarter of 1942.

Beginning in July, it was indicated that the shortage will reach a peak in the last quarter of this year, and that "the critical period will be during the coming winter."

Further Diversions Hinted

The A. P. I. report, which repeatedly hinted at further tanker diversions that would serve to intensify the critical situation, was confirmed by remarks of Ickes that he anticipated requests for release of more tankers to the British. Speaking on Capitol Hill, Representative Cole (Democrat), of Maryland, also declared that "rumor has it that additional tankers are to be withdrawn."

Significantly, the report suggested that "any restriction that may be necessary by reason of national defense" should be shared equitably by the entire Western Hemisphere." Members of the fact-finding committee added that the restriction should also be applied "to all of the 48 States" even though the major transportation difficulties affected the Atlantic coast area.

Plan May Save 15% of Gas

Against the estimated shortage of almost half a million tons, the report listed saving of about 264,000 tons theoretically possible by easing the load line limitations on tankers, substituting Gulf coast supplies for intercoastal movement, rearranging South and Central American supplies, more effective use of barges and relief from Southeastern gasoline pipeline competition.

"To the extent that the foregoing cannot be realized or further withdrawal of American tonnage or foreign tonnage used in the import service takes place, restriction in consumption will be necessary, imposed equitably, of course, throughout the entire area," the report said.

Clerk Carries Woman From Blazing House

She's Severely Burned; 3-Story Rescue Made In D. C. Rooming House

One woman was severely burned and a dozen other persons forced into the street in their nightclothes early today as a three-alarm fire swept through a boarding house at 1600 Q Street Northwest.

Miss Agnes Bonnette, about 30, was carried from her third story room, where the blaze is believed to have started, and taken to Emergency Hospital with severe burns of the face and hands. She is a State Department employe, it was reported.

Miss Bonnette was rescued by Peter Kesecker, 24, a clerk at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel, who lives at 1533 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Kesecker and his roommate, James Talboot, 29, noticed flames shooting from her third-story window as they went to Kesecker's automobile, parked nearby.

While Talbot pulled a firebox at Sixteenth and P Streets, Kesecker ran up the steps, broke down the door and carried Miss Bonnette to the street.

He flagged a passing taxicab and took her to the hospital.

An elderly woman, Mrs. U. H. Chapman, who lived with the landlady, Miss Julia McCord, had to be assisted from the building by firemen, but she was not hurt.

Other residents made their way to the street unassisted.

Motorcycle police and scout cars from four precincts were called as several thousand persons gathered at the scene to watch firemen battle for more than an hour before bringing the flames under control.

All three floors were damaged.

Cent-a-Quart Milk Increase Sought Here

Producers Assert Drought Damage, Labor Problems Justify Boost

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association has asked the Department of Agriculture to grant a cent a quart increase in the price paid farmers for their product, The Post learned yesterday.

Award of the increase would send the price of home-delivered milk from 14 cents to 15 cents. It would result in corresponding jumps in store-bought milk, which now ranges from 9½ cents (in two-quart sales) to 13 cents a quart.

O. M. Reed, dairy chief of the Surplus Marketing Administration, to whom the petition was referred, explained that a price boost would not necessarily cause curtailment of the current nickel-a-quart program for needy families. Nor, he added, would it of necessity reduce Washington's chances of obtaining a penny-a-glass project for undernourished school children.

Get $3.17 a Hundred Pounds

Producers in this milkshed are now receiving a basic minimum of $3.17 a hundredweight, under the Secretary of Agriculture's milk marketing order. The price paid for surplus milk, of identical quality, which is sold to a limited number of District needy, is $1.99 a hundred.

The producers' organization is asking an increase to $3.63 and $2.45, respectively, the equivalent of 1 cent a quart.

Any change in the present schedule would have to be preceded by a public hearing under Agriculture auspices. Reed told The Post that a hearing date has not yet been set. Whether one is held at all is within Secretary Claude R. Wickard's discretion.

The milk marketing order regulating the Washington marketing area has never been amended since it became effective February 1, 1940.

Says Increase Is Justified

Likelihood of the scheduling of hearings by Secretary Wickard is increased by the fact that several local dairies, as well as the producers' association, are seeking amendment of the order. The dairies are requesting certain reforms in handling regulations.

The letter requesting an amendment hearing looking to a price increase was signed by Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the producers' combine. He said, according to Reed, that a one-cent hike is justified by drought damage to pasturage and the difficulty of dairy farmers' holding labor in competition with better-paying defense jobs.

But on another front yesterday—Capitol Hill—milk prices received by producers in this area were described as more than adequate, in

French Set for War in Syria; Nazis Already Using Dakar Base, London Sources Report

Six Ports Handed To Hitler by Darlan, Newspaper Asserts; Trade Threat Seen

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), June 4: The London News Chronicle, quoting London sources, declared today a collaboration agreement between Vice Premier Admiral Darlan, of France, and Adolf Hitler provided for the joint French-German use of six French naval bases.

The newspaper also said "Germany already is using Dakar, French West Africa, as a submarine base and U-boats from there have practically blockaded the Cape Verde Islands."

The six French naval bases, the newspaper said, were:

Sete, on the French Mediterranean coast between Marseille and the Spanish frontier; Beirut, French-mandated Lebanon; Algiers, Algeria; Casablanca, Morocco; Villefranche, on the French Riviera between Nice and the Italian frontier, and Dakar.

Under the terms of the Hitler-Darlan agreement, the newspaper said, Germany will be able to base surface raiders and warships at Dakar as well as Casablanca, "thus threatening the great north-south trade route in the Atlantic by which ships from Britain and the United States travel to South Africa, the Indian Ocean and the Red Sea."

England Has Internal Worries Over Defense

By Robert P. Post
Copyright by New York Times

London, June 3.—The British tonight were still bitter over the Crete episode and most anxious over Syria.

That the two should be linked is most natural because the British government is facing not only a foreign military but also a domestic political problem as a result of Near Eastern developments.

It is generally expected here that German occupation of Crete will be followed by the occupation of Cyprus and that both occupations will be only preludes to a German drive on Syria which will be followed by an Axis attempt to control the oil fields of Iran and Iraq.

The loss of Crete has produced dissatisfaction and worry and many observers believe that if the British allow the Germans to beat them into Syria, Prime Minister Churchill will be in a more perilous position, politically speaking, than he has been in the past year.

Many ugly questions are being asked by the press and the public about Crete. "We had seven months to fortify Crete, why were not our airports prepared against a German

Eklund Avidly Read Stories Of Sniper's Killings, Jury Told

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Twelve jurors who may or may not like detective stories followed fresh chapters of a real life thriller yesterday in District Court as the trial of John Eklund for murder progressed.

Engrossing these 12 men, and the spectators who filled Justice James M. Proctor's court, was the story of a strange and savage character who crept up behind four victims and shot them dead last fall. He wounded a fifth and he missed a sixth.

In peril of death in the electric chair at the jurors' judgment is Eklund, 28, rigid, tight-lipped and neatly dressed. When he was paroled from an Indana prison in 1939, after serving three years for burglary and grand larceny, Eklund came to Washington.

Eklund was identified Monday by Mildred Washington, 18, as the man who shot her boy friend, Hylan McClaine, 17, to death on Rock Creek Parkway.

Unwilling to rest their case on this one identification, Assistant District Attorneys John W. Fihelly and Charles B. Murray undertook yesterday to tighten their case against Eklund by circumstantial evidence.

Herbert Ray, 50, a Richmond waiter, testified that he knew Eklund for a year, when Ray frequented a pool room here. Ray said he sponged small sums, meals and a shirt from his college chum.

When Eklund wanted .38-caliber bullets, said Ray, he sent his chum to buy them. After McClaine was killed, last October 14, Ray said that Eklund was preoccupied with the case, that he read all the newspaper stories about it and talked about little else.

When the Washington girl reported the slayer wore no hat, said Ray, Eklund began wearing one. When she mentioned a brown suit, Ray asserted, Eklund declared he would get rid of his own brown suit. Eklund had been wearing rubber-soled shoes, said Ray. When the Washington girl told how slightly the killer had stepped, Eklund got rid of his shoes, the witness testi-

Freighters to Carry Men From Rumanian Ports, Ankara Reports

By the Associated Press

Ankara, June 2 (Delayed).—Reports of mass German troop movements into Syria, following up infiltrations by "tourists," threw that French-mandated region into sharp focus today as a possible zone of armed conflict.

Unofficial sources here and in Istanbul gave this account of the Nazi thrust into the Levant States:

Recently numbers of Germans in civilian clothing and with Bulgarian passports went through Turkey to Syria. Since their papers were seemingly in order, Turkey let them pass.

Then 500 German soldiers with armored cars and mobile field guns landed last Thursday at Latakia, directly opposite the British island of Cyprus.

Now a dozen freighters flying the swastika have been assigned to carry German troops and heavy military equipment from Rumania's Black Sea port of Constanta to Syria.

The plan is for them to stop off in Italy's Dodecanese Islands and then run the British naval patrol at night. The whole trip can be made in a week, it was said here.

The reports here said that the German air force would seek to keep open a lane of safety for its troops from the Balkans to Syria, and that once established in Syria the infantry and air force could threaten Iraq, Palestine and Cyprus simultaneously.

Observers here already have told of seeing as many as 200 German planes in the Aleppo area, near the Turkish frontier, last week. They were said to include bombers, fighters and transports. Some were said to be shuttling between Aleppo and Iraq, where the pro-Axis government was defeated by the British.

R. A. F. Planes Mow Down Nazi Column

Marching Troops Are Machine Gunned In Northern France

By the United Press

London, June 3.—British fighter planes today mowed down a column of marching German troops in a surprise daylight attack on northern France, the air ministry said, after R. A. F. night bombing assaults that set the heart of Berlin aflame and blasted Nazi war industries along the lower Rhine.

The British fighters, screaming down to within 300 feet with machine guns blazing, were said to have poured 1,200 rounds of bullets into closely packed ranks of German troops and inflicted heavy casualties.

"One Spitfire pilot had the satisfaction of seeing two German staff officers throw themselves into a ditch to avoid the stream of bullets from his gun," said the air ministry.

The pilot then fired bullets into a camouflaged Nazi car along the road.

Other British planes in daylight attacks "probably destroyed" an enemy armed trawler in the English Channel near the French coast, it was stated.

A fighter plane pilot of the R. A. F. dived low upon the trawler and poured a stream of cannon shells

With Nazi 'Consent'

By Ralph E. Heinzen,
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, June 3.—Hastily rearmed units of the French air force have been secretly shifted to Syria and Tunisia, with Germany's consent, to enforce a "single-handed" French defense against further British attacks, it was understood tonight in reliable quarters.

The council of ministers in day-long consultation took major decisions reported to call for defense of Syria and Tunisia by all possible means, even at the risk of plunging France back into the war against her former ally of only a year ago.

Urgent Measures Formulated

The secret shifting of French air force units to Syria and Tunisia, both the targets of British bombing attacks, was revealed after the reported adoption by Marshal Petain's ministers of a broad program of "empire defense."

Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of France's overseas forces, summoned home by airplane from Tunisia for the meeting with Petain and the cabinet, was said to have been charged with putting the new program into effect immediately.

Although no communique was issued when the cabinet ministers ended their deliberations at 8 p. m., it was known that urgent measures had been formulated by Petain, Gen. Weygand and Vice Premier Admiral Darlan and approved in the ministerial sessions.

Authoritative French quarters said that, as result of today's cabinet sessions at noon and 6 p. m. and numerous smaller conferences, a thorough plan of empire defense "is now ready."

Grave Menace to Britain

Any further British attacks in Syria, Tunisia or other parts of the French empire, it was said, will be met by the fire of a re-commissioned French air force armed with Germany's consent and prepared to defend both Syria and Tunisia as result of the secret shifting of air strength.

The average Frenchman today has no idea of the real seriousness of the French-British situation. He has not been told, either by press or radio, about what happened in Syria before the British bombings

Knox Calls for 'Miracle' To Speed Ship Construction

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy yesterday launched a shipbuilding speed-up program based on a doctrine successfully used during the World War—that Americans can do wonders spurred by competition and patriotism.

Announcing plans for a series of competitions among shipyards and individuals calculated to arouse the spirit of workers to war-time pitch, Secretary Knox called for a production "miracle."

"We must do something more than an honest day's work," he told a conference of 150 shipbuilders. "We must have the kind of spirit and the kind of zeal that animate men when they go into battle."

The shipbuilders were asked to work out detailed plans for the competitions, which may include Government-paid bonuses, and appointed a committee to handle the matter. Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Navy Bureau of Ships, said that the competitions would involve not only yards and ships, but groups and individual workers.

Six months ago, officials considered the adoption of such a plan, to be carried out "like a 1918 liberty loan." One ranking naval officer estimated that shipbuilding time could be cut 25 per cent if workers turned to with war-time fervor.

It was concluded, however, that such spirit could be aroused only by declaration of war, "or something like it." President Roosevelt's declaration of an unlimited national emergency caused a revival of the plan.

Meanwhile, another step to relieve the crucial Atlantic shipping situation was announced by the Maritime Commission. Under an arrangement with Great Britain, American ships will take over all shipping services from Canada and the United States to Australia and New Zealand.

This will release a dozen British vessels for use in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Maritime Commissioner John J. Dempsey told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee during the day that "a number" of American merchant ships already have been converted into aircraft carriers—highly important craft in patroling the seas against submarines and raiders.

Declining to disclose details, Dempsey also stated that American shipyards are now turning out freighters at the rate of 1¼ a week

D.C. Budget Put at $55,000,000, With Revenue Slightly More

Budget estimates submitted by District officials in 12 days of executive hearings before the District Appropriations Subcommittee total nearly $55,000,000—by far the highest in history—and yet estimated revenues for the next fiscal year are slightly in excess of that figure, it was disclosed last night.

District officials and Congressional leaders cautioned, however, that extraordinary National defense expenditures during 1942 are likely to boost municipal expenses considerably in excess of present estimates and that increased taxes may be expected to meet the increase.

As the subcommittee received from District officials the last explanation of proposed expenditures and prepared to close hearings today with morning and afternoon sessions for citizen representatives, these are the major totals from which it will draft an appropriation bill for the fiscal year beginning July 1:

Total estimated obligations from general, highway and water accounts—$54,965,793.

Total estimate of funds available for 1942—including unobligated 1941 balances and expected 1942 tax revenues and assuming that the Federal payment will be $8,000,000—$55,548,491.

In a financial statement presented to the subcommittee by District budget officers, the 1942 surplus was estimated at $582,708, but

Roosevelt Appeals to Nation For Soldiers' Recreation Funds

President Roosevelt, opening the $10,765,000 drive of the United Service Organizations for National Defense, last night called for contributions from "all who possibly can" because the cause was "the first concern of every citizen."

The Chief Executive's appeal, read by Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt in a broadcast from Los Angeles over three major networks, stressed the importance of the fund for providing soldier recreation facilities "because recreation is part of our total defense program."

On the same program contributions were urged by Army and Navy leaders and heads of the campaign, including Charles P. Taft, assistant security administrator in charge of health, welfare and related defense activities, from Indianapolis; District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, national chairman of the drive, and Walter Hoving, president of the United Service Organizations, from New York.

In his message the President called contribution to the fund both a local and a national responsibility.

"More recent developments," he said, "make united national action doubly urgent for all fronts."

"The campaign goal of $10,765,000 will provide necessary services in hundreds of towns and for many thousands of young men and women. From all of us who possibly can, contributing to this fund and for this purpose, is not only an obli-out the United States. South America and Canada," the study declared.

"The only effective way to conserve motor fuel would be to restrict pleasure use through some such device as gasoline-less Sundays," it was stated. The report estimated that consumption of gasoline might be thus reduced as much as 15 per cent "without undue hardship."

The suggestion to restrict Sunday use of pleasure cars backed a proposal made by Ickes last week.

To conserve distillate fuel oil, largely used for heating purposes, the report pointed out that if house temperatures were reduced by an average of about 5 degrees, average consumption could be cut down about 10 per cent.

Kerosene Restrictions

The reports estimated that as much as 15 per cent of consumption of residual fuel oil could be saved by conversion to coal of plants which could use either oil or coal. It also suggested restricting the use of kerosene.

Estimating the prospective shortage as the equivalent of the cargoes of 40 10,000 deadweight ton tankers, the report pointed out that the 24-inch crude oil pipeline now proposed to run between Texas and New York and Philadelphia refineries, would carry a load equivalent to that of 65 tankers. Legislation authorizing the line, which would cost about $70,000,000, recently was introduced in Congress.

The A. P. I. study also noted that construction of another 20-inch products pipeline from Texas to the East Coast would release 50 more tankers.

Antitrust Fears Allayed

The reporting group also recommended that an industry committee be formed to function for the industry with the Government on national defense problems. Ickes indicated that several committees would be established shortly.

Allaying fears that cooperative action of the industry to meet emergency problems would fall afoul of the antitrust statutes, Ickes read to the committee a letter from Attorney General Jackson implying that a procedure could be worked out without constituting violations of the law.

In his letter the Attorney General promised Ickes that "any proposals for future civil or criminal proceedings under the antitrust laws may, before authorization by me, be submitted to you for advice as to whether the proposed proceeding would in any way conflict with your program."

into its hull, zoomed up and repeated his attack on the other side of the vessel. When he left the ship was said to have sunk at least 4 feet in the water.

The British bombers staging last night's attack on Berlin and centers of Nazi war production along the lower Rhine were said to have roared through heavy rainstorms with ice-coated wings to press home the aerial assaults.

A small force of heavy bombers, believed loaded with the new super bombs of terrific destructive power, penetrated to the center of the German capital under most adverse weather conditions and sent flames leaping high in their forty-sixth raid of the war, the ministry said.

Heavy loads of incendiaries and high explosives were dropped on industrial objectives at Duesseldorf and in the Duisberg-Ruhrort area at the junction of the Ruhr and the Rhine, it was reported. Large fires were said to have blazed up in industrial buildings.

"Although there were heavy clouds in this part of Germany and much ground haze, there was enough break in the weather for our crews to aim," the ministry said.

Docks at Ostend and St. Nazaire on the Belgian-French "invasion" coast also were attacked in a night of heavy operations.

Ice that penetrated the carburetors stopped both engines of one bomber at 14,000 feet and the plane lost 4,000 feet of altitude before the motors could be restarted, the ministry's communique said.

Duesseldorf, which was attacked for the twenty-ninth time, is an especially important industrial center containing blast furnaces, steel works, factories, a naval armaments factory, an airdrome and important railroad yards. Inland docks and freight yards were the objectives in the Duisberg-Ruhrort area.

The main force of the night's operations was directed along the Rhine. The raid on Berlin was less intense because of the heavy weather.

On Monday, British planes swooped over the entire length of the Kiel Canal connecting the North and Baltic seas and subjected shipping to an intense bombing, the ministry reported. A German ship was reported sunk off the Norwegian coast.

R. A. F. planes, some of them piloted by Americans, bombed and machine-gunned German airdromes and motor transport in occupied France, as well as torpedo boats in the English Channel.

British planes destroyed a German fighter and a bomber off the English coast Monday evening.

Four British planes were missing from the night operations, it was admitted, and three were missing from the Monday daylight raids.

Russia Ends Recognition Of Greece, Too

By the Associated Press

Moscow, June 3.—The Belgian and Greek Ministers to Moscow looked to the United States today for haven and the Yugoslav Minister headed for British-mandated Palestine in hurried departures complying with the Soviet's decision depriving them of diplomatic status.

They and Norwegian representatives, who already had departed, were told that their Axis-occupied countries had lost their sovereignty.

The Soviet government withdrew recognition of Belgium, Norway and Yugoslavia May 9 and added Greece to the list today.

Allied and neutral diplomats gave the Belgian and Yugoslav parties a warm sendoff and prepared to speed the Greeks on their way. There were no Russian authorities among those who saw them off.

At the sendoffs were United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt and representatives of the French, British, Chinese, Turkish, Iranian and Afghan embassies and the Finnish, Rumanian, Greek and Swedish legations.

The departure of the Greek minister will leave Sir Stafford Cripps, the British Ambassador, as the last Allied envoy among 19 foreign missions remaining in Moscow.

The Belgian Minister Guy Hendryx, with his wife and three young children and counselor, are going to the United States via Siberia.

Greek Minister Diamantopoulos and his American-born wife and secretaries also considered the United States as their next objective.

The Yugoslav Minister Milan Gavrilovic had Jerusalem, in British-mandated Palestine, as the ultimate destination for himself, 24 secretaries, attaches and their families. They will go by way of Turkey.

French Are Ready To Move on British

began there (referring to the use of Syrian airdromes by German planes en route to Iraq) and is aware only of the fact that the British have started severe reprisals against the French Empire.

France's overseas colonies could present a grave menace to Britain, particularly Syria and Tunisia which lie close to Britain's vital communications.

Tunisia lies at the fortified tip of Cape Bon on the North African Coast backed by Bizerta's powerful air and naval bases and is only 85 miles from Sicily.

If France should ever collaborate militarily with the Axis the Mediterranean could be cut there at its narrowest point.

Syria is of even greater strategic importance, and if the war bursts in full force in the Near East Syria will be the center of things. It cuts deeply into the British defense triangle formed by Cyprus, Haifa and Alexandria now that Crete has been lost.

The French, at the time they were Britain's ally, laid out dozens of excellently equipped flying fields in Syria and there are so many of these, according to French officials, that eight or ten could be wholly destroyed by the R. A. F. without grounding the French air force in Syria.

When the cabinet met for two hours this morning Gen. Weygand, commander of France's still-formidable overseas defense forces, was said to have done most of the talking, reporting on the new menaces to the empire as result of three British bombings of the French Tunisian port of Sfax, bombings of Syrian airdromes and a reported British threat of invasion of Syria.

During the afternoon Petain and Weygand conferred privately and the cabinet ministers were summoned together again at the Hotel Du Parc for a two-hour evening session.

Weygand is expected to return to the French colonies, presumably Algiers, immediately but his departure will remain a secret until he reaches his destination.

50 Armored Scout Cars Start 'Shooting' in Tennessee 'War'

By Rice Yahner

Associated Press Staff Writer

With Army in Tennessee, June 3. An attack by 50 armored scout cars—advance elements of an invader moving southward — opened the "shooting phase" in Tennessee's simulated war games over a 25-mile front today.

Fast units, assigned the important task of protecting the west flank of the Seventh Army Corps made up of three divisions, struck at the enemy, capturing one of three scout cars that were the advance raiders of the invaders.

But within minutes the defending Blues themselves were hit when machine guns of one of the Red (invading) scout cars opened up (with blank ammunition) from a road junction screened by trees.

Operations of the day, cloudy and cool at the start and broken by a drenching afternoon thundershower, moved the Fifth (Fort Custer, Mich.) and the Thirtieth (Georgia, Tennessee and Carolinas) Divisions approximately 35 miles northwestward from bivouac areas they left this morning. The Twenty-seventh (New York) Division, in the center of the corps and presumably its main resistance, had a shorter haul.

Because the assumed combat conditions did not include activity of enemy bombers, the defenders used observation planes only. Long motorized columns moved as they would if they were threatened from air, but under such conditions they would have moved at night.

Even the blanks fired at the advance battalion of one of the Fifth Division's combat teams threw the head of the Blue motor column into confusion momentarily. The umpires ruled that, in actual combat, the battalion commander and his adjutant would have been killed.

So surprising was the first scout-car stab that some officers of the Fifth Division fully expected it would be followed by tanks. Anti-tank companies took up positions on every vital artery in the maneuver are. Some soldiers, weapons ready, lay on main-street sidewalks of Shelbyville, Watrace and Fairfield, all in the path of the invader.

Nazis Permit Vichy to Defend Her Outposts

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 3.—An intimation that the French would be given a free hand to defend Syria or other outposts against any British attack was made today by authorized German sources with the declaration:

". . . We have Marshal Petain's and Admiral Darlan's statements that they will defend all their territory. Germany, although victor, is ready to concede this sacred right and duty of every nation to the French themselves.

And, it was added:

"Whether and in what manner France may desire to throw onto the scales the weight of German-French relationships developed in the course of the past year is something one cannot discuss theoretically. Only a practical case can show."

As to whether Germany herself could afford to let Britain seize Syria, this was the response:

"We don't cross bridges before we come to them."

Earlier, authorized persons here had thus dismissed reports abroad that Nazi motorized infantry had landed in Syria at the port of Latakia:

"It is unthinkable that this corresponds to the facts."

The German public was jubilant over naval successes claimed during the day. The official German news agency D. N. B. declared that "more than half of Britain's tonnage for supplying the island" has been sunk. The high command itself reported that the navy and air force during May sank 746,000 tons of merchant shipping space, and other sources said the monthly average of such sinkings since February has been at least 700,000 tons.

Berlin, which was subjected last night to an air raid costing some dead and wounded, apparantly has changed its defense tactics. A military spokesman, reminded that there was less anti aircraft fire than usual, answered: "I noticed that myself and there must have been some reason for it." He added that he was not in position to give details.

Bombing Reported

Vichy, June 3 (AP).—Dispatches from Beirut, French-mandated Lebanon, reported that a British plane dropped four bombs on Shell Oil Co. depots there today. One native was wounded, it was said, and there was but slight damage.

Axis Ready To Thwart U. S. Aid, Italy Hints

By International News Service

Rome, June 3.—Italian authorities indicated tonight that the Axis is ready to take vigorous counteraction against America's part in the war, and Fascist spokesmen bluntly said that American aid for British cannot prevent Italo-German victory.

This was one of the main topics at the Brenner Pass meeting yesterday between Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini, and tonight the official Rome radio commented:

"The Brenner conferees discussed Europe's future relations with other continents.

"But President Roosevelt will have to await Axis deeds before he learns our plans."

With the Battle of Crete over after only a fortnight's fighting, the war now moves into new areas, and the Axis is ready to meet America, the Italians said.

Virginio Gayda, editor of the Giornale d'Italia, who expresses the views of Premier Mussolini, wrote:

"The Axis is able to oppose vast resources, military and political force and substantial possibilities of defense and offense, against America, whose aid England is insistently requesting."

An official announcement following the five-hour Brenner Pass meeting added: "The length of the conversation, which occurred at a definite moment of international political importance, shows the vastness and vitalness of future Axis action.

"The meeting marked the end of the Balkan war and the start of a new military cycle. Only deeds will reveal what decisions were taken."

Knudsen, Hillman Appeal for Boost In Production

By International News Service

William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, top-ranking chiefs of the national defense setup, last night issued a call to all Americans to back up President Roosevelt's declaration of a national emergency with production and more production for defense.

Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, and Hillman, associate director, broadcast their appeal over a network of the National Broadcasting system, under the auspices of the National League of Women Voters.

Citing the progress already made, the vast enlargement of the original program, Knudsen warned it must be enlarged still more. He said, "American industry and workers have never failed their country in an emergency, and they will not fail now."

Hillman, declaring that to insure national security, "we must end all hesitation and delay," said the President's declaration of a national emergency means "that the time has arrived when you and I and all of us must live and think and act for national defense."

Power Asked To Take Struck Defense Plants

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Faced with a cold Congressional reception to the Administration's "draft property" bill, President Roosevelt late yesterday indicated that a chief purpose of the measure was to empower the Government to take over defense plants immobilized by strikes that resist settlement efforts.

This explanation was believed likely to win the measure a more receptive audience on Capitol Hill. Coupled with it came word that the President has told legislative leaders he is willing to accept "any reasonable modification" of the bill's sweeping language.

Introduced as an Administration measure, the proposal would give the President, or any of his agents, power to take over "either temporarily or permanently," property of any kind—real or personal, tangible or intangible. The Government would pay "fair and just" compensation.

The President said that the bill's main purpose was to maintain deliveries of national defense articles.

The 75-day strike at the Milwaukee plant of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. first suggested the need for such powers, he said.

During that strike, explained Mr. Roosevelt, the Government found that the workers and the management were ready to go back to work on vital defense orders, but only on their own terms.

Provisions in the Selective Service law of 1940, giving the Government power to take over a factory that "refuses" to carry out defense orders, did not fit the Allis-Chalmers case, said the President.

There was a need, he said, for authority to commandeer plants when the goods were not being delivered or manufactured. Mr. Roosevelt implied that the "draft property" bill, introduced Monday, would fill that need.

His disclosure of the bill's purpose followed a day of intense Congressional outbursts against the measure, outbursts that undoubtedly were carried to the President's own desk by legislative leaders who conferred with him yesterday morning.

Time Limit Forecast

After they emerged from the White House conference, Speaker Rayburn indicated that a time limit may be written into the bill.

The clause authorizing conscription of property "either temporarily or permanently" excited the most controversy in Congress and Rayburn said, "I think it should be clarified."

At his press conference, the President insisted he had not read the measure, which was introduced by the War Department, and he refused to say whether he believed that it was essential for national defense to clothe the Government with power to take over property permanently.

Rayburn, on leaving the White House said that the question was whether "permanently" meant "from here on out."

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson said of the legislation that "the President should have the authority to throw the whole industrial power of this country into equipping the Army."

Future Emergencies Seen

"The military and naval requirements come first," he told reporters at a press conference. Patterson said the measure was drafted to meet future emergencies, not as a solution for labor difficulties.

Even some Administration leaders, normally stanch supporters or bills that bear the Administration label, were lukewarm to the property conscription measure in its present form.

Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, said he would introduce the bill, since it had been requested by the War Department, but said he would have the bill carry a notation that he had introduced it "by request."

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, summoned his group to consider plans for handling the measure Friday.

"There is no excuse for this bill," said Republican House Leader Joe Martin, of Massachusetts, indicating a call for organized Republican opposition to the measure.

Taft Predicts a Battle

"Outrageous," was the comment of Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio. "I don't believe Congress will pass that bill," he added. Taft predicted a "bitter fight" over the legislation.

Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, Administration whip, said enactment of the bill is necessary "if we are to get production of war materials."

But savage denunciation came from the isolationist leader, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, (Democrat), of Montana.

"I doubt that either Hitler or Mussolini has that much personal power," said Wheeler.

"I can see no reason to give the President the right to take over either real or personal property of the people."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, also an isolationist, said the bill "sounds like a virtual dictatorship."

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that he was withholding judgment, but he predicted there would be Senate opposition to it on the ground that it is a war-making measure while the country is at peace.

Hitler's Defeat, New World Led By U. S. Urged

By International News Service

New York, June 3.—Defeat of Adolf Hitler and creation of a new world of independent and liberal-minded nations in which the United States should take active leadership were urged by three prominent speakers at Columbia University's 187th commencement exercises today.

Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, and Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, who recently was recalled to active duty, called for joint action by America and England to achieve the overthrow of Hitler.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the university, which conferred honorary degrees on Halifax and Woodward, declared that 'the world is awaiting another Waterloo," and added:

"When this second Waterloo does come, let us make sure . . . that people of the United States and their Government will take full responsibility for leadership in organizing the world of independent and liberal-minded nations . . . and that no third Waterloo may ever be necessary."

Lord Halifax, certain that Britain and the United States can humble the man who plans "to master the world," likened the Nazis' fight with free nations to the methods of their Stone Age ancestors, stating:

"The weapons are more destructive . . . but the spirit is the same and those who wield them seek the same result. That is why the destruction of Hitlerism, and all it stands for, must remain our first war aim for there is no hope otherwise of recovery."

Lord Halifax reiterated that England would not surrender without a fight to the finish.

"We in the British commonwealth," he stated, "have made our choice. For us, there can be no turning back for we know that for our bodies, as for our souls, the only alternative to victory is slavery which is worse than death."

Admiral Woodward declared that England is "in dire need of our maximum assistance—without which she may perish."

"Retreat on our part is unthinkable," he asserted. "We must go forward and stop Hitler.

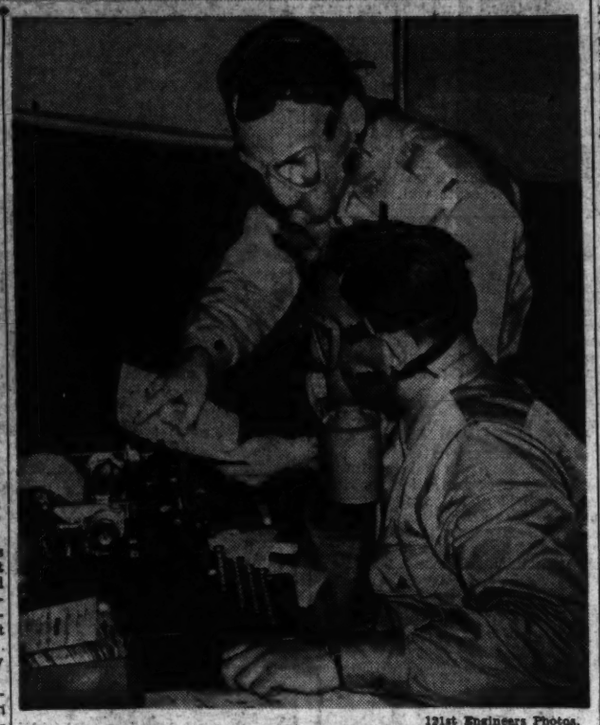
"His definite program is to absorb the United States into his dominations as he has already absorbed 14 nations of Europe . . .

"Should England fall we have got a war on our hands whether we want it or not—all the isolationists, pacifists and wishful thinkers to the contrary notwithstanding."

The admiral said the United States Navy is "prepared and ready to carry out its purpose," adding:

"In 1946 we will have a well-balanced Navy of 3.5 million tons, capable of winning a victory over any combination of nations in either the Atlantic or Pacific or in both oceans simultaneously."

Nine other honorary degrees were conferred at the exercises at which 3,851 students were graduated. Others receiving honorary degrees included Sir Lyman P. Duff, chief justice of the Canadian supreme court; Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, U. S. A., retired; Oswaldo Aranha, minister of foreign affairs of Brazil; Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, minister of foreign affairs for Argentina, and the Rev. Robert I. Gannon, president of Fordham University.



121st Engineers Photos.

SIGN LANGUAGE WAS NECESSARY—Recently issued new training gas masks, the District's 121st Engineers at Fort George G. Meade, Md., are wearing them constantly these days to get the feel. The men are given the alert signal at odd times and without warning to get the habit of donning masks quickly. This sometimes leads to odd situations. For instance, can you imagine Warrant Officer Meyer Goldberg (top), the regiment's band master, and his musicians giving forth a tune while masked? Lower—Lieut. S. W. Stephenson, assistant personnel officer, uses sign language to transmit orders to Private Arnold Steiner while the entire regimental headquarters works in masks

18,000 New Troops in 100-Mile Columns Move on Fort Meade

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., June 3.—The first of three motor columns, each nearly 100 miles long, bringing the Forty-fourth Division from Fort Dix, N. J., to Caroline County, Va., will begin arriving here tomorrow about 5 a. m.

From then until afternoon, the division's 18,000 former National Guardsmen and selectees from New Jersey and New York will stream into this post's southern half, setting up tent camps for the night. They will come in 1,991 vehicles of all types, some loaded with troops, some towing field guns and anti-tank weapons, some carrying engineer equipment.

In the first detachment will be the 104th Engineers, which will set up five water purification units along the Patuxent River. By the time troops are settled in their camps, water should be available.

Today, 36 officers in 11 motor vehicles, constituting the division's reconnaisance detail under Maj. Albert C. Molter, arrived and began looking over their camp site. They found a wild wooded area, punctuated with little farms and clearings and cut by two rivers, the Patuxent at the north and the Little Patuxent at the south. Ordinarily, the entire area is closed to all travel and is in use as the Twenty-ninth Division's combat range.

The Forty-fourth's long convoy, which would stretch out over more than 200 miles of roadway in march formation, will travel south in three columns on two routes, each column divided into two serials. One column will come down U. S. Highway No. 1, consisting of the Fifty-seventh Brigade combat team, which includes the 113th and 114th Infantry and the 165th Field Artillery.

4 Women Help In Fund Campaign For Service Club

Four women of national renown went on the radio yesterday to urge support of a drive to raise funds for expansion and maintenance of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, 1015 L Street Northwest.

Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, in a talk over WWDC, explained that the campaign was the first activity of the recently organized Women's National Democratic Club Defense Project. A round table discussion of services performed by the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club was broadcast over WJSV by Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the Federal Security administrator; Mrs. Albert Cox, wife of the District Selective Service head, and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, widow of the former Senator from Illinois.

Japan Sending Axis 1,500 Tons Of Goods Daily

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, June 3.—Japan is supplying Germany with 1,500 tons of essential foodstuffs and commodities every day, informed sources declared today, and efforts are being made to increase this traffic despite a recent 500 per cent advance in freight rates to Berlin on Soviet Russia's trans-Siberian railway.

The shipments from Japan, Manchukuo and Japanese-occupied sections of China have been going out steadily for several months, these sources said, as Germany has sought to minimize effects of the British sea blockade by trading through her Axis partner in the Far East.

Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, German economic expert, is conferring with Japanese officials to expedite the shipments.

In Berlin, authorized Nazi sources said Dr. Wohlthat was in Tokyo to negotiate a far-reaching extension of German-Japanese economic relations.

Oils, Meats and Cotton

Soybeans, oils, meats, rice and cotton are among the commodities shipped to Germany in large quantities, it was said.

Seventy-five thousand tons of the Manchukuo soybean crop have been sent to Germany, it was asserted. Soybeans are prized because of the variety of uses to which they can be put.

To systematize the traffic, Germany has established forwarding agencies in Moscow, Tokyo, Shanghai, Tientsin, Dairen, Manchuli, Tsingtao and Harbin.

The plans of these agencies already exceed the facilities, even though Russia has allotted 8,000 freight cars for this traffic, it was asserted.

Japan Gets Chemicals

In return, Japan gets such products as chemicals, dyes and scientific apparatus, all items of small bulk and high value which are needed here as a result of the United States' export restrictions.

(Disclosing the extent to which Japan is reaching out for supplies, a dispatch from Santiago, Chile, reported an unusual number of Japanese trade representatives had arrived there to negotiate for such metals as copper, manganese and cobalt.

(Chilean statistics showed, for example, exports of 16,173 tons of bar copper to Japan in the first three months of 1941—2,000 tons more than Japan bought there in all of 1940.

(Japan was reported endeavoring to contract for all Chilean manganese, which is expected to increase fourfold to 60,000 tons this year. Last year's 15,000 tons went to the United States.)

While the Axis thus is making increasing use of its Far-Eastern gateway, the newspaper Asahi reported today that British officials from Singapore, Burma, Chungking, Shanghai, Tientsin, Vladivostok, Tokyo, Australia and the Philippines had been conferring at Hongkong since May 20 on "strengthening the land route between Burma and Singapore as well as on closer means of communication between Burma and Malaya," and on "establishment of powerful air bases at Chungking for joint use by British and American forces if necessary."

New Uprising In Rumania Is Forecast

By Daniel T. Brigham
Copyright by New York Times

Berne, Switzerland, June 3.—Indications of a recrudescence of Iron Guard resistance to the Antonescu regime and the possibility of a new outbreak in Rumania before mid-June were received here together with a report that Horia Sima had just written Premier General Antonescu boastfully offering to appear in court with his principal lieutenants June 5 when they come up to trial if three conditions are fulfilled.

These conditions are:

1. A change of venue from the military to the civil tribunal.
2. Defendants to be tried in open session of the court.
3. A German commission to be allowed to attend the trial, and if requested "be allowed to give such legal aid and assistance as might be required."

Though Premier Antonescu has not yet replied, he is understood to be considering with his advisers the possibility of granting the first two conditions.

Power Duel Goes On

The Sima-Antonescu battle for power in Rumania has never actually ceased, though after the rebellion early this year Gen. Antonescu with the help of his army, which, in the main, remained loyal to him, was able to regain the upper hand.

From reports received since, however, it appears he was able to do this only by promising further widespread concessions to the German "instructors" who virtually occupy his land. That these concessions have been carried out at painful costs to Rumania may be seen in the reports of further food restrictions just issued there.

Bread rations, hitherto 500 grams daily for all, have now been reduced to 320 for the general population, exception only being made in the cases of manual laborers and farmers who get the former rations.

Eklund Talked Much of Sniper, Waiter Says

McClaine was killed with a .38-caliber pistol, as the jury could see from two slugs taken from the body and placed in evidence. Ray testified that Eklund had a .38-caliber pistol, but he got rid of it.

Ray said Eklund got together a kit of tools and declared he was going to dig some bullets out of a tree across the Highway Bridge. Ray said Eklund had been shooting there and was afraid the police would compare his bullets with those taken from McClaine's body.

And, said Ray, the Washington girl's description of the killer fitted Eklund. Ray said Eklund was concerned over whether the girl could identify the slayer, if she saw him.

A month after the killing, Ray said he began to be worried about his own safety. Perhaps, if Eklund were indeed the sniper, his chum knew too much. So he went to the police with the story. Two days later he pointed out Eklund in a Pennsylvania Avenue lunch room, and three policemen took him in custody.

Capt. Walter T. Storm, of the Third Precinct, said Eklund would tell police nothing, that he denied all charges. He has persevered in that denial.

Detective Lieut. Robert J. Barrett said Ray told police the same story he told the jury. Barrett said, too, that Eklund denied everything.

Barrett and Detective Sergt. Augrey Tolson told how they found a tree where Eklund was said to have had his pistol range. They took two bullets from it and these were placed in evidence, beside the two from McClaine's body.

The prosecutors expect to present experts as witnesses today who will say that all four came from the same gun.

Defense Counsel James R. Kirkland and Leonard P. Walsh, will present Eklund's case, probably next week.

Meanwhile, the jurors may concentrate on remembering the threads of the story, because they are almost in as close custody as Eklund. They are not even taken out for meals.

Bishop Coadjutor Call Is Accepted By Dean Powell

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Dean of Washington and Warden of the College of Preachers of the Washington Cathedral, announced yesterday that he had accepted the position as bishop coadjutor of the Diocese of Maryland, to which he was elected last Wednesday.

His decision was contained in a telegram sent to Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, of Baltimore, chairman of the diocesan committee which informed him of his selection.

"I have weighed carefully and prayerfully the call extended to me by the Diocese of Maryland to become Bishop Coadjutor," he wired, "and believe I am moved to accept. I so accept, subject to the necessary canonical consent. It is my fervent prayer that God will direct and keep us all in the way which he wants us to go."

"Canonical consent," is was explained by Cathedral officials, means that the parishes of the Maryland Diocese will have to approve the appointment and acceptance before Dean Powell is confirmed as bishop in the fall.

and by November will be completing one a day.

Secretary Knox told the special shipbuilding conference, called to announce plans for the new competition system, that the United States was "facing the greatest danger we have ever faced since man began to fight for freedom on this continent."

"We must play a determinative part in the tragedy that's now going on in the world," he added, "or we'll spend the rest of our lives and the lives of our sons and their sons trying to fend off an enemy overrunning the rest of the world, and we would be extremely fortunate if this enemy did not penetrate our ramparts.

"We're fighting for all that America means—for all that civilization means—and I say to you men a thing that could be said of no other group as small as this: The issue rests on your shoulders."

Winant Denies Visit Is for Peace

nant said he would be engaged day and night in conferences on the progress of the war and American aid.

Rumors of peace talks—impossible to confirm yet repeatedly heard—had accompanied Winant's arrival to this country last weekend.

Asked about them, Winant without hesitation said he had heard no peace talk at all. The most persistent of the reports has been that Adolf Hitler has made a "final offer" of peace to the British government, warning that if it is not accepted he will "wipe England off the map."

The envoy paid high tribute to the British people.

"They are a gallant people, a united people and have great morale," he said on emerging from Secretary Hull's office.

President Unusually Secretive

Winant conferred for more than an hour with President Roosevelt, lunched and talked more than two hours with Hopkins, lease-lend supervisor, then was closeted with Hull for more than an hour.

He plans to visit the White House and the State Department again today to continue presenting his report on conditions abroad.

President Roosevelt, at his press conference yesterday, was unusually secretive about Winant's visit. He refused even to say whether Winant had been instructed to return to Washington or had come of his own accord, although the State Department had made it known earlier that Winant is here at his own request.

But as Winant continued his round of official calls, it became apparent, as reported earlier, that the real inspiration of his visit is a burning desire to impress on the President and other officials what he considers to be Britain's dire need for more American aid.

What form of aid Winant is recommending was not known, but it was plain that he came personally to Washington from war-torn London—at his own request—to add force to his pleas for more help to the British.

Important decision appeared to be in the making as President Roosevelt held long talks with several of his key lieutenants.

Besides the talk with Winant, the President took lunch with Admiral E. J. King, commander of the Atlantic Fleet that is patrolling for British vessels. He also had a long chat with William S. Knudsen, OPM director.

comparison with other milksheds.

"I don't say they are overpaid," commented Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, "but just look at what the farmers are getting in other parts of the country: Two dollars a hundredweight, two and a half, even less than two dollars in some places.

"Those producers are having drought and labor troubles, too. They have to pay just as much for feed."

Schulte, a prominent figure in the House hearing of two years ago into alleged bootlegging of milk into this territory, condemned the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association for its opposition to extending 5-cent surplus milk to more needy families.

Only Small Fraction Eligible

The Post has found that only a small fraction of the poor, where no cow's milk whatever is consumed in the household, are eligible for the nickel quarts under the present tight regulations.

These rules would be relaxed to accommodate recipients of private charity and WPA workers but for unwillingness of the producers' group to accede.

Washington can keep milk prices down and guarantee a steady supply of low-cost milk to the certified needy through widening of the marketing area, said Schulte. That is, by broadening the boundaries now fixed in the Agriculture Department's marketing order so that producers at more distant points may sell their product in the Capital.

The order does not have to be amended to liberalize distribution of 5-cent milk to the needy or to institute a "penny program" in District schools which would guarantee that every underprivileged child would drink at least one-half pint a day.

However, if these desired reforms are not granted before the proposed hearing is conducted, it is a certainty that they will be strongly argued at that time.

If the association, which controls 90 per cent of the District's intake of fluid milk, persists in opposition to equitable distribution of low-cost surplus milk, it will have an abundance of pro arguments to refute.

London Is Facing Internal Discord

bombing?" run these questions. "Why could not we keep fighter aircraft in Crete?" "Why were not the airports, when we deserted them, rendered useless to the Germans?" "Why were the Germans, with far less time in Greece than we had, able to use Greek bases to pulverize our forces in Crete, whereas we could not do the same thing?"

There, perhaps, are many answers. Firstly, British planes were operating all over the Middle East while the Germans, as usual, concentrated theirs. Secondly, the British took a heavy toll of Germans and while so doing were able to mop up the nasty situation in Iraq.

But at the moment there is much criticism of the way the Cretan campaign has been handled. This criticism is enhanced by the fact that the British in Cairo put out optimistic statements about their ability to hold Crete indefinitely, and even now they are saying the same sort of thing about Cyprus, which appears to be in deadly danger.

It is true, conditions here are different entirely. But already, one can sense a trend of thought which thinks Britain's own preparations against invasion should be overhauled.

The British are obviously making their plans for Syria and already they have bombed German planes on French airports there. That Syria is regarded as hostile country certainly cannot be doubted. The British know quite well there has been extensive German infiltration into Syria.

There are probably good military and political reasons why the British have to go slow in Syria. If the Germans do beat the British into Syria, the government will have much explaining to do on military grounds. If they make their explanations on the political grounds that the French pro-consul for Africa, Gen. Maxime Weygand and the Vichy government must be propitiated, the explanation will not go over. The British are convinced that France is their enemy.

There is going to be a parliamentary inquest into the Crete business. The government may conceivably try to conduct this in secret session, but any such attempt will be resisted. The British are getting somewhat tired of not being told the whole truth.

BUILT EXTRA TOUGH WHERE TOUGHNESS COUNTS!

LOOK CLOSELY at the new Ford Trucks and you'll find that wherever extra strength means longer life or lower upkeep, there Ford engineers wrote PLUS.

Ford Trucks have big, tough frames. Springs are extra heavy. Ford hydraulic brakes have extra large drums; clutches are oversize. The Ford cooling system has extra capacity and a big, six-blade fan that is mounted direct on the crankshaft. Ford batteries have 17 plates, 120 ampere-hour capacity.

Ford engines have extra big, tough cast alloy crankshafts that wear almost three times as long as other types. Bearings, too, are oversize. There are long-lived, heat-resistant valve seat inserts on both intake and exhaust valves.

At critical points where stresses are great or where wear normally occurs, Ford Trucks are built extra tough. Let your local Ford dealer tell you how this extra toughness can cut your trucking costs. Let him show you what a Ford Truck will do on your job. Ask for an "on-your-job" test. House Group To Query U. S. Sales to Axis

By the Associated Press

The House Rules Committee voted yesterday to ask for official comment on assertions by Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, that huge supplies of United States war materials are to be licensed for shipment to the Axis powers and Russia.

Chairman Sabbath (Democrat), of Illinois, announced the committee would hear Gen. R. L. Maxwell, administrator of export control; representatives of the State Department, Coffee and a dozen other Congressmen tomorrow in executive session.

Coffee told the committee that 900,000 barrels of high-test gasoline had been shipped to Japan alone during March, 1941, and commented: "Now we face gasoline-less Sundays."

Shipments of materials of war, such as machine tools, oil and manufacturing equipment, to Russia "have increased 500 per cent recently," Coffee said, adding that some of such supplies were being sent to Germany and Italy.

Going Through Dummies

Coffee said in a statement that the materials were going to the Axis through "third parties" and "dummies." He urged the committee to permit immediate consideration on the floor of the House of his resolution (H.C.R. 30) calling for a Congressional investigation of the situation.

"American and even British Co., are selling supplies to the Axis against the spirit of our defense effort if not against the letter of the law," he said.

He said that a contract recently was reported to have been renewed under which United States and British oil companies were delivering millions of barrels of oil to Japan from the Netherlands East Indies. There also had been reports, he said, of oil exports from California to Japan and of oil deliveries by United States and British companies from South America and the West Indies to neutral African ports.

"Least of Our Dealings"

"Trade in war materials is the least of our dealings with Axis powers," Coffee said.

"American companies are participants with these powers in international patent pools, insurance pools, shipping pools, cartel agreements, gold purchases and financial arrangements whereby money, credit and intelligence are exchanged solely to the advantage of 'double-dealing patriots' in America and their Axis partners.

"An investigation of present conditions now may lead to measures which could shorten the war by several years. Indeed it might result in changing its entire outcome. On the other hand, an apathetic attitude towards the double-dealing situations which now exist may lead to disaster."

Army Contracts for 1,000 Big Long-Range Bombers

The Army yesterday awarded contracts totaling more than $320,000,000 for an estimated 1,000 long-range bombers.

Described by the War Department as being designed to further President Roosevelt's goal of a 500-per-month bomber production, the huge awards were all for the heavy, four-engine planes capable of flying 5,000 miles nonstop.

One award for $226,636,200 was made to Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, Calif., and the other, for $96,242,696, went to the Boeing Aircraft Co., of Seattle, Wash. Both contracts include spare parts.

The War Department said that many of the ships ordered from Consolidated probably would be assembled in the new Government-owned assembly plant at Fort Worth, Tex., to be operated by Consolidated, while many of the Boeing "flying fortresses" are expected to be assembled at the new Wichita (Kans.) assembly plant.

Senate Approves $185,119,813 Budget For Interior Dept.

The Senate voted $185,119,813 yesterday to carry on the work of the Interior Department for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The figure was $8,092,735 more than was approved by the House and $29,569,960 greater than was voted by Congress for the current year. It was $1,376,535 below the President's budget requests.

Included was $82,726,000 for Western reclamation projects.

Another major item was $22,988,500 for construction and maintenance costs on the Bonneville Dam, Pacific Northwest project from which defense officials hope to obtain new power supplies for production of aluminum and other critical materials.

Munro Fights New St. Louis Air Link

By the Associated Press

C. Bedell Munro, of Pittsburgh, president of the Pennsylvania Central Airlines, opposed before a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing yesterday applications of Eastern and Transcontinental and Western Airlines for authority to operate a new passenger service between St. Louis, Mo., and Washington, D. C.

Charles A. Gress, of Kansas City, Mo., assistant secretary-treasurer of T. W. A. contended the line could establish the new service "without one cent of expenditure for new equipment," through utilization of existing material.

Fever Quarantine At Fort Sheridan

Fort Sheridan, Ill., June 3 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Fred During, post executive officer, reported today that eight cases of scarlet fever had been found at Fort Sheridan.

Some of the cases, he added, were among selectees arriving at the post and others among the permanent personnel.

The recruit reception center at the fort, through which some 20,000 selectees have passed, has been quarantined. No new selectees will be sent to Fort Sheridan and no selectees already there will be sent to reception centers, Col. During said.

gation, but also an opportunity."

"Every man and womean in America wants to have a share in defending the Nation. Contributing to the U. S. O. is one way—one important way—in which all can serve."

At a dinner opening the New York campaign, Dewey stated: In 35 days we have now organized 1,038 communities for the U. S. O. in 48 States and in the District of Columbia. The response has been tremendous as soon as people have learned of the need."

Earlier in Washington nine local agencies were designated to receive part of the District's quota of $250,000 under the Nation-wide fund-raising campaign.

Agencies selected will receive $105,000 of the total contributions to provide sleeping places and recreational facilities for the thousands of service men who visit the Capital on weekend furloughs from nearby posts, the local U. S. O. announced.

The funds will be distributed among the following groups: The District Defense Council, Jewish Community Center, Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. (colored); Soldiers', Sailors' and Marines' Club; Catholic Charities of D. C., Salvation Army, Travelers' Aid Society, Y. M. C. A., and Y. W. C. A.

At a meeting in the Riggs National Bank Building, various unit leaders reported everything ready for the drive's opening today. These included Col. T. M. Spaulding, U. S. A., retired, executive officer of the governmental unit, and Harry L. Merrick, chairman of the general solicitation unit.

John A. Reilly, cochairman of the group solicitation unit, said he had divided his group into five areas. Four of these were "ready to go" and the fifth will be ready today, he reported.

Contributors were warned against giving money to persons who are not in possession of official U. S. O. receipts and who fail to produce credentials upon request.

At 10 this morning Lieut. William Exton, U. S. N., will address 500 key workers in the Department of Agriculture auditorium.

$55,000,000 D. C. Budget Asked

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, yesterday told the committee he hoped to spend $475,000 for street improvement not yet presented to Congress.

Water Fund Exhausted

Assuming Congress approves expenditures proposed by the District and includes Whitehurst's additional estimates, the city may expect a surplus of $81,178 in the highway fund and $6,530 in the general fund, it was reported.

On the other hand, it was learned that the subcommittee was informed that the District's water fund has been exhausted, chiefly because of necessary water main extensions in still swiftly growing sections of the city, and that it will be necessary for the District to dip into its reserves to meet cost of continued expansion.

Several years ago the Water Department invested approximately $2,000,000 reserves in bonds. Officials told the subcommittee that it would be necessary to sell these securities.

The effect of national defense expansion on city finances was demonstrated to the subcommittee by the fact that the final budget total was more than $3,500,000 over original estimates sent to Congress by President Roosevelt last January. If approved, the additional money would be spent for new schools, streets and water and sewer facilities.

In presenting their estimates to Congress, District officials have allowed $950,000 to cover unexpected expenditures. The figure is $500,000 over the amount normally allowed.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, and other militia officials yesterday asked the subcommittee for nearly $500,000 above budget estimates for equipment and landing field facilities for the Guard's 121st Observation Squadron. The regular estimates call for $1,000,000 for the National Guard Armory.

A dozen civic leaders gave the subcommittee their views of the budget in an afternoon session yesterday, and only one of them failed to advocate increased expenditures.

Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, protested proposed increase in the Metropolitan Police Force. The present force may be found to be adequate for the growing city, he maintained, if scout car crews are reduced from two men to one, if chauffeur, messenger and clerical duties in the police department are assigned to civilians rather than to trained police personnel and if the bulk of available policemen are assigned to duty at hours of the day when studies in other cities have shown the need for police to be the greatest.

Cleveland Offers Proposals

Washington I. Cleveland, representing the District division of the American Automobile Association, on the other hand, urged the subcommittee to provide the city with 92 additional full-time traffic policemen. He also advocated:

An additional judge for the Police Court and the creation of a full-time traffic court; increase in the appropriation for street lighting; funds for purchase of land for off-street parking facilities on the fringe of the business area, and more money for the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

"Although less than two-thirds of the traffic flows at night," Cleveland declared, "over 60 per cent of the fatal accidents occur between dusk and dawn. Inadequate lighting is the greatest single factor contributing to the traffic hazard on city streets."

Insufficient personnel and lack of equipment were blamed by Cleveland for the fact that in Washington it takes "the better part of two days and requires waits of five and six hours for a motorist to have his automobile titled, while in Richmond and Baltimore the same job can be completed in from 13 to 56 minutes."

Delays in reaching one traffic department window, he said, "are accentuated by the fact that messengers representing dealers and other preferred customers go directly to the head of the line and receive immediate service even though they may have several applications, while those in line continue to wait and the line grows in length."

Charles I. Stengel, former president of the American Federation of Government Employes, called the subcommittee's attention to low pay and personnel shortages in the public school custodial service. Walter Wasson, vice chairman of the education committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, asked for increased school funds.

Others heard by the subcommittee included Mrs. Robert A. McGee, Council of Social Agencies; Louis M. Fisher, Washington Youth Council; Mrs. Louis Sentman, Council of Social Agencies; Eleanor Nelson, United Federal Workers; George A. Warren, Mid-City Citizens Association; Dr. H. A. Garfield, Outdoor Cleanliness Association; Mrs. R. Thomas West, Crippled Children's Clinic, Gallinger Hospital; Daniel B. Lloyd, Manor Park Citizens Association; Mrs. J. R. Lyddane, District Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Allen L. Vories, District Society for Prevention of Blindness.

LANSBURGH'S AIR COOLED

6 CARS DIED in overheated Death Valley to prove that YOURS CAN LIVE LONG

NEW OIL A LIFE-GIVER. 5-QUART FILL—NONE ADDED—LASTED 13,398 MILES

—more than Twice the mileage averaged by 5 other big-name oils in fiendish Destruction Test... Impartial... Certified THIRST killed gold-feverish Forty-Niners in Death Valley. Down at Bad Water, undrinkable Death Valley puddle, you can stand today on our Hemisphere's bottom, 279 feet below sea level. And some of the worst heat on U. S. Weather Bureau records will be drying you up.

... America's hotspot! ... where 6 identical everyday cars were kept scorching along, testing 6 different motor oils, till 6 new engines were junk.

Every test condition was the same for all. Qualified authorities eyed every move—every mile. Speed: 57 miles an hour for all. The Official Referee had bought 5 of the oils right off the market; millions know their names well. The other oil was decidedly new—with a name you are sure to know better and better. This new oil that authentically delivered more than twice the mileage averaged by the others is named

CONOCO Nth MOTOR OIL
—Now on Sale here for Your Car

How could exactly one fill of this popular-priced Conoco N*th* oil keep lasting—without one added drop—for an official total of 13,398.8 miles? How could Conoco N*th* oil outlast them all by 5,683 miles or more, even outlasting one "rival" by 8,268 miles! ... Certified.

Conoco Nth oil is preserved by Life-Giving New Synthetic

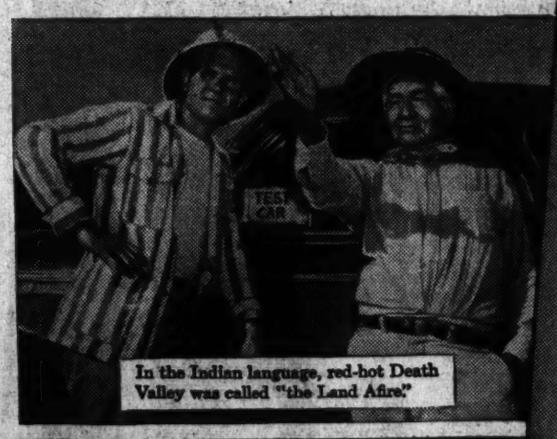
You know of vitamin synthetics... man-made ... replacing Nature's life-giving elements sacrificed in some modern food processing. Similarly, the latest refining methods steal some of Nature's best life-giving elements from motor oils. But more than making up for that today—in popular-priced Conoco N*th* oil—is a new synthetic called Thialkene inhibitor ... man-made by Conoco. U. S. Patent 2,218,132 tells what it is. And Death Valley showed what it does. It inhibits or checks the effect of foul leftovers always created by the normal explosions in every car engine. That's what makes Conoco N*th* stay more like its own good self ... helps the engine stay in shape—good way to save quarts.

A triumph matching Conoco OIL-PLATING

Another wondrous synthetic, remember—man-made and long used under the famed Germ Processed oil patent—still gives your engine OIL-PLATING. This lasting lubricant can't all drain down from inner parts though the car speeds or stands all day. Instead of allowing the engine to start dry and run raw till oil gets pumped up, this faithful OIL-PLATING stays plated up... on guard against wear in advance, all the while you use Conoco N*th* oil. And in addition you get the latest life-giving aid that foiled fearful Death Valley... that eclipsed other oils tested... that made one 5-quart fill of new Conoco N*th* oil last 13,398 miles. Certified.

That's like a mad extreme; over-stretching the limit—far beyond the utmost distance allowed for one fill of oil by authorities on the subject. You'd never make your own car stand any such proving-ground torture. Certainly not. But you want as wide a margin of engine protection and oil economy as your money will buy this Summer. On both counts Conoco N*th* oil has nailed up plain evidence. Ask today for Conoco N*th* at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Continental Oil Company—Pioneers in Bettering America's oil with Synthetics

IMPARTIAL The 6 new cars were broken-in alike, after engines had been taken apart for the Referee, to double-check uniformity. All cars were tuned alike. Same desert route for all. Even the handling was evened up by alternating drivers. One 5-quart fill per car and no more ... engines were under lock.



In the Indian language, red-hot Death Valley was called "the Land Afire."

CERTIFIED The Engine Destruction Test in Death Valley, testing Continental Oil Company's new motor oil and five other well-known advertised competitive brands, was closely observed by me and my assistants during the preparation of the test fleet and during the entire period of the test.

The five competitive brands were bought by us at retail and handled only under our observation. Closest possible uniformity was attained in the cars and driving conditions.

I hereby certify that the work and tests were thoroughly and fairly conducted. Engine Destruction occurred in each case at the mileage stated.

Sabotage

From now on the danger of sabotage will increase in direct proportion to the progress of our aggressive defense program. Obviously the Nazis cannot afford to let American goods and war materials get to Britain in ever-increasing quantities. Just as obviously their logical move will be to forestall the shipment of such goods and materials. Of this the Federal Bureau of Investigation is well aware, and it is constantly tightening its supervision of vital production centers. Last weekend a sabotage scare was the official reason given for special restrictive measures taken not only by the FBI but also by the military forces and by police in dozens of cities. Nevertheless, an unusual series of fires broke out all over the country.

Besides the Jersey City disaster, which was allegedly caused by a careless smoker, not by sabotage, there were oil and lumber conflagrations near the Norfolk Navy base. The plant of the Boeing Aircraft Co. in Vancouver suffered a $100,000 loss, which might have been considerably greater had not machinery in its assembly plant been moved away in time. And there were other fires from coast to coast which, if not as spectacular, may seem at first glance to fit into a scheme of wholesale sabotage. This is probably not the case, and the FBI is understandably deprecatory about such an assertion. At the same time, it should be realized that sabotage is usually difficult and sometimes impossible to detect. The best possible safeguard is relentless watch by the Government in cooperation with the civilian defense agencies which have been formed in most of the States. Even with increased protection, fires and explosions will occur, just as they always have. It will help neither the FBI nor the public peace of mind to characterize every major disaster as the work of agents provocateurs.

Darlan's Declaration

In the statement which Admiral Darlan issued Saturday after renewed consultation with the representatives in Paris of his German masters, the vice premier in the Vichy government went further than any French official has hitherto gone in aligning France unreservedly on the side of the Third Reich. His statement was not only a violent diatribe against Great Britain in the most acrid manner of Dr. Goebbels. It also contained a specific pledge to help Hitler win the war against France's late ally. "I intend to act," said Admiral Darlan, "in such a way that France will resume her place of power in Europe and the world. This means that she will participate in the construction of the new order. This means also that she will act to hasten the hour of peace, because, if British imperialism has need of war to destroy Europe, France has need of peace to exist and flourish as one of the essential parts of Europe."

This statement has the advantage of clearing the air. The world now knows where the men of Vichy stand. Such pledges as that given by Marshal Petain that France will "undertake nothing" against her former ally, such assurances as that given the American Government by Ambassador Henry-Haye that France intends to remain within the terms of the Franco-German armistice, are now revealed as disingenuous and meaningless. If Admiral Darlan's remarks have any meaning (and he, rather than the octogenarian marshal, is the real head of the Vichy government), France is prepared not only to kiss the rod that beat her but even to wield it against the nation to which her people must look, and still in overwhelming numbers do look, for their salvation.

For the United States Darlan's statement raises an issue that cannot be ignored. Hitlerism is our declared enemy to whose ultimate destruction we are now straining every nerve and prepared to take all necessary measures to bring about. Those who are the friends of our enemies obviously cannot be our friends. In the circumstances the time has come when we must ask whether Darlan's declaration represents the policy of Vichy France. If it does, there remains nothing but to undo the egregious blunder that was made when the Vichy regime was recognized as the legitimate government of France and to regard as the only true representatives of the French people those prepared to continue the struggle for France's freedom.

The Chief Justice

Charles Evans Hughes has written his name beside that of Marshall. This is the sober conclusion to which we come on reflecting upon the announcement of Mr. Hughes' retirement after 11 years as Chief Justice of the United States. Chief Justice Hughes has presided over the Supreme Court during what probably has been the most difficult period of its history. And through all the storms that have swept over the highest tribunal in the land and the third branch of our Government in the last eight years, he has upheld its prestige, its dignity and its standing in the confidence of the people.

For more than 35 years, indeed, Mr. Hughes has been a national figure. His crusades as an investigator in New York, his public service as Governor of that State, his race for the Presidency (which he missed, as someone has said, by a handshake—with Senator, then Governor, Hiram Johnson), and his career as Secretary of State in the postwar years constitute a public service which rates him among the elect of our great Americans. Still, it is as a jurist that Mr. Hughes has done his best work. In his first period on the Supreme Bench as an associate justice (and even before as crusader, lawyer and executive) he manifested a remarkable understanding of justice. His profound respect for facts and his faithful adherence to basic principles were evident in those early days on the bench. It was during his final assignment as Chief Justice, however, that his juridical statesmanship became a national asset.

These were the years when the New Deal threatened to make over our American system. Mr. Hughes was head of the third coordinate branch of the Government, and he was confronted by several major acts of Congress that were palpably unconstitutional. In spite of the depression, in spite of the popularity of the Administration which had sponsored these statutes, the Chief Justice and his court courageously set them aside. Mr. Hughes himself wrote the opinion invalidating the NRA. Many applauded him because they distrusted President Roosevelt's methods of seeking recovery. But the Chief Justice was concerned only with the preservation of the constitutional restraints forbidding Congress to grant the President "unfettered discretion to make whatever law he thinks may be needed or advisable."

Mr. Hughes, however, was not one of the extremists who would have carried this invalidation of legislative acts to the point of hamstringing the New Deal. When the most flagrant abuses of power were corrected, he led the majority in sustaining controversial acts of Congress. He wrote the opinion in the Jones & Laughlin case upholding the National Labor Relations Act. Some saw an about-face on the part of Chief Justice Hughes in this and later decisions. Undoubtedly they reflected a shift of emphasis. But in these instances Mr. Hughes clung to basic principles of American Government, with the salutary effect of avoiding extremes of judicial domination as well as executive domination. During the last few terms this same sense of disinterested justice has led him to join in several vigorous dissenting opinions.

During these tumultuous days the tribunal over which Mr. Hughes presided was a model of decorum in its relation with its partners in Government. The Chief Justice, to be sure, dealt the court bill a possibly fatal blow. He did this, however, simply by a recitation of facts as to the court's methods of operation and the status of its docket. Probably he also influenced the retirement of Justice Van Devanter with a view to weakening the case for the injection of "new blood" by legislation. That the court passed through this ordeal almost unscathed is the highest possible tribute to Mr. Hughes' judicial temperament. As he now prepares to retire, he has the good will of both factions in that struggle. We join in a hope that will be Nation-wide: that this great jurist may be granted the many pleasant years of retirement to which his long and towering career in his country's service entitles him.

Dress Rehearsal

It is clear now—if it was not before—that the British cause in Crete was lost on the third day of the fighting. Nazi air superiority forced the R. A. F. to withdraw to North African bases. The British have admitted as much, for the curt communique announcing the loss of Crete emphasized that the defenders could not be expected to operate indefinitely without more air support. But this is a dangerously simple explanation of the Cretan campaign. For Nazi numerical supremacy in the air is only part of the story. Nobody, least of all the British, can afford to discount the devilish ingenuity of the Nazis in making the best use of their air power. They dropped from the heavens in transport planes, in gliders, by parachutes. They painted themselves and their equipment green. They had parachutes of various colors to aid their ground organization. They used a nonpoisonous gas for concealment. They made skillful, as well as devastating, use of machine-gunning by the Stukas. They are even reported to have landed small tanks. Some of these tactics were expected, but it was the daring and superb organization of the invasion which set a new high in aerial warfare.

British authorities have been quoted as saying that if the Nazis were putting on a dress rehearsal in Crete as a prelude to invading the British Isles, such tactics would fail miserably. They probably would, now that the British are prepared to cope with them. But what consolation is there in this, even if it should be true? Surely the British have reason to appreciate that German successes have been the result of almost incredible power attacks, perfectly timed and organized and counting heavily on the element of surprise. Staff work probably is the Nazi "secret weapon." As one high military officer in our Army has said, "We knew all about the new weapons in the Nazi armory, but we did not know how they could all jell." They jelled on staff work. If the Nazis invade Britain, they may use some of their Cretan tactics, but they will certainly trot out a host of new tricks, and these will all be perfectly organized, no doubt. The British experience in resisting the Nazis in Crete will then come in handy. But this is no time to draw even small consolation from such experience. The outstanding fact is that unless the British can match wits with the Nazis, and outguess them, the job of defending the tight little isle will be difficult, indeed.

Lou Gehrig

The most remarkable fact about Henry Louis Gehrig has not been mentioned in his obituaries, and unfortunately will not get into the record book. He offers us an almost unique instance of a man who could rise to the very top of the most intensely competitive and specialized profession in the world without making a single enemy. There are few public figures in our own day of whom this could be said. There are few whose passing would be as widely and as genuinely mourned as is Gehrig's, even by those who knew of him only by hearsay. For a dozen years Gehrig moved in such a glare of publicity as few movie stars or politicians can ever hope for. And even yesterday the news of his death was enough to push the names of Hitler and Mussolini to the inside pages. Yet through all his fame and popularity the singular simplicity and sweetness of Gehrig's nature remained unchanged. And like all great men he was greater in tragedy than in triumph. His last two years on earth, spent in the shadow of a premature death, testified more eloquently to his strength and courage and character than all his prowess in the big league playing parks.

Like Wagner, Ruth and many another famous figure of baseball, Gehrig was of German stock. As a ballplayer, indeed, Gehrig had many traits and qualities that were formerly thought of as specially German—efficiency, single-hearted devotion to purpose, patient courage. Thus perhaps there is a moral as well as an irony in the circumstance that the name of this widely beloved American celebrity differed but slightly in sound from the name of a widely hated and feared German contemporary. But what a contrast between Gehrig and Goering! The furor teutonicus in Lou Gehrig was directed, to the vast delight of the crowds and the admiration of his rivals, only against inanimate baseballs. And this business of slapping them over the right-field walls gave Henry Louis Gehrig all the sense of power that he needed—a sense that Hermann Goering can achieve, if at all, only by slapping bombs upon cities full of women and children. So it is perhaps not too much to say that Gehrig represented the qualities of which Goering's are a terrible perversion—and that he proved the sickness of modern Germany to be not a racial but a philosophic disease.

U. S. O. Campaign

Starting today local residents can prove themselves part of the "army behind the Army." They can do so by supporting the fund-raising campaign of the United Service Organizations for Defense. The U. S. O. plan to raise $10,785,000 throughout the country to provide recreation centers for service men and defense workers. Washington's quota is $250,000, solicitation for which will follow the general lines of Community Chest campaigns.

In the past few weeks the need for such recreation centers in and around the District has been painfully apparent. Thousands of service men on leave have been pouring into Washington, particularly on weekends. Many of them have found it next to impossible to secure overnight accommodations. Welcome, therefore, is the news that $105,000 of Washington's quota will be used to provide adequate quarters—the remainder going into the national fund for maintenance of the centers. The advantages of proper recreational and social facilities are obvious. Local headquarters of the U. S. O. are at 1419 F Street Northwest.

THE LANTERN

My neighbor down his barn-yard lane,
From supper-table once again
To close a gate, to milk a cow,
Walks with a dusk-lit lantern now.

His light along the meadow glows.
I see him twinkle as he goes
Among the fireflies, faint and far,
A candle-beam, an earth-bound star.

Hitler History

There is one sentence in Mark Sullivan's column in The Sunday Post of Sunday, June 1, which seems to answer the question posed therein—as to our going to war with Hitler. I quote: "History will know more about it than any of us now can."

We have three years of Adolf Hitler's history to judge the immediate future by, if his present activities continue, in the direction he is very positively headed.

Can anyone read that history and believe Hitler is going to change his mind? Step by step he has ravaged nation after nation, brutally, ruthlessly. With his successes he has grown more and more determined. Can anyone doubt that he intends fully to carry out his proposed world domination?

Yes, Mr. Sullivan, history will tell us—and we have three years of Hitler history to study, and be guided by.

It is up to the United States to stop Hitler—and stop him now. We do not need to send our boys, as foot soldiers, into the war. There are thousands of airmen and Navy boys, who are anxiously waiting the word to show Mr. Hitler.

We have enough of history. Let's go!

Meaning Of Sacrifice

Thinking that this might interest your readers, as an example of the spirit of Britain, I am sending in a paragraph from a letter just received from Mrs. Perrine Moncrieff, eminent New Zealand ornithologist and musician.

"We look toward you these days and feel so glad that America is with Britain in her fight for freedom, to be able to live without the shadow of the Gestapo or Ogpu over the individual. Could anything be more ghastly? When I think what it means, I am glad that our son is doing his bit. I am very sorry for parents whose sons have not heard the call; for in after years, come what may, their conscience can never be free from the stain of selfishness. For our lad himself—well, there are worse things than dying for the right of others to live."

This son is her only child.

Daylight Saving

What's all this business about daylight-saving time being inconvenient? A lot of people seem to fear that daylight-saving is going to upset their daily routine and deprive them of sleep in some diabolical fashion.

Daylight-saving time is really so beautifully simple and convenient that it is a pity that some people make it complicated and confused in their minds. To put the system into effect, all timepieces are, of course, set ahead an hour. Now comes the part that seems to be so insuperably difficult for some people; it is now necessary, only that people stop worrying their little heads about the fact that the clocks have been set ahead an hour. Sure, we know they have. You don't have to tell us that.

The clocks under daylight-saving time tell the time in general use by community, just as they do when other systems of time are in general use. A man who at present gets up at 7, starts work at 9, eats dinner at 6 and goes to bead at 11, will normally do just the same after the change to daylight-saving time has been made; the time he goes by in each case will of course be the kind of time in general use by the community during the particular period. The fact that the sun isn't so bright at 7 a. m. daylight time as it is at 7 a. m. standard time should make people sleep better.

Equal Opportunity

The Pleasant Plains Civic Association commends The Washington Post on the fair-minded attitude recently assumed in its policies and expressions of interracial situations. We especially refer to a recent editorial on the discrimination against the employment of Negroes as practiced by the Federal Government and by firms having national defense contracts with the Federal Government—which editorial was followed by an unusually fine and timely article by your columnist, Ernest Lindley; also by an article by Westbrook Pegler on certain aspects of the recent lynching of a Negro in the State of Florida.

It is through such courageous and sane expressions as these that Americans become increasingly cognizant of the fallacies of our preparing presumably for the defense of democracy while—through the denial and destruction of basic human rights—we restrict and deny democracy to a tenth of the Nation's populace.

Yours for a democracy of equal opportunity, justice and good-will . . . a living reality for all the people within its borders.

JEROME B. OSBORNE.
Washington, June 2. Secretary.

Praise For Mr. Lippmann

The ideals of Walter Lippmann as expressed in his column today, May 31, on the policy the United States should follow in the World War are those of a statesman and diplomat of the first rank. I consider Mr. Lippmann one of the soundest thinkers and brainiest writers the newspapers of this country afford. The Post is to be congratulated on having his services as a columnist.

The President can do no better than to follow the course mapped out by him in this article.

First To Cry

There are those who, day after day, endeavor to sully the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, but are, however, the first to cry aloud when their liberties and freedom are invaded, and will, like hypocrites, throw out their chests and remind their transgressors of their guaranteed rights under the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence.

Reply To The America First Committee

I recently received a communication from the America First Committee, requesting me to become a member, and to assist them financially. I have replied as follows, and believe same may be of interest to you and your readers:

"In your communication requesting me to become a member of the America First Committee and to contribute funds for its maintenance, you emphasize in huge letters the fact that 83 per cent of our American people DO NOT WANT WAR.

"Now, as a matter of fact, nobody in his common senses wants war—if you put the question bluntly to the country, 'DO YOU WANT WAR?' you might as well raise your percentage to 100.

"However, there are some things worse than war, and more important than physical safety—if life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness mean anything. But, leaving aside our sense of duty and conscience, let us look at the matter from a purely selfish point of view.

"It is altogether a matter of presenting the case to the people in a manner that is fair. If you should say to the people of this country, 'These are the extreme possibilities as well as the probabilities:

1. Hitler and his Axis friends are on record as battling for world domination and his hatred toward this country is only second to that which he feels toward England.

2. Hitler has adroitly maneuvered to isolate country after country, before attacking, and if England falls, the United States would be absolutely isolated—alone and friendless in a Nazi-dominated world—with an almost mathematical certainty of having eventually to battle him or be strangulated economically.

3. The present war has demonstrated that mechanized superiority is the controlling factor in winning battles—bravery of a country's people alone being negligible, without proper mechanical equipment. The United States having the greatest possible facilities in the world for production of mechanized equipment, does your common sense allow you to believe for a moment that Hitler, astute and ruthless as he has shown himself to be, would for a moment permit us to continue to produce for years, mechanized war equipment that we might use ourselves against him, or make available to other enslaved countries who might endeavor to free themselves?

4. If England should fall or we allowed her to fall, her immense shipbuilding facilities, as well as those of France, Germany, Japan and other dominated countries could, under control of Germany, outbuild the United States in ships in a ratio of 2 to 1 (according to experts), which would mean eventually the absolute control of the seas and commerce. If the Axis should win this war, no agreement with them as to disarmament or anything else would be worth the paper it is written on.

5. 'Admitting as a fact for argument's sake, that Hitler would or could neither land nor attack us here on our native soil for some years—if we permitted England to fall, with the consequent domination of the seas by the Axis in conjunction with Japan, with full access to raw materials—how long do you suppose it would be before they destroyed the Panama Canal or attacked some South American country, compelling us through our pledged word to them, or our adherence to the Monroe Doctrine, to engage the Axis away from home to our great disadvantage and in two oceans at once?

'Even if we did not wish to fight—through their propaganda, hatred, jealousy and economic attacks, they would eventually so humiliate us that if we had only the backbone of a rabbit we would resent it with arms—war.'

'Suppose you or your committee or the Gallup Poll put a fair and proper questionnaire to the American people—suppose you say, 'Although none of us want war, still under the alternatives (as enumerated and based on the foregoing paragraphs 1, 2, 3, 4, 5), do you or do you not prefer war, if decided at the proper time by the President of the United States?

'If we know the character and spirit of the American people, you will find that the answer and percentage in the affirmative will astound you and your committee. As a matter of fact, in this connection I might quote from the newsmagazine Time (May 5, 1941) the result of the Gallup Poll on the following question:

"'If it appeared certain there was no other way to defeat Germany and Italy except for the United States to go to war against them, would you be in favor of the United States going into the war?

'Answer: Would favor war . . . 68%
Would oppose war . 24
Undecided 8

"Needless to say, I can neither join your committee nor contribute toward its maintenance."

The Post Impressionist

Acquisitive Instincts

The universal human urge which psychologists dignify as the "acquisitive instinct" has various forms and shades of expression.

There are instances in which it takes the form of collecting pieces of string, paper bags, buttons, and all sorts of worthless oddments. Adherents to this form are cluttery individuals with a deficient sense of material values. Theirs is a genuine collectors' passion prostituted by its inadequate media of expression. Generally they don't have any valid claim to sentiment or even to household economy as their driving force. The only defense of their ever-increasing miscellany is an ominous, propnetic repetition that there's sure to come a time when supply and demand will meet in the grab bag. A faint odor of old copy book platitudes clings to their tireless endeavors.

Then there's the sentimental hoarder preserving fragments of poignant memory in old letters, pictures, clippings, faded bouquets, and —yes, sir, locks of hair. This is a rapdily diminishing attic type for whom stark time is gently shrouded in dusty cobwebs, a haunting fragrance of lavender, and the soothing patter of rain on the roof. An elusive aura of blighted romance and deep mystery goes with sentimental hoarding.

A more casual type is the general souvenir collector. Here the emphasis is on collecting for its own sake rather than on a fine discrimination in choosing. It is in fact a sort of permanent scavenger hunt; the pride of the collection is its diversity. It aims to commemorate high points, loosely and liberally defined, and to set them off sharply from the humdrum of everyday existence. A weekend without its yield of souvenirs has somehow missed its mark, and the success of a summer vacation is measurable in terms of memory pieces. Young things, especially, treasure the odd snatches of holiday history written in sea shells, pebbles, casual jewelry from the dime stores of distant cities, ash trays, penholders, bookmarks, what-not pieces of every conceivable variety, anything and everything. An unwritten law of exchange exists among small groups; you not only record your own vacation but you also vicariously share the holidays of your friends.

Stamp collectors are serious, energetic persons with orderly methods of procedure. They develop a stamp consciousness with tracks, leaving behind them wherever they go a trail of mutilated envelopes. They organize clubs, present exhibits, and generally promote publicity with more than amateur skill. They study their markets for exchanges profitable in a sense more subtle than mere cash values. To the uninitiated they convey impressions of their considerable importance.

The autograph collector has to manipulate a more difficult source of supply, for his subjects, human beings, are often of a temperamental turn. There are no rules except widely general ones, of which persistence heads the list. Each autographer must be dealt with on his own terms. It is well to study your victim and decide on the best method of approach. If that fails, try your next best and so on until you have emptied your bag of tricks. As a last humiliating resort, you may be able to buy or obtain the coveted autograph by exchange with another collector but this reduces the achievement value.

The collection of antiques on an amateur level is a pursuit which gains momentum in its course. One thing leads to another and, in the advanced stages, everything leads surely to auctions and yet more auctions. So great is the passion for the dust of centuries, that the manufacturers must copy quaint old pieces and simulate the ravages of time by artificial means.

A purposeful collector with special techniques is the co-ed with a yen for boys' photographs and, eventually, a fraternity pin. Her method is forthright; she marks her victim, stakes her claim, and uses her powers of feminine persuasion. That's all there is to it—except a "certain something."

There are individuals whose innate acquisitiveness takes a one-track, lifelong direction of obtaining and holding on to money. With profound indifference for the material potentialities of a symbol they lay hold on the symbol itself in a sort of blind reverence. In extreme instances individuals have suffered hunger, illness, and even death rather than diminish the precious hoard by a few dollars. But the average miser is more moderate; he will, however grudgingly, provide for himself the stark necessaries in the interest of effectively following his one consuming pursuit, if for no other reason. This passion for hoarding money is comparatively uncommon; the other extreme is more consistently in evidence. It may intermittently possess many of us, nearly all perhaps, but only for the true miser is its fascination long sustained. The pseudo-miser vacillates uncertainly between hoarding and prodigality, and defies classification under either heading.

Staid and gentle ladies are apt to direct their acquisitive instincts toward china—dainty, fragile vases, lovely intimate tea sets and the like. Beauty is to them an inspiration, a sort of soul food, and their collections are esthetically meaningful, even on the amateur level.

Earthy nature lovers, especially suburbanites, often take to collecting plants. The passion for plants grows as well as the plants themselves as the project is semi-self-perpetuating, and the bungalow is threatened with obscurity. Shrubs, bluebells, and perennials, all called affectionately by their first names, stand in defiant disorder on the lawn, among objects of much pruning and final pampering. With the coming of spring they burst into a triumphant chorus of color. The collector, always with hoe, rake, or watering can, flits about in a state of near ecstasy as though in a conspiracy with the gentle forces of nature.

For those super-acquisitives, impatient of half measures, other self-accelerating collections are recommended, such as rabbits and guppies. FLORENCE JANSSON.

Fluid Tactics

Distinguishing Policy And Methods

THE CONFUSION which is still evident concerning the meaning of the President's fireside chat seems to be due largely to a failure to distinguish between policy and methods.

LINDLEY

As to policy the President stated our relationship, as he sees it, to what has become a world war. He set forth clearly what he considers it necessary for us to do in the interest of our own security. We must defend the approaches to the Western Hemisphere. We must see that munitions and food arrive in England and at other theaters of war. We will increase our aid to China.

We will protect American merchant ships anywhere on the seas that we decide to send them.

The President went farther. He indicated not only how we hope to keep the war bottled up on the far continents, but how, in his belief, the destruction of the Nazi regime can be brought about by measures which, on our part, are essentially defensive.

ALL THIS WAS clearly set forth. What he did not reveal was the detailed military and naval measures by which he intends to support his policy. He did not state whether our naval patrol in the North Atlantic extends, or will extend, to mid-Atlantic, or to 1,000 miles from British ports, or to 500 miles from British ports, or all the way into them. He did not say whether our patrols will be severely limited to reporting what they see, or whether they will be authorized, for example, to use their own judgment about dropping depth bombs on menacing submarines.

He did not say we would occupy Dakar if the French become tools of the Nazis, which they seem about to do. He did not say we would occupy the Cape Verde Islands or the Azores or the Canaries—all or any of them—although he strongly hinted that we would under certain conditions.

These are all subordinate questions. Many of them the President cannot answer. He must take very specific action in the light of all the circumstances at the moment. If Portugal were overrun by the Nazis, it might seem wise to occupy the Azores, but not the Cape Verde Islands, or vice versa. Nor can the President state how far it may be necessary to extend our North Atlantic patrol, or whether shooting will result. And insofar as he already has a pretty good idea of the answers, he might injure their effectiveness by talking about them.

All matters of tactics must be left fluid.

IT IS PLAIN, however, that the President does not intend to relieve the British of the responsibility of doing what they are able to do. The plight in which the British now find themselves is due chiefly to their own errors and omissions over 20 years. It is their war more than ours. Without us they would be lost; if they win it will be because our aid is effective. But the President has not lost sight of the difference between the British stake and our own.

With the aid of planes sent from this country, and of British naval ships repaired in our shipyards, the British may be able to protect shipping over the last 800 miles of the Atlantic route from North America to British ports. If they cannot, in the President's opinion, then we will go farther than we have gone. That is the plain implication of his fireside speech.

Whether shooting results is chiefly up to the Nazis. So far as can be learned, the President has not yet authorized our patrol craft to do anything except watch and report. If attacked, presumably they would reply; and the wraps would be off so far as shooting on the seas or in the air over it go.

THE PRESIDENT warned that a Nazi movement toward West Africa or the Atlantic islands would be construed by us as an attack on the Western Hemisphere. And he declared that we will decide for ourselves what other actions constitute an attack.

The need for fluidity in tactics is illustrated also by the uncertain role of France. Who can say what our relationship to France and its colonies may be a week or a month hence? We have sought to encourage and enable the Vichy government to abide strictly by the terms of the Nazi-French armistice. But it looks now as if Petain, under the influence of Admiral Darlan, had begun to cave in. We are still trying to salvage something through Gen. Weygand in North Africa, but without too much hope.

TOMORROW or a week from now it may be necessary to recognize that the Vichy government has become, in fact, an ally or active vassal of Hitler, not to be distinguished in role from Italy, and therefore to be treated as an enemy belligerent.

In the Far East, likewise, our tactics depend on the behavior of Japan. But our policy has been, and remains, clear: to discourage the Japanese from moving southward in the Pacific. If this policy cannot be attained by the means we have pursued, it may be necessary to resort to blockade, naval warfare, and even incendiary bombing raids on Japanese cities.

The President has said clearly all, or almost all, that anyone in his position can say. He has defined our policy. Neither he nor anyone else can be sure what methods may be necessary to support it.

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips

It Won't Be Long Now

The American public is to be put to a test that will strike it as an ordeal of ordeals. It is going to be ordered to rest on Sunday!

It is going to be required to act civilized, well poised and contented one day a week without any contacts with hot dogs, barbecue sandwiches, traffic lights or ambulances.

For one whole day a week shoes and arch supporters are to come back into the American way of life as important assets.

When Secretary Ickes put out that hint of gasless Sundays the other day he was just softening up the public for the official restrictions. So start learning how to enjoy yourself even when not being crowded off a highway!

It is going to come hard at first, but grandpa and grandma managed to keep sane all day Sunday. If they could spend the Sabbath without a cinder in their eyes, mustard on their chins and a traffic summons in their hands, so can you.

They didn't have to leave home early every Sunday just for the ordeal of having to fight their way back. They knew the difference between pleasure and punishment.

The war is fairly certain to put a crimp in that other major necessity, the colored electric light. Neon signs are to be curbed even if the public is compelled to guess which is the drug store and which is the Hawaiian papaya drink stand.

The Great White Ways and Manda Lanes will have to douse the glim. This won't be the hardship that it might seem. There are so many signs in such chaotic disorder today that the Shubert shows, the liver pills, the M. G. M. pictures and the bourbon whiskeys are all mixed up in the public mind anyhow.

You can stand on Broadway these nights and never be positive whether Zorina is a musical comedy star or a hair remover. And it is a wise onlooker who can be sure that Ethel Merman after meals will not cure indigestion and the big musical comedy hit of the season is not Fantasia's Beer made by the Camel that never lost its touch.

These blackouts will be tough on screen stars and cigarettes, beer stubes and all drug stores specializing in hardware, lumber, bathing equipment and soups.

We may see night baseball abandoned, too. But it is only the beginning if we really get into war.

Only one thing remains to be done to indicate we are close to war: there has been no decree changing the name of sauerkraut to Liberty Cabbage.

The Tendency Here

ONLY THE FEW, or many, Nazi-Fascists among us will like this, but it seems to me that in an awkward, uncertain way we have been edging over toward some new ism of our own, an ism, nameless as yet and unformulated, which when fully developed will give us much in common with our enemies. Collectivism is not a sufficient name for it, and Nazilism and Communism are inappropriate. But our system and the freedoms which have thrived under that system, and no other, have been based on free enterprise, and we certainly have renounced that in a belief that only thus could we protect the workers from the soulless corporation.

So in many ways we have hampered enterprises with regulation, taxes, strict and onerous accountability and official and popular hostility and, at the same time, have officially encouraged the development of vast blocs of power under a few privileged individuals known as labor leaders. They control, among them, 8,000,000 or 9,000,000 pairs of hands, but have no responsibility to the Government or the Nation and little responsibility to the workers.

THEY ARE NOT even required to account for the moneys which they collect, much of it under duress, and they discourage their subjects from appealing to the public courts for their rights. In many cases the subjects are forbidden to do so, under terrible penalties assessed by tribunals which are simply kangaroo courts. They have the power to blockade the whole national defense effort to manufacture weapons of defense and have used this power in considerable part during the year of this emergency, but they are absolutely free of regulation and immune to punishment.

If the liberties of Americans flow out of the free system, then the way to preserve those liberties is to restore that system, but we know that will not be done because business, unregulated, runs wild. Even businessmen believe in regulation now, and some of them, who have to employ large numbers of, so to speak, faceless, impersonal strangers, are glad to deal with unions which can guarantee to supply them with hands to do the work at agreed rates of pay and under agreed conditions. They prefer not to have to deal with individual workers at all.

However, we have plainly seen that the union chiefs, being under no legal regulation themselves, cannot deliver their people or keep them in line; so to equalize matters we shall presently have to adopt legislation to correct this defect. That is sure to come, and when it does happen, both enterprise and labor will be controlled by the Federal Government. That is the way it is done in Italy, Germany and Russia, and after this war, if we are not cut up among the Axis powers, with Florida reverting to Spain, Louisiana to France, the Southwest to Mexico, and so forth, we will have to do something of the kind ourselves or perish of inefficiency and waste, in competition with the other side.

EFFICIENTLY regulated, American industry and labor could produce much more of everything for everybody, and the smart politicians of the future, perhaps the "new leader" for whom Charles Lindbergh yearns, would attract the people to the new plan by making it possible for them to travel cheaply and live well in beautiful vacation places in this wonderful country, under Government auspices. He could promise lots of presents.

But such regulation would pass the compulsion on down to the individual. He would be protected from exploitation and given presents, but in return he would have to submit to taxes and curtailments of his freedom. He would have to work, if well, wherever his kind of skill was needed and without stalling on the job. His union dues would go into a Government pot for labor's benefit, and a young man wanting to be a taxidermist might be compelled to learn plumbing instead if there were too many taxidermists and not enough plumbers.

You can't regulate industry and not regulate people, and I am afraid we are coming to that, although the American people may be able to maintain freedom of religion and expression and of the ballot under such a system. I think we have been tending in this direction for some years, but have lacked the candor to admit as much even to ourselves.

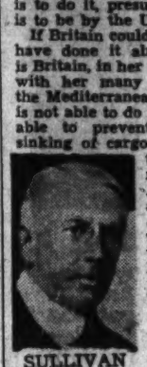
Insuring Delivery

By Mark Sullivan

How To Get Supplies To Britain

THE PRESIDENT has declared that the supplies we are making for Britain will be delivered to Britain—"This can be done; it must be done; it will be done." While these words do not say who is to do it, presumably the doing is to be by the United States.

If Britain could do it, she would have done it already. The fact is Britain, in her present situation, with her many engagements in the Mediterranean and elsewhere, is not able to do it. Britain is not able to prevent the wholesale sinking of cargo ships, including those which carry supplies from America to Britain. The sinkings of cargo ships by the Nazis are very heavy; so heavy as to threaten Britain's life. The sinkings are at a rate three times the rate of new construction by Britain, and twice the rate of new construction by Britain and the United States combined.



SULLIVAN

IF THE SINKING of cargo ships is to be prevented, if delivery of supplies from us to Britain is to be assured, it must be done by help from us. At present we are giving a slight and indirect help by patrol. That is, vessels and planes from our Navy scout up and down the Atlantic, watching for Nazi submarines, surface raiders and planes. When they sight a Nazi attacker, they send out warning. The warning is heard by the British, who thereupon attack the Nazi attacker. But this kind of help from us is not enough—the proof is that the sinkings are not checked. Our help must be greater than this, if Mr. Roosevelt's declaration is to be lived up to. At the moment of this writing, no other form of help has been publicly announced or put in effect.

If we are to insure the delivery of supplies made by us to Britain—that is, insure the safety of ships carrying those supplies—there are several possible methods. One, long discussed, would be to strengthen Britain's navy by turning over to her vessels and bombing planes from our Navy. This could be done, just as we ten months ago turned over to Britain 50 destroyers from our Navy. But to this method there are several objections. One is time—it takes time for British crews to learn to operate vessels from our Navy. Also Britain does not have crews to spare. Also, our Navy people do not like the idea of outright transfer of our vessels to the British. Our Navy people are obliged to remember there is always the chance Britain may lose the war—in which case we might be left without vessels which in such a condition we would greatly need.

THE DIRECT and simple method would be for us to add our Navy to Britain's—that is, send vessels and planes from our Navy with American crews and under the American flag, to protect cargo vessels, precisely as the British now protect them. But this method has dynamite in it. If a cargo ship were being protected by an American naval vessel, some German submarine or surface raider or plane would almost certainly see and attack the cargo ship. With absolute certainty, the American naval vessel would attack the Nazi attacker. That would be shooting; that would be war.

A suggested method is that our supplies to Britain should be carried in American ships. If this were done—so the suggestion holds—it would be proper for the American ships to be protected by the American Navy. But while we might think this proper, the Nazis might not. Indeed the Nazis have said openly that they would attack such ships.

MOREOVER, this method would run counter to our neutrality law—which forbids American shipowners to send ships to belligerent ports or into combat zones. As a way of getting around the neutrality law, it has been suggested that cargo ships under private ownership should be seized by our Government, and then used to carry supplies to Britain. That might get around the neutrality law—but it would increase, rather than diminish, the likelihood of war. For the Nazis would no more hesitate to attack a Government-owned cargo ship than a privately owned one.

Methods and devices not here mentioned may be under consideration by the President and his naval advisers. It is difficult to imagine any way of insuring delivery of supplies from us to Britain that does not include risk of shooting, risk of war.

CORRECTION: This column last week, with many other newspaper and radio reports, said that the President's special press conference on May 28 was called for the purpose of amplifying and clarifying what he had said in his speech the preceding night, May 27. The fact is, the principal reason for calling that special press conference was that the President expected to be at Hyde Park on the day of the next ensuing regular conference. For the mistaken impression newspaper and radio reporters had, there is an explanation; nobody was to blame. The matter is not seriously important; it is mentioned here mainly because the period we are living in will be studied with fly-speck minuteness by future historians. They would be misled if they read the newspapers of May 29 and thereabouts, including this column, without benefit of the present correction.

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment for Convoys Levels Off at 52%; 40% Are Opposed, 8% Are Undecided

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 3.—The latest public opinion study on the question of using the American Navy to guard ships going to Britain shows that, up to the time of the President's fireside chat at least, the arguments of non-interventionists such as Senators Nye and Wheeler and Col. Lindbergh apparently halted the rise of national sentiment in favor of naval escorts in the Atlantic.

While the effect of the President's fireside broadcast remains to be measured in a survey now under way, a study virtually completed at the time of the broadcast shows that 52 per cent of those questioned by the Institute favor using the Navy to guard ships crossing to England, while 40 per cent are opposed and the rest undecided. This vote is virtually the same as the vote in a similar poll in mid-May, indicating no increase in convoy sentiment during the fortnight.

However, the latest results do represent an increase in sentiment for naval escorts since late April, as the following trend indicates:

"Should the United States Navy be used to guard ships carrying war materials to Britain?"

	Yes	No	Undecided
April 22	41%	50%	9%
May 21	52	41	7
Today	52	40	8

If the voters who are undecided are excluded from the tabulation of today's results, those who have definite opinions would divide 56 per cent in favor of convoying, 44 per cent opposed.

Interviewing in the survey was conducted during the period May 22-30, the bulk of it being completed before the President's fireside chat.

In the light of the past two years it is apparent that the American people have shifted their thinking on the whole question of freedom of the seas to a remarkable degree. When the war began, just 21 months ago today, an Institute survey found that 84 per cent—an overwhelming majority—wanted American ships to keep out of the war zone. This was certainly an abridgment—although a wholly voluntary abridgment — of the free seas principle.

Yet today the majority of voters are willing to go so far as to convoy with our Navy any ships carrying American goods to the British war zone.

Here is how the five States with the largest population voted on the question of using the Navy to guard or convoy ships going to Britain:

	Favor	Oppose	Undecided
N. Y.	50%	44%	6%
Penn.	52	41	7
Illinois	46	48	6
Ohio	48	43	9
Calif.	50	44	6

Because the size of sample (number of persons interviewed) is necessarily smaller for any one State than for the Nation as a whole, there is a larger probable error due to size of sample in the above figures than in the national results.

In the national results the error due to size of sample is less than 2%, which means that if all the Nation's voters had been polled, the chances are 95 in 100 that the results would not have varied by more than 2 per cent from the results of today's survey. In the case of the five States above, the chances are 95 in 100 that the error due to size of sample will not exceed 4.5 per cent.

German Incident?

ALL THE PRESIDENT'S recent utterances have been made mysterious by a basic contradiction. He says that he means to act, yet he does not act, and in the next breath even seems to foreclose important avenues of action. The contradiction is easy to explain, however, once it is understood that the immediate future depends on the answer to a simple question. Will the President continue determined to force the Germans to fire the first shot?

This determination of the President's is apparently the most important of the psychological obstacles he must surmount before he can commit the United States to full fighting partnership with Britain. Of course, there are other obstacles. There is his desire not to move until the country is fully united behind him, from which his wish to force the Germans to give him a pretext for action no doubt arises. There are the various commitments and semicommitments he has made in the last year, against convoying, against taking the country into war, and so forth. Strangely enough, considering earlier trends of Constitutional interpretation at the White House, there is even said to be some fear in his mind that if he orders action without requesting a prior declaration of war from Congress, he will be transgressing his Constitutional prerogatives as Commander in Chief.

BUT ACCORDING to men qualified to speak with authority, these other obstacles are now entirely secondary. Events have made them so. As Ambassador John G. Winant has reported to the President, and all his ablest advisers here have been telling him for weeks, he has the choice between acting now or waiting until it may be too late. If he delays too long, neither public opinion nor his own record nor his Constitutional prerogatives will matter a particle. The policy which he has been vigorously prosecuting for the last two years will be utterly defeated. He will find his niche in history as one of the great failures. And if German victory is as inimical as he and most other informed men suppose, the country will soon be overtaken by catastrophe.

These are obvious facts, assuming the President's advisers are correct in their judgment of the urgency of the war situation. In the light of them, it is easy to see why all the secondary obstacles to action have ceased to be really important. Giving due weight to the President's penchant for doing a job the smart way, it is also easy to see why the primary obstacle remains to be surmounted. If the Germans can only be persuaded to shoot first, then they will have the major share of responsibility for what follows. That is what appears to be in the President's mind.

FURTHERMORE, it seems to have coexisted in the President's mind with recognition of the need for prompt action for some time past. As long as two months ago he acknowledged to the intimates whom he invited to join him on his yachting holiday after passage of the lend-lease bill that the war could not be won without American intervention. At the same time he said that he could not intervene without an incident to give him the signal.

The two thoughts, mutually inconsistent though they may seem, still coexist in his mind today. In the past weeks he has been repeatedly urged to order immediate action. He has been warned that to delay was to court disaster. He has been able to act, for all the necessary preparations for meeting the German threat in the Battle of the Atlantic have at last been completed. Yet he has not acted, because he hopes to drive the Germans into shooting first.

Perhaps, instead of depending on one simple question, the future may depend on two. The men around the President are now united in attempting to persuade him to order action out of hand, without waiting for a pretext. If they fail, if the President's determination is not weakened by the remorseless logic of events, then a second question will have to be anwered. Will the President's plan succeed?

THE PROBLEM was mentioned in this space in a recent discussion of the Atlantic patrol, in which it was pointed out that the President and the men around him privately hope the patrol will produce an incident. The patrol is by no means the only expedient, moreover, which the President has at his disposal. He can take several additional measures to meet the German threat in the Atlantic, perhaps even ordering the Navy to undertake the task of active shipping protection, but leaving it to the Germans to resist. He can order preventive occupation of the Atlantic bases, both north and south. It will be as disagreeable to the Germans to find the Americans instead of the British in Iceland, as to find the Americans at Dakar.

But the difficulty with all these expedients, and with the President basic plan still remains. Because this country has taken each step too late, Britain has now been so weakened that even if the goods are delivered, the British have too little recuperative power to bear the brunt of the fighting alone.

Because this country's active intervention would mean so much, it is to Germany's advantage to delay it as long as possible, and no one can doubt the German high command will do everything possible to avoid shooting first. The President's plan leaves the initiative to Germany, which is a mode of procedure that has cursed the democracies from the start of the war. And if the President sticks to this plan and the plan fails, the failure will deeply affect not only the immediate future but also the fate of this country.

Syria And Cyprus

By Barnet Nover

The Developing Struggle

THE SEA of Candia, which separates Crete from the Grecian mainland, is only around 60 miles wide at its narrowest point. The widest gap—that between Suda Bay and Athens—is only 165 miles. But this is less than half the distance between Crete and the nearest British air bases in Egypt.

NOVER

This disadvantage of distance the British were never able to overcome in the Battle of Crete. It told on them from the very start. By the third day the R. A. F. had to be withdrawn from Crete to prevent complete destruction on the ground by Nazi dive bombers. From then on the Nazis had complete and unchallenged mastery of the air over the island, a circumstance that played the determining part in the final outcome.

THIS FACTOR of distance must be considered in estimating Britain's chances of surviving the new onslaught which Hitler is preparing against her in the Eastern Mediterranean.

An assault on Cyprus, for instance, of the kind and magnitude which ultimately led to the conquest of Crete, would find the Nazis lacking the advantage they had in the Cretan struggle. The island of Rhodes, which is in Italian hands, is almost 300 miles by air from Cyprus. The distance from Crete is even greater. On the other hand, the nearest British air bases in Palestine are only about 100 miles away.

That is why it is really putting the cart before the horse to say, as some have done, that the key to Cyprus is Syria. An attack on Cyprus in force can only be launched from Syrian bases.

SYRIA is more than the key to Cyprus, however. It is also the key to the oil fields of Iraq and the northern approach to the Suez Canal. Could the British be certain that Syria would not or could not be used as a base of operations against their positions in the Middle East, they would have reason to breathe easier. As it is they are giving very serious consideration to the advisability of sending their troops into Syria, even if that leads to an open conflict with Vichy. In the meantime the R. A. F. has repeatedly attacked the airports at Aleppo, Palmyra, Damascus, Rayak, and Deir-ez-Zor to prevent the Luftwaffe from acquiring too firm a foothold in any of those places.

The fact that the R. A. F. has found it necessary to carry out these attacks makes it clear that, in the opinion of the British high command, Vichy's denials that the Germans have penetrated Syria cannot be taken seriously. As a matter of fact persistent reports have it that not only have German planes landed in Syria, but large numbers of German "tourists" have filtered into that mandated area and sea-borne troops are now on their way there from German condentrations in Rumania.

BY NO STRETCH of the imagination can it still be said that Syria is neutral territory. It is no more neutral than was Bulgaria after the Germans had occupied that country. It is no more neutral than Vichy, whose leaders (Admiral Darlan being the most vociferous) openly proclaim their hatred of Great Britain and their eagerness to make France the handmaiden of the Third Reich.

A distinction must be made, however, between the men of Vichy and the French people who are not being asked whether they approve or disapprove the choice made by their self-appointed leaders. Probably very few of them approve. But they are no longer masters of their fate.

It is not inconceivable, however, that a direct attempt by Vichy to throw what is left of France's military and naval resources on the side of the Nazis might meet with resistance, if not in France, at least in the French Empire. The presence in Vichy this week of Gen. Maxime Weygand suggests that this possibility is being considered. Weygand was in command of the Allied forces in the Near East in the days before the Battle of France. He knows how far the Vichy agents in Syria can safely go without bringing on a civil war among the French forces in that mandated area. But the time for any retreat by the Petain regime from the Berchtesgaden agreement which Vichy and Gen. Weygand himself have approved may be gone.

IN ANY EVENT, the British have certain advantages in undertaking a race with the Nazis for the control of Syria. The war in Iraq ended just in time to enable them to concentrate their garrisons in that country at those points where a German breakthrough is most likely to occur. They also have the advantage of a sizable and fairly well-equipped force in Palestine. And there would seem to be no possibility that the Luftwaffe would be able to repeat in the Middle East the success they had in Crete with respect to driving the enemy out of the air.

On the other hand, the British suffer from some very real handicaps in the Middle East. In the first place, lacking as they do unlimited man and air power, any troops and planes used in a Syrian campaign means a lessening of the military and air potential which Gen. Wavell has to draw on for the defense of Egypt. Secondly, efforts by the British fleet to prevent German sea-borne troops from reaching Syria may result in a further weakening of British sea power in the Eastern Mediterranean. Under the most favorable circumstances it would mean a hampering of British efforts to prevent Axis reinforcements and supplies from getting to Libya. In other words, even if the Nazis fail in an attempt to get control of Iraq and are blocked in their drive to Suez from the north, such an attempt might have real value to them if, by sufficiently dividing the British forces in the Middle East, they are able to get the upper hand in the Battle of Egypt. It is there that the decisive battle for the control of the Eastern Mediterranean is being fought.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Con(n)fidence Strong as Louis Fight Nears

By Bill Cunningham

Pittsburgh, Pa.—This burly vulcan of municipalities is famed for a multiplicity of matters including such fauna and flora as Panthers, Pirates, Skibos, steel, the beneficent Mr. Carnegie and the rich Mr. Mellon, but there's a tigerish young gossoon impatiently pacing these parts at the moment who says come the night of June 18 in that big New York ball park, and the old home town will have another star in her crown.

It will be the heavyweight fistic championship of this and all other known planets, says he, and he's just the guy who can and will put it there, says he. The young man's name is Billy Conn, ambitious, Irish and all whipcord and spring steel. He looks you right in the eye and clips the words like a man biting the ends off a double hand full of tough cigars.

"I've been dying two kinds of deaths," says he. "First, I was afraid somebody would belt Louis out before I got my chance at him. He's softened and slowed. He's a cinch for me, but I was afraid somebody else would get him on a fluke. Next was all that off-again-on-again business about my June 18 date with him. But that's all over now. I can't wait to get to camp. Gives me a couple of weeks in that Pompton Lakes and you can roll Mr. Louis up and lay him tenderly away in the records. And he was a great champion, wasn't he?"

Young Mr. William Conn, who wears the patronym of one of the old Irish kings, and who eschewed the title as cruiser, or light heavyweight champion of the world, in order to move up for this shot at the moon, definitely and evenly believes what he says. If confidence were music, he's Beethoven in swing.

Eyes Will Spin Like Loose Buttons

Conn continues to explain how he'll splatter the champion. He intends to blind him with lefts, he says, and concurrently to hook him to giblets with rights. He has noticed, says he, that the celebrated Detroit Detonator blinks his sadly solemn eyes when a versus makes a quick pass at him with a left.

"I'll feint him until those eyes are spinning like a pair of loose vest buttons," says the confident young Mr. Conn.

He then goes on with the rest, to wit, Louis is extremely touchy in the chin, Schmeling, Braddock, Galento, a nameless sparring partner, and but recently, Buddy Baer having deposited him in a reflective mood upon the planking at various intervals. "Maybe I can't hit as hard as Louis, but I can hit as hard as some of those guys and they did it."

Then he brings up the item that Joe is no quiz kid under fire, that, as a fast thinker, he belongs more in the research department, and he figures he'll dazzle the more hesitant champ with quicker speed and faster boxing.

This is an admirable frame of mind for any young Galahad and there's just enough truth in his conclusions to make him a Swami instead of a swellhead. But whether he can beat Louis is still very much of a question. He's been discussing but half of it—himself. It's but reasonable to ask what Joe's going to be doing all this time.

All these items the young man cites are correct. There are even a couple more he forgot to mention, such as, for instance, the fact that Louis has begun "to cut" now. His flesh never used to part no matter how hard he was hit. Not even that historic night when Schmeling had him up and down so many times that he looked like a Mohammedan saying his prayers, did his features show a trace in the department of gore.

That Left of Billy's

As fighters start to get along, their features turn as pulpy as a freestone peach. That's why Dempsey had to quit, why the resurrected Galento was "a bleeder." Louis has had seven years of it now and a steady drill of fighting. Just maybe the time has started to come.

Conn is right about that left of his. It's a sweetheart. All great boxers have had one and all boxers who've really had one have been great. Corbett, a fancy Dan who couldn't break an egg, as the boys say, brought the fabulous old John L. down with a whistling left. Tunney's true exterminator was that portside sticker and stabber.

Conn can do lots of business with a left, and that right of his may rack up some useful points, too. But there's this about Conn, it invariably takes him about four or five rounds to get started. It's a peculiarity not even he can explain. And, exactly conversely, Louis starts like a tornado. It's when the fight goes along that he starts to look bad.

The Pittsburgh Profile

This next one should be a sizzler, one way or the other. If Louis doesn't knock Conn out early, Conn might outdance and outstick him, thus bringing true his present dream. The kid is game. He's confident. He's hungry. He hasn't made much as a light heavy. He's hot after dough. His home town following is solid which seems to say he's O. K.

You can't hate a young fellow for believing—and trying. Here might be the next champion, at that.

Mediation Board Faces 2-Fold Test

A showdown on the National Defense Mediation Board's authority to issue binding public recommendations for the settlement of labor disputes was expected today on two fronts when the board was to make its proposals to end the soft-coal controversy and demand that 12,000 striking Puget Sound area loggers return to their jobs.

The recommendations on the soft coal controversy are expected to be read at 10 a. m. at an assembly of representatives of the three principal disputants. The conference will find the C. I. O. United Mine Workers and the operators of Northern coal mines lined up in agreement against Southern coal field owners who hitherto have declined to grant an additional wage boost to eliminate an existing 40-cents-a-day differential between the two areas.

At the same time, another board panel, which met yesterday with representatives of the International Woodworkers of America (C. I. O.), is known to be determined to lose no more time in making the first test case of its public recommendations, newly reinforced with governmental sanction by President Roosevelt's speech a week ago.

Unless the union accepts the recommendations, which provide a fact-finding study and immediate resumption of operations under a temporary wage increase, it was believed that the board might carry the case to the White House.

Success in San Francisco

Another case involving the board's back to work proposals met yesterday with immediate and favorable reception when the Bay Cities Metal Trades Council (A. F. of L.) ordered 5,000 members striking against the San Francisco yards of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation to return to their jobs.

The strike, which has lasted three weeks, was certified to the board on Monday and was followed within a matter of minutes by a board wire to the disputants to return to work pending a hearing on the case, set for next Monday. Several hundred strikers returned to their jobs on the council's instructions yesterday, San Francisco dispatches reported, with more expected today.

Meantime, growing tenseness in two other disputes was expected to result in further certifications to the board today unless settlements appeared imminent.

The first case involves a strike scheduled for today by C. I. O. die-casters in five plants of the Aluminum Co. of America. The second is the week-old strike of C. I. O. United Auto Workers at the Plainville, Conn., plant of the Marlin-Rockwell Corporation, where 1,000 workers are employed in the manufacture of roller bearings for airplane engines and propellors. The union is understood to be demanding a 10-cents-an-hour wage increase and has been met by a company offer of that amount for male employes and a wage raise of 5 cents for women.

C. I. O. Shift Possible

The panel in yesterday's conferences on the logging dispute consisted of C. A. Dykstra, chairman of the board; John Brophy, and Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, who joined the board's earlier demand that its back-to-work proposal be resubmitted to all union members. Union leaders, headed by I. W. A. President O. M. Orten, declined to comply.

Besides Orten, union representatives present included A. F. Hartung, head of the Columbia River Council, known to be opposed to Orten's stand. Hartung's presence aroused speculation that Murray might shift C. I. O. support from Orten to Hartung in an attempt to settle the dispute by substituting less recalcitrant union leadership.

If union leaders persist in refusing to accept the board's proposals, it is believed that the board will quickly request a public appeal to the strikers from President Roosevelt, perhaps on the lines of the letters written by President Wilson in World War I to striking Bridgeport, Conn., munitions workers. Wilson threatened them with blacklisting from all defense jobs for a year's period unless they returned to work.

In the coal dispute, speculation by defense and labor officials was unanimous in indicating that the board recommendations would call for the payment by the Southern owners of the additional 40 cents a day. They pointed out that unless the board so recommends, it will cause a wage cut in the North, inasmuch as the newly signed contract betwene miners and Northern operators is contingent on the differential's elimination and contains a "most favored nation" wage clause.

Strikes Cost U. S. 2 Million Defense Hours

Two battle cruisers, six destroyers or eight submarines could be built in the man-hours of labor lost by strikes on naval contracts, the Senate was told yesterday.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, said he had been informed by the Navy Department that strikes have cost the naval construction program 2,000,000 man-hours of work.

Naval work was being delayed by 40 strikes, as of last Saturday, Byrd reported, while War Department contracts are being held up by 34 strikes. Another 21 defense strikes are threatened, he said, while out of this total of 95, only 3 had been certified to the Mediation Board.

Defense officials, commenting last night on Byrd's figures, said almost every strike listed by the Navy Department also would affect the Army, so that his total "involves a good deal of overlapping." They added that "only a few" of the strikes could be shown to be holding up delivery of defense articles the Army or Navy require immediately.

Asks Stern Measures

The Virginian, calling on the Government "to deal firmly and sternly with this menace to our national security," renewed his demands for resignation of Secretary of Labor Perkins, vesting of the Mediation Board with power to enforce its settlements and "a flat statement from the President that no further defense strikes will be tolerated."

Another appeal to the President was made on the floor yesterday by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, who said Mr. Roosevelt "should give us some leadership in preventing stoppages in production of essential war materials."

Tydings said it was futile to discuss convoys or other measures for increasing American aid to Britain when "the Federal Government seems to sit supinely by and allow valuable time to be wasted, to allow valuable munitions to remain unmade and consequently not to reach our own soldiers now in camps or the British."

"Discipline Population"

The Federal Government, while drafting men for military service at $21 a month, should "discipline others of our population" engaged in arms production, he said.

Tydings also demanded reduction of nondefense expenditures in the 1942 budget by at least $500,000,000, stating that a $100,000,000,000 public debt is already in sight and that unchecked spending is threatening the country with a disaster "only less great than that which we would suffer were we a defeated nation in a world war."

Senate Demands Copies of War Speeches Heard Over Air

Copyright by New York Times

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday directed the Federal Communications Commission to obtain from the country's 849 radio stations a complete record and copies of all speeches delivered over the air on the "war issue."

In an unexpected move at the committee's hearing on alleged monopoly in radio, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, leader of the isolationist bloc in the Senate, charged that many independent stations presented only one side of the controversy over aid to England.

Senator Tobey, of New Hampshire, also an isolationist, who suggested the compilation of records of stations, said he had been informed by "the representative of a leading chain" that many stations had refused to carry the antiwar speeches of Senators and Representatives.

The two Senators did single out, however, the national networks for particular praise in their presentation of all aspects of the discussion over the war.

"The chains in Washington have given a fair opportunity for both sides to be heard," Wheeler said.

Fly Alleges Pressure

Senator Tobey's request followed a statement by James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, that the commission was "constantly subjected to an unmerciful line of political pressure" in the matter of issuing licenses or transfers. Fly insisted that the commission had not been influenced, however, by such pressure.

In reply to Senator Tobey's suggestion on Monday that Jesse H. Jones, Secretary of Commerce, obtained a permit in 48 hours when most applicants had to wait six months, Mr. Fly produced records showing Mr. Jones' station, KTRH, in Houston, Tex., made application for a power increase to 50,000 watts on October 4, 1940, and that it was not granted until April 15, 1941.

Senator Tobey said he intended to pursue the matter of political favoritism later because he was "terribly suspicious of things going on in the commission from time to time."

Fly dwelt at length on the legal right of the FCC to issue the recent order reorganizing the radio industry's internal structure and asserted the commission had acted solely in conformance with the expressed desire of Congress to prevent monopoly. The hearing was called on the resolution of Senator Wallace H. White, jr. (Republican), of Maine, to hold the orders in abeyance pending an inquiry as to their possible effect on broadcasters.

Cites Mutual Expansion

Senator White questioned whether there had been any monopoly since the Mutual Broadcasting System had been able to expand to the point where it had more affiliated stations than the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Fly replied that Mutual's affiliates were for the most part inferior from the standpoint of power to those of the other national chains. He believed it "high time impossible" for another chain to be started under existing conditions and suggested that, perhaps, the country could do with six national networks.

Senator White said he thought chain broadcasting was already "pretty well along to the saturation point," and Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, asked if Columbia and the National Broadcasting Co. were competitive or "in cahoots."

"From my observations they are pretty footy-footy," said Mr. Fly.

Mr. Fly agreed with Senator Wheeler that 90 days was too short a time for N. B. C. to dispose of one of its networks, as provided in the commission's order, and said an extension would be granted "from time to time."

Senator Tobey did not share Senator Wheeler's opinion that the 90-day period would require N. B. C. to make a forced sale.

"There are plenty of buyers ready with the finances and mouths watering," he remarked.

This bomber, as it stands on the field ready for action, represents the work of thousands of American cities, towns and hamlets — and millions of American men and women.

Somewhere in the West, ore was mined . . . in Pittsburgh or Wheeling, West Virginia, it was smelted . . . in New England it was drawn into wire . . . somewhere along the Atlantic coast wire was made into coils . . . in New England again the coils became part of a magneto . . . the magneto was shipped to Connecticut, and became part of a motor and the motor was shipped to California and became part of the bomber . . . and so on with hundreds of vital parts . . . without which it would be impossible to build modern mechanized equipment for defense.

Out of Canton and Columbus, Ohio come tapered roller bearings to be used not only in bombers, but in practically all heavy equipment—everything that moves, that flies, or that sails the seas. Timken has the capacity to make the millions of these bearings needed for defense equipment. Newly completed plant expansions; new machines and equipment; increased output in Timken's own steel mill for making tough electric furnace steel—all these are evidence that Timken is rolling.

No manufacturer of defense equipment will be held up because of Timken . . . that is our pledge to the American people.

Senate Passes Bill to Aid U. S. Sugar Growers

Geography scrambled party lines yesterday as the Senate overrode State Department recommendations and voted 45 to 26 to increase domestic sugar production quotas at the expense of Latin-American producers.

Senators from beet and cane sugar States lined up against representatives of the Eastern Seaboard and a few Administration stalwarts to put through legislation providing that any deficiency in the Philippine quota of sugar imports into this country, in excess of 75,000 tons, be allocated to domestic sugar producers.

The legislation, sponsored by Senators Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, and O'Mahoney (Democraft), of Wyoming, amends the sugar act of 1937, which provided that when Philippine producers failed to meet their quota, the amount of the deficiency should be divided in the form of increased quotas for foreign countries other than Cuba.

As originally drafted, the Adams bill would have distributed any deficiency in Philippine production among American producers. Secretary Tull expressed strong objection to the legislation and the bill was amended to permit allocation of the first 75,000 tons of any deficiency in the Philippine quota to foreign producers.

In its amended form, however, the bill was still opposed by Secretary Hull expressed strong objection Latin American republics "are suffering severely from the restriction of their European markets for sugar and other products as a result of the war."

The Agriculture Department in April announced a 73,232-ton deficit in the Philippine quota, all of which can be allocated to the quotas of Latin American countries. Under the Adams bill, however, any further Philippine deficiency during the present year would result in increased quotas for American producers.

The bill now goes to the House.

'Firmer Hand' May Replace Sayre at Manila

By the United Press

Francis B. Sayre, American high commissioner to the Philippines, will be recalled from Manila for Government service here as soon as a suitable replacement can be found, a usually reliable official said last night.

Gathering war clouds in the Far East, intensifying the threat to American interests there, have given special impetus to a move to put a "firmer hand" at the helm in the Pacific, the United Press was informed.

Sayre, former Assistant Secretary of State and a son-in-law of President Woodrow Wilson, has a wide background in international affairs, but friction between him and Commonwealth President Manuel Quezon over administrative jurisdiction has been adversely commented on in reports to the White House, officials disclosed.

Court Regrets Resignation Of Hughes

By the Associated Press

A "deep sense of regret" for the retirement of Chief Justice Hughes was expressed by his Supreme Court colleagues in a letter made public yesterday.

The letter, together with a reply from the Chief Justice, will be included in the minutes of the Court for Monday, when Hughes announced he was retiring July 1.

Signed by the seven associate justices, the letter to the Chief Justice said:

"The announcement of your decision to retire from the active duties of your office brings to us a deep sense of regret that our association with you in the daily work of the Court must end.

"In all the years of that association you have been tireless in carrying the heavy burden which unavoidably rests on the Chief Justice.

"With single-minded devotion to the high purpose of the Court you have brought to your leadership there all the resources gained from many years of eminent public and professional service, wide knowledge of the law, and that unflagging energy and painstaking care with which you have guided our deliberations with thoroughness and dispatch.

"At this moment of parting we wish to assure you of the high regard and esteem in which we hold you and your distinguished services to the Court and to the country.

"We wish for you in the years to come unabated vigor and good health and the full enjoyment of the opportunity to continue to employ your talents in agreeable and useful accomplishment."

In reply, the Chief Justice said:

"I shall always treasure the generous words of your letter.

"I keenly regret the necessity of giving up the privilege of our daily association and I shall carry into my retirement an abiding and precious memory of the good will and friendly consideration you have invariably shown me in the intimacy of our common endeavor.

"Despite my withdrawal from active service, I trust that our companionship may still continue and I extend to each of you the assurance of my high esteem and my earnest wish for your health and happiness."

With the Supreme Court in recess until next fall, President Roosevelt indicated yesterday that successors to Chief Justice Hughes and Associate Justice James C. McReynolds would not be named immediately.

Suprise To President

Hughes' announcement that he was retiring was as much a surprise to him, Mr. Roosevelt said, as to anyone else.

He made this comment at his press conference after he had been asked whether he had delayed appointing a sucessor to McReynold's who retired February 1, because he had expected Hughes to retire.

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, had been mentioned as possible successors to McReyolds, but with Hughes retirement it was generally expected that the Attorney General would be appointed Chief Justice. Mr. Roosevelt said he did not know when his appointments would be made.

Justice Roberts No. 1 Dissenter Of Last Term

By the Associated Press

Justice Owen J. Roberts, 65-year-old Pennsylvanian, was the No. 1 Supreme Court dissenter during the eight-month term that ended Monday.

And Justice Felix Frankfurter, 58-year-old former Harvard law professor, was on the winning side more often than any of his colleagues. He dissented only twice.

Roberts disagreed with the views of his associates in 30 cases, topping Chief Justice Hughes' mark of 22. Justices Black and Douglas tied for third place with 14 each.

Roberts gained the chief dissenter title following the retirement last February 1 of Justice James C. McReynolds, the only member of the court then described by Administration circles as "conservative."

In recent years Roberts had been widely known as the tribunal's "swing man" because he frequently cast the deciding vote in 5-to-4 decisions.

He was appointed to the court in 1930 by President Hoover after acting as Government prosecutor of the Teapot Dome oil cases, practicing law in Philadelphia and lecturing at the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Congress Ban On Waterway Funds Sought

By the Associated Press

A joint Congressional committee voted yesterday to forbid the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to spend money on the St. Lawrence waterway, the Florida Ship Canal, the Passamaquoddy tidal project, the Tombigbee waterway in the South, and the proposed Nicaraguan Canal.

This decision was an agreement worked out by a Senate-House Conference Committee in a compromise of differences over legislation granting President Roosevelt broad powers to create new corporations for defense projects with RFC funds.

When the Senate first passed this bill it included a restriction limiting funds for any new corporation to $300,000,000 and expressly providing that the funds not be used for any project rejected by Congress since 1926.

The House struck out this section but limited the amount for any new corporation to $100,000,000 under the theory that none of the projects previously rejected by Congress could be carried out for this amount.

The conference committee yesterday abandoned both plans and specifically banned use of RFC funds for the five projects listed while limiting any new corporation to $200,000,000.

In addition to the broad powers for the President, the legislation would increase RFC borrowing power to $1,500,000,000 and extend the life of its affiliated Government corporations to January 22, 1947.

The compromise now must be approved by both the Senate and House.

Carol Bruce Diets Her Way To Loveliness

Singer Had to Streamline Figure For the Movies

By Ida Jean Kain

THIS is the first time I have ever had a hand in reducing a movie celebrity. Carol Bruce, who sang her way to fame and a Hollywood contract, has just taken off 10 pounds with the aid of the "Twenty-one Day Diet." Since Carol did a 100 per cent perfect job of streamlining her already lovely figure, it would be hard to say which of us is more pleased.

As you may recall, I told you awhile back that this young actress was planning to slim down for the movies, but, as most of you know, it is so easy to make plans—and so hard to carry them out.

By taking two and one-half months to lose the unnecessary pounds, Carol says she dieted so painlessly that she had no trouble at all in sticking to her program. Because of her irregular hours, she eats only two good meals a day, and the calorie distribution as planned in the diet had to be slightly varied.

Calorie Bookkeeping

"I would sit down at the end of the day and add up every calorie," Carol says, "and then when I found I had taken 100 or so less than the allowance, I would plan to have those the next day to even things up."

Here is about the way her reducing menus went: For breakfast, around noon, a large glass of orange juice or grapefruit juice, an egg, thin rye toast and clear coffee. At 4 in the afternoon, a glass of buttermilk or skim milk. For dinner, at 6, fruit juice or fruit cup, a salad with very light French dressing or mayonnaise, two vegetables and lean meat. Then just before going to bed, late at night, or sometimes early in the morning, a glass of milk and an apple.

Carol's mother is an excellent pastry cook—I tried some of her scones—and like most slimmers, Carol had to cut down on the sweets. It wasn't easy to turn down the cake or pie in favor of an apple for that late snack. In fact, that was the tough part of the diet.

She Feels Fine

Along with dieting, Carol exercised. She went in for the rolling, kicking and stretching varieties, and had massage twice a week for good measure. And is she streamlined! She kept her bust the same, 34 inches, whittled her waist from 28 inches down to 23 inches; slimmed her hips from 37½ inches at the widest part to less than 36 inches, and from 35½ inches "across the bumpy part" to a trim 34 inches. Carol is 5 feet 5 inches and weighs a photogenic 118 pounds.

She says "I simply loved taking my weight down and never felt better in my life than while reducing and afterwards."

In my estimation, the ultimate test of a slimming program is not how you look afterward, but how you feel. Anyone can take off weight. But Carol slimmed down and kept her exuberant vitality. Watch out for her in the movies.

Movie Star Has True Greek Peplum

When is a peplum not a peplum? Most of the modern attachments called peplums bear little relationship to the original Greek model, which was something on the order of a gracefully draped overdress which hung to the hipline.

Carole Lombard has had the original Greek "peplos" copied intact for a new summer evening gown. Dress itself is pure Greek, is made of misty gray silk jersey.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 22, Loves Man, 27, but Hesitates to Wed Him Because Her Family Dislikes His Family; She Asks Disinterested Opinion of the Situation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been keeping steady company with a young man whom I have known for three years. He is from my home town and my folks know his folks. His family is very poor and his father, although well educated, can't seem to hold a job of any sort, so the family lives on what the older children (all of whom are college graduates), can contribute. My family dislikes his family very much, so don't like him either. My father worked with this young man in scouting, so knows him fairly well, but doesn't think much of him. All my people are well educated, and my father is a professional man.

This boy and I are graduates of the same college, and I hold a better job than he does, although he goes to night school and is trying for a better job. He has asked me to marry him, but I don't know whether my feeling for him is true love or not. We get along beautifully together, enjoy the same things, have the same tastes in recreation, food, clothes, etc. Both of us studied sociology and premarital and family relationships courses in college. Now, we are taking one night class together, and he brings his books to my house to study while I sew and do other chores. If we should marry, it would necessitate my going on with my job, which I wouldn't mind as I love my work.

I am very, very fond of the boy, and feel safe and content, at peace with the world when I am in his arms. His kisses thrill me. But when I am away from him, I am not so sure we could be happy. However, we have come to the place where we must either get married or stop seeing each other, as it is becoming increasingly difficult for us to control our emotions. I dread the thought of losing his companionship, but I believe I could forget him if we were separated. Is this love? Or is it just physical attraction? He is 27 and I am 22.

He wants us to be married this summer, as he will not be called in the draft until next winter or spring. His job with the Government is "indefinite," and so is mine. Would it be wise for us to marry in these circumstances? We belong to the same church, go with the same crowd and enjoy the same sports—and did even before we started "dating," six months ago. Our families live nearly 1,000 miles from here, so our only contact with them is by letter, or through occasional visits.

Incidentally, I was once engaged to marry his brother, but I broke the engagement after we had been separated by circumstances for several months. And it is not a case of seeing his brother in him, because they are just about as different as brothers could be. I know he loves me very much and I don't want to do anything to make him unhappy. But I feel the need of disinterested advice in deciding what is best to do, and I am hoping you can help me. Sincerely, ELOISE.

Responsibility of Deciding Cannot Be Delegated

DEAR ELOISE: I think you are in love with the young man—probably as much in love as you ever will be with any man. And I think your uncertainty (in his absence) as to the advisability of marriage is due to your family's "thumbs down" attitude toward him and his people. And this is a formidable factor to be reckoned with, certainly. You could only afford to ignore and override it—marrying him because you do love each other and are rarely congenial—if your knowledge of his character, habits, ambitions and aptitudes give you sound reason to believe he would never "let you down," after marriage, by irresponsible behavior of any sort.

It isn't necessary to marry a "world beater" in order to be happy with him. Nor is it necessary to have one's family's hearty approval and proud congratulations in order to make a soul-satisfying marriage. The prime necessity is that husband and wife genuinely complement each other, so that they have a real and warranted sense of belonging to each other; of finding psychic and social fulfillment (which is to say, a blended feeling of contentment and continuing growth) in their intimate partnership association.

This kind of bond seems already to exist between you and the young man, as witness the fact that you "get along beautifully together, enjoy the same things, have the same tastes in recreation, food, clothes, etc."—even including subjects of study. The sense of peace you find in each other's society, plus the physical attraction so strongly felt, plus the pleasure you find in working as well as playing together—all this seems to add up to a very substantial and mutually beneficial sort of relationship, far removed from a merely sensual alliance.

However, the fact that he, at 27, hasn't made as much progress as you have achieved at 22—even though advantaged with a comparable education—certainly suggests that you are considerably "smarter" than he. And it may be that in another five years you will have advanced proportionately farther ahead of him—so far ahead, indeed, as to then belong, by merit, to a category of social and intellectual association for which he could never qualify.

So, in trying to decide whether to marry him, you should give serious thought to the question of whether you could contentedly spend your life playing second fiddle to this man who may be in all ways essentially your inferior. Do you love him so much that it would always be your pleasure (supposing it were necessary) to employ your greater gifts in adroitly pushing and pulling him along the road to success? Or must you, in order to remain in love, love a man you can "look up to," as generally abler than yourself?

In Barrie's famous play, "What Every Woman Knows," the heroine demurely maneuvers her somewhat dullard husband to the heights, and loves him the more tenderly because of his artless dependence upon her subtler intelligence. But would that be your reaction, if it devolved upon your shoulders to render a similar service to this chap?

In the last analysis, you must decide, without anxious reference to others' opinions, whether you really want to marry the man. If you decide you do, then the economic situation, and the possibility of his being called by the draft in another year, shouldn't stand in your way. You have already sturdily demonstrated your ability to be self-supporting, and your competence along that line probably will increase as time goes on. Moreover, occupational opportunities are on the upturn today, and probably will continue so, giving capable young persons alternative chances for substantial employment and advancement such as they haven't known for more than ten years. M. H.

The Gentler Sex —— By Malvina Lindsay

President DeGoofey

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey will lead the Do Something About It League on to bigger and better reforms for another year.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The famous crusader and agitator was reelected yesterday for a third term as president of the league by a landslide of votes. Her defeated opponents are Mrs. Buffington Blah, candidate of the self-styled "better element" of the league, and Miss M. Maggie Mopface, who was sponsored by the Association For Advancement.

The moment her victory was assured, Mrs. DeGoofey called a press conference. Wearing a new cocoanut straw summer hat, she announced the launching of a new reform—one directed at the June wedding situation.

"The duplication of wedding presents is one of the most serious problems confronting our Nation," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "Brides-to-be are being literally submerged in bridge luncheon sets and boxes of dusting powder at their showers, and the brides are being swamped with millions of salad bowls and breakfast sets.

'Assignments for Wedding Guests

"Now since the primary purpose of showers and public weddings is to garner in gifts, why should we not be realistic about the proceeding? Therefore, I am setting up a secretarial service for brides. All a bride need do is to give me a list of her needs and of her friends. Then on each wedding or shower invitation I will designate what the recipient is to bring—bon-bon dish, book ends, plated silver tray or what-not.

"However, this is not my major wedding reform," continued Mrs. DeGoofey. "The really important thing I plan is to assort marriage partners properly."

"You mean you intend to see that all the right people get together?" asked a society editor.

"No, that all the wrong people get together," was the reply. "Surveying the marriage situation I have become convinced that a few very disagreeable persons are causing all the trouble. Now if we could just get these persons to marry each other, not nearly so many homes would be ruined.

"For instance, take the extravagant wife who simply must have the latest variety of fur coat or Oriental rug because her friends have it. All she needs is to be married to the type of man who always must have the latest make of automobile even though his insurance goes unpaid.

Martyrs, Screamers To Marry Likes

"Then take the man who shouts and storms and kicks the table when things don't go to suit him. What he needs is a wife who gets in fishwife scraps with the neighbors and who can out-yell him in any argument. Then there is the martyr wife who is always telling how much harder time she has than other women and who goes around in moody mysterious fits of silence. Now I would mate her with the man who turns into a 3-year-old when he has a cold and who has sullen spells.

"Under my plan I would make it possible for feminine social climbers to marry masculine cads; for sloppy housekeepers, who leave their dirty dishes, to be paired off with men who throw wet towels on the bathroom floor; for feminine clothes horses to pair off with impecunious Beau Brummels; for sorceress wives to have husbands who ogle every woman they meet—in short to get all the masculine and feminine pains in the neck together in matrimony and make them stay that way."

"How will you accomplish that reform Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked an editorial pundit, "without violating the fundamental right of every American to make an ass of himself—or herself?"

"I shall do it all with the aid of Dan Cupid—and psychiatry," was the reply. "I expect to start soon a series of lonely hearts parties and at these with the aid of a staff of dancing psychiatrists I shall see that all the right—or rather the wrong people — are brought together."

Banish Moths

You are not protecting woolens from moths if you merely place them in a cedar-lined box. Thoroughly clean and air the woolens, place them in a closet, seal or lock the door and keep out until next fall. It is also advisable to include some reliable moth preventative. Moths will take advantage of any slip on the part of the housekeeper.

Miss Nancy Hoskinson And Fiance Are Feted

By Elizabeth Henney

FADE IN: Scene opens on a May afternoon, shading toward evening. From a wide terrace a garden stretches away into the distance, to be lost in the mists of a fine rain. Close at hand, view of garden shows a gurgling stream beneath great trees; flower-bordered, winding paths turn into small rustic bridges at the stream crossings and fade into the blue mists in the background.

CAMERA, ACTION: Large groups of fashionably garbed guests of the owners sigh and murmur gentle complaints that the rain should have kept them from exploring the tempting paths, then turn back into the great house, where an early buffet-supper, followed by toasts to a young couple soon to be wed, will top off the evening with gaiety and song.

It was in reality a pre-nuptial party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. A. Burks Summers, for that popular young couple, Miss Nancy Hoskinson and her fiance, James Michael O'Grady, whose wedding will take place on June 11. But the setting was so picturesque that guests felt momentarily as though they were part of a Hollywood set, and the garden backdrop seemed almost too perfect to be real.

It was a two-in-one party, for its was something of a housewarming for the Summers, who just last month moved into their new home, Glenholm, at 4444 Linnean Avenue, known as the famous Oleson House. There have been one or two small parties for the Summers' little daughter but this was the first "grownup" celebration.

Inside, the house was just as exquisitely complete. Mrs. Summers, receiving in the drawing room, was gowned all in white, a floor-length crepe model, draped on Grecian lines. Back of her was the white wall of the fireplace side of the room, and topping the great marble mantelpiece was a huge bowl of calla lilies. The other three walls of the room were done in palest pink and bouquets against those walls were of pink roses and Easter lilies, to carry out the color scheme. Throughout the house were great bowls of sweetheart roses in honor of the two ranking guests.

The dining room was just as perfectly appointed. A buffet table centered the room, the walls of which were done in antique satin brocade of an off-white tone. Centering the buffet table was a great cluster of bridal flowers, calla lilies, roses, gardenias and carnations, flanked by tall white candles in silver tapers. Guests, after serving themselves from the buffet, formed gay groups at small tables set both in the dining and drawing room.

Parents of Couple Are Present

Among those who attended were the stepfather and mother of the bridegroom-to-be, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Edmonds, who have come down from Canada especially for the wedding, and are stopping at the Shoreham.

Others who attended included Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson, parents of the bride-to-be; Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Waller, Mr. and Mrs. John Parker, Dr. and Mrs. James Cahil, Justice and Mrs. James Proctor, Mr. and Mrs. Earl McIntosh, Dr. and Mrs. William Calhoun Stirling, Lieut. William Clark, Gen. Albert Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Bowie, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKnew, Frank Holcomb, Miss Margot O'Grady, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Julienne Cahill, Maj. Lee Wade and several others.

Mr. O'Grady will be graduated soon from the Foreign Service School. Yesterday's event was one of a series of many that are being given for the popular young couple. The Summers have known Miss Hoskinson since she was a small girl, and though the party, as originally planned, was scheduled to be quite small, it grew daily until the result was a quite sizable gathering.

Mrs. R. L. Bacon Also Entertains

Mrs. Robert Low Bacon also entertained yesterday, at a small informal garden tea at her home, 1801 F Street. It was for the many friends interested in the work of the American League for Finnish War Orphans, an organization which finds foster parents in this country for Finnish orphans whose parents were killed in the Russo-Finnish War.

Mrs. Bacon, wearing black sheer, and a strand of pearls was assisted by her daughter, Miss Ivy Bason; Mrs. Emil Hurja, in figured Navy blue silk crepe, white pique collar and Navy hat; Mrs. George Pettengill, Mrs. William C. Prescott, and the wives of the members of the staff of the Finnish Legation; Mme. Toivola, wife of the new Minister Counselor; Mme. Risto Solanko, wife of the Minister, and Mme. Erkki Mikkola, wife of the Secretary of the legation. Their husbands also attended, as did Col. Per Zilliacus, Military Attache of the Legation.

Among those present were Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, Col. and Mrs. Hallett Johnson, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Col. and Mrs. George R. Holmes, Mrs. Sidney Lee, Senator Arthur Capper, Mrs Robert Pell, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Ollie James and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, who came in with Baroness von Boetzelaer.

Charming in a silver fox cape over a black frock and wearing a white hat was Mme. Wennerberg, wife of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation. Mrs. Worth Clark arrived looking very spring-like in a print frock with a light wool jacket. With her was Mrs. John J. Dempsey and Mrs. A. S. Monroney, wife of the Representative from Oklahoma. Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling was accompanied by her daughter, Laura. Mme. Hjalmar Procope came back to town just for the occasion, from Saratoga, N. Y., where the Minister has been for a rest cure. The Minister will join her here the end of the week.

Mrs. Bacon will leave today with her daughter for her summer home at Westbury, Long Island, and will return to Washington for a few days on June 10. Representative Joseph C. Baldwin from New York has taken the Bacon home for the summer and will have bachelor quarters there while his family spends the holidays at their summer home in New York State.

Srta. Michels Is Hostess

Senorita Cristina Michels, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, entertained at an informal cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the embassy, honoring Marie Elena Davila, niece of the Mexican Ambassador.

Among the guests were Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador; Miss Mary Ellen Degnan, Miss Ruth Quinn, Miss Coby Ranneft, daughter of the Netherland's naval attache; the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Jorge Escalante Posse, and Ferdinand Sacasa.

Also there were Senorita Laura Recinos, daughter of the Minister from Guatemala; the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Alejandro Bertrand, and Fausto Soto.

Mrs. Hurley Goes To Albuquerque For Graduation

Mrs. Patrick Hurley left yesterday for Albuquerque, N. Mex., to attend the graduation of her daughter, Miss Ruth Hurley. They will return to Washington next Tuesday.

Though she will not be presented until next Thanksgiving, Miss Hurley will take part in the debutante activities of the spring. She is a younger sister of Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, the former Miss Patricia Hurley, who made her debut several seasons ago.

Miss Henning to Be June Week Guest

Miss Barbara Henning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning, will leave tomorrow for West Point. She will attend the festivities of June Week and be present at the graduation of her fiance, Lieut. Thomas Courtenay O'Connell.

The couple will be married a week from tomorrow, June 12, at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel. A reception at the Henning home will follow.

James Cromwell To Be Honor Guest Of His Sister Here

James Cromwell's new book, "Pax Americana," just off the presses, will doubtlessly be a main topic of conversation today at the party his sister, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, will give in his honor. Mrs. Atwill's gathering will take place this afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, and is in celebration of her brother's birthday.

The former Minister to Canada has dedicated his new volume to Franklin Delano Roosevelt, "with admiration and devotion."

Emily Jackson's Troth Announced

Of interest to Washington is Mr. and Mrs. Charles Havemeyer Jackson's announcement of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emily Louise Jackson, to Walter Lanning Worrall, son of Mrs. Walter Lanning Worrall, of New York, and the late Mr. Worrall.

Miss Jackson was graduated from the Holton-Arms School and attended Vassar College. She is a granddaughter of Edward Clarkson Potter and the late Mrs. Potter, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Jackson.

Mr. Worrall was graduated from St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and Yale University. He is now with the Providence (R. I.) Engineering Works.

Dominican Envoy Confers Order On Alfred Wagg

The Order of Merit of Juan Pablo Duarte was conferred upon Alfred Wagg, formerly of the State Department, yesterday afternoon by the Dominican Minister, Andres Pastoriza.

Mr. Wagg has been active recently in resettling European refugees in the Dominican Republic. Following the decoration, which took place at 5:30 o'clock at Hotel 2400, the Minister and Senora de Pastoriza entertained a few people at cocktails. Guests were gathered from the State Department and diplomatic set.

Vandegrifts To Honor Son

At a cocktail party this afternoon at the Army-Navy Country Club, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. A. A. Vandegrift will entertain in honor of their son, Lieut. Archer Vandegrift, who recently has returned from naval duty in the Far East.

Among those assisting will be Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of the Commandant of the Marine Corps; Mrs. Holland Smith, Mrs. Samuel Harrington, Mrs. John Thomason, Mrs. Donald Kendall, Mrs. Howard Sellows and Mrs. A. H. Turner.

The Minister to Australia and Mrs. Nelson Johnson are scheduled to attend, as are Rear Admiral and Mrs. Benjamin Dorsey, Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. B. Woodson, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis McCarty Little, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Emile P. Moses, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Seth Williams and Col. and Mrs. Franklin Hart.

Others who have been invited are Mrs. Felix Gygax, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wyckoff, Capt. and Mrs. George Bryant, Mrs. George Thorpe and a group from the younger service set, friends of the guest of honor. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Vandegrift expect to receive about a hundred of their friends during the 5 to 7 cocktail hours.

Mrs. Kutz Returns From Fort Benning

Mrs. Charles W. Kutz, wife of the District Commissioner, has returned from Fort Benning, Ga., where she visited her son and daughter-in-law, Capt. and Mrs. Charles Randolph Kutz.

Capt. Kutz expects to go on maneuvers shortly and while he is away his wife will come to Washington to stay with her parents.

Parties Scheduled For Miss Coleman And Ensign Roddis

Prenuptial parties for Miss Mary Eugenia Coleman and Ensign Louis Roddis, jr., who will be married on Saturday, are highlights of the social calendar this week. Ensign Roddis will arrive in town today, in time to attend a cocktail party given by Greydon Parker Copeland, who is to be an usher.

Tomorrow evening Miss Coleman will be at home to receive her friends. On Friday Miss Audrey Cowan will give a cocktail party in their honor, and in the evening Miss Ann Brooke Peterson will entertain the bridal party at dinner on the Shoreham terrace, following the rehearsal.

Miss Johnson Is Engaged

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Alfred B. Johnson announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Barbara Basler Johnson, to Lawrence Smithline, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Smithline, of New York. Miss Johnson attended Punahou School in Honolulu, Miss Beard's School in Orange, N. J., and was graduated from the Girls' Latin School of Chicago. She has been doing special work at Visitation Convent Junior College in Georgetown and is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Smithline is a graduate of the Engineering School of New York University, where he received his master's degree in aeronautical engineering. He is connected with the Langley Aircraft Corporation at Port Washington, Long Island.

The wedding will take place June 28, in St. Patrick's Chapel, and will be followed by a breakfast at the Chevy Chase Club.

Miss Shelton, Fiance Feted

Entertaining at their home, Laurel Park Farm, in Laurel, Md., Miss Betty Lloyd Hutchison and her brother, Richard Hutchison, were hosts at a buffet supper last night. Honor guests were Miss Dorothy Shelton and Lowell Joseph Bradford, who will be married on June 10. Earlier in the day Miss Shelton was feted at a luncheon given by three sisters, Mrs. James Schrider, Mrs. Maurice B. Colbert and Mrs. John J. Buckley.

Among those attending the buffet supper last night were Miss Patricia Hill, Miss Patsy Kelsey, Miss Betty Ann Swagart, Miss Dolly Corbin, Miss Betty Burton, Lieut. and Mrs. Busey Howard, Capt. Robert Castle, William C. Shelton, jr., Delong Bowman, Smith Bowman and Harold Mosley.

The luncheon party and shower was held at Mrs. James Schrider's home. Those attending included the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. William C. Shelton; Mrs. Daniel W. Bell, Mrs. H. L. Sincoe, Mrs. Charles Stieffel, Mrs. Frank Wilcox, Mrs. Francis J. Murray, Mrs. Willard Nalls, Mrs. Frank O'Neil, Mrs. Frank Clancy, Mrs. Lloyd Gaines, Mrs. Jack Joslin, Mrs. Clarence Gosnell, Mrs. Charles Moran, Mrs. Daniel Raedy, Judge Ellen Raedy, Mrs. Ray Garrity, Mrs. George Quirk, Miss Hazel Arth, Mrs. Warren Tydings, Mrs. Betty Clark, Mrs. R. Lyman Sexton, Mrs. Andrew Morris, Mrs. G. Bach Gill and Mrs. George Seitz.

Brazilians Honored by Starks

Several Parties Honor Visitors From Panama

After a brief lull, Latin American entertaining is again about to dominate the capital social scene, with several parties planned for the Foreign Minister of Panama and Senora de Roux. They are visiting at the embassy.

The Ambassador and Senora de Brin will shortly issue invitations for a reception the afternoon of June 12 in honor of the couple. Today the Board of Governors of the Pan American Union will give a luncheon for Senor de Roux and on Saturday the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will give a luncheon for the Foreign Minister and his wife at the Carlton.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Hull received Senor de Roux and Senora de Brin at tea and also welcomed the Netherlands Foreign Minister and Mme. Van Kleffens. The Dutch Minister and Mme. Loudon accompanied them.

On Monday afternoon Mrs. Hull received the Canadian Minister, Leighton McCarthy, and Mrs. McCarthy, who recently joined him here.

Sen. Glass Gets 14th Honor Degree

Senator Carter Glass came close to setting an academic-degree record for even much-honored Washingtonians when he received his fourteenth honorary degree from Lynchburg College yesterday. Mrs. Glass was with him when he received the degree of doctor of laws.

From Lynchburg the Senator and Mrs. Glass went on to Williamsburg, where the State Bankers' Association of New York will present a portrait of the Senator to William and Mary College on Saturday. Bernard Baruch will make the presentation address.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MRS. John Van Antwerp MacMurray, wife of the United States Ambassador to Turkey, really meant it when she said on her arrival in New York the other day: "I haven't a thing to wear." Carting baggage around is a hazardous problem in Europe these days and Mrs. MacMurray hasn't the vaguest idea where her large trunk full of clothes now is. She left it in Bagdad when she decided to fly over the Persian Gulf, and the trunk hasn't been heard from since.

In flying over the gulf, Mrs. MacMurray traveled in 14 hours a route which would have taken nine days by boat. Now that she's had to buy a complete new wardrobe she is wondering if it was worth it.

MRS. MacMURRAY arrived in Washington yesterday and is staying at the Shoreham. Last night she was guest of honor at a dinner for 30 given at the 1925 F Street Club by the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor. Her son, Frank MacMurray, will be married to Miss Rose Chatfield Taylor on Saturday, June 14. The prospective bride will give a dinner for the wedding party on Friday, June 13, at the F Street Club.

Mrs. MacMurray saw her daughter, Lois, graduated from the Madeira School yesterday afternoon and will be off today for a visit to Connecticut. She will return June 10 for the wedding festivities.

Like all American women arriving from Europe these days, Mrs. MacMurray had to surrender her passport on landing. She's keeping her fingers crossed, hoping the State Department will let her have it back again and also give one to Lois.

WHEN A DIPLOMAT has to sleep in a trailer camp, you really know that Washington is overcrowded. The other night a Foreign Service officer arrived in town and tried to get into a hotel. He ended up in an Alexandria camp and had to sleep in his car. The next morning he inquired anxiously of a colleague at the State Department: "Do you think I ought to get a clean shirt before I go in to see Howland Shaw?"

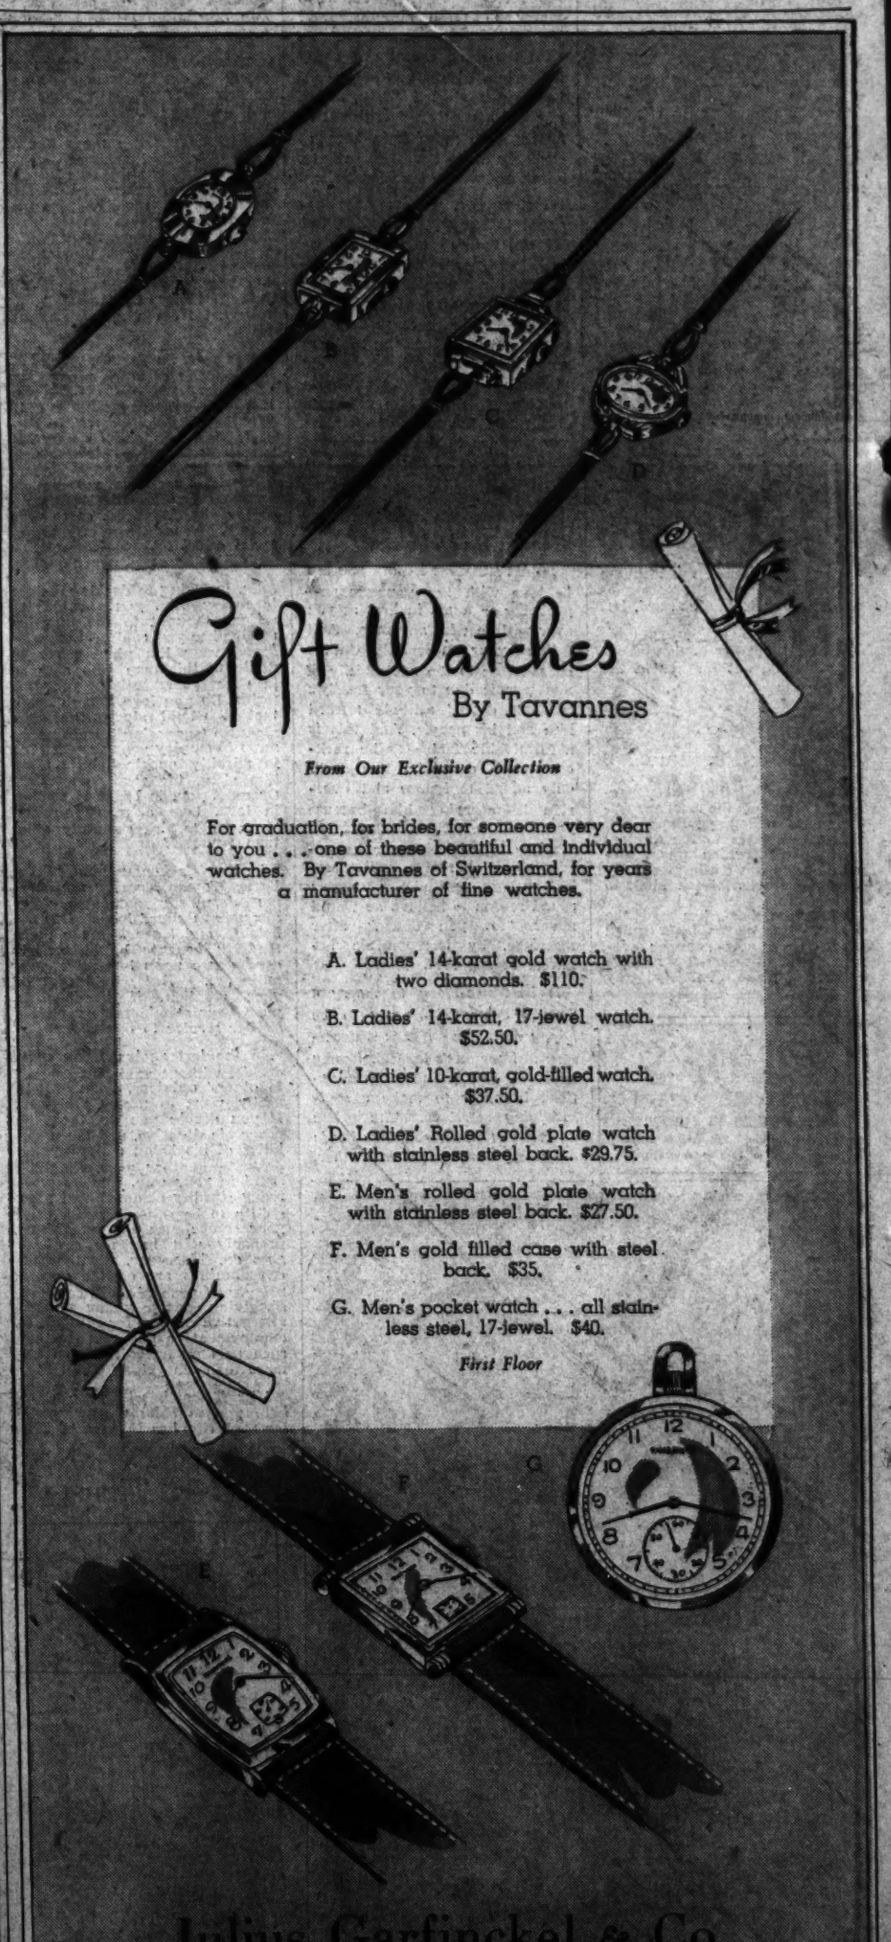
NOTES: Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark will leave the end of the month for Mr. Clark's new post at the legation in Ottawa. They will visit Mrs. Clark's mother, Mrs. Harry Covington, at her Vermont farm en route . . . I hear that Sir Anthony Rumbold, of the British Embassy, called to England by the death of his father, will not return to his post here. . . . Friday afternoon promises to be a record day for parties before the season goes into its summer slump. Among those entertaining are Senora de Echegaray, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Coffin. Mrs. Arthur Fowler will have friends lunching with her that day . . . Aletha Harcourt, whose father is a distinguished English painter, says that art exhibits are still being held in London, blitz or no blitz. . . . At a recent dinner at a European legation, sherry was served with the dessert, leaving the guests wondering whether boats weren't bringing the inevitable champagne any more.

Daughter Is Born To the N. D. Coles

Lieut. Neil D. Cole, U. S. Naval Reserve, and Mrs. Cole announce the birth of a daughter, Diana Louise, on May 28 at Columbia Hospital.

Mrs. Cole is the former Miss Elizabeth Louise Coburn, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Henry C. Coburn, jr., of Fort Bragg, N. C.



D. A. R. Defense Chief Outlines Its Program

By Lucia Giddens.

D. A. R. chapters throughout the Nation are being urged to aid in recreational programs for service men and to carry on Americanism activities with more than usual summer vigor, Mrs. E. Thomas Boyd, of Denver, national chairman of defense through patriotic education, said yesterday on her first official visit to headquarters here.

Meanwhile mail sacks at the D. A. R. office here are loaded down with cards in the membership roll call for defense. The 143,000 members have been requested by Mrs. William H. Pouch, President General, as well as by Mrs. Boyd to fill out the cards listing the services they are prepared to perform in their localities, in the home defense program.

A response "gratifying" in volume and in variety of talents listed by members was reported at headquarters yesterday. Services range from telegraphy to religious guidance, and include also nursing, clerical work, driving car, sewing, gardening, cooking and recreation.

Mrs. Boyd said the recreation program for service men would be one of the major concerns of D. A. R. chapters in the months ahead. "We will cooperate with centers already established, and will help to set up centers if there are none in localities where they are needed and where we have chapters," she said.

"Our members will invite service men into their homes for meals, to help give them some normal home life while they are on leave," she added.

Mrs. Boyd is calling on chapters to see how they can be of help in the migrant camps which are being established for workers who follow the seasonal harvesting of crops. Such a camp is being set up in the fruit area in her own State.

"There is opportunity for the D. A. R. in the strengthening of Americanism among the migrants," Mrs. Boyd said.

In line with a resolution adopted at the D. A. R. Congress here in April against United States participation in such plans as "Union Now," Mrs. Boyd is urging all D. A. R. chapters to study such proposals and to have programs showing "whatever fallacies" there are in them, she said yesterday.

"All-out education in the American way of life" will be a main theme for the three years of her committee chairmanship, Mrs. Boyd said she believed a concentrated effort by the Nation in that direction was necessary to combat "the organized subversive forces at work within our country."

Among the educational activities which she is urging D. A. R. chapters to foster are night classes for older boys and girls who must work during the day, and organization of children in rural districts into groups for study of American history and patriots.

Mr. Boyd said she would carry on an unrelenting effort to remove from public schools textbooks which would be "a destructive influence" on the American way of life. In Colorado she cooperated in a successful movement to remove a series of social science textbooks which, she said, had a socialistic tinge.

Mrs. Boyd said she would carry D. A. R. service as chapter regent, State regent, vice president general, chaplain general, vice president of the National Officers' Club and other offices. She has served as supervisor of rural work, Diocese of Colorado, Episcopal Church, and as president of the board of a community center in a community of foreign-born.

Shoppers Hear Miss Williams

Miss Frances Williams, assistant to the chief of the consumer contact section of the Office of Emergency Management, yesterday afternoon was guest speaker at the final meeting of the League of Women Shoppers at Self Help House, 3213 O Street. She discussed "What Is Happening to Prices in the Emergency" and her talk was preceded by the election of officers, with Mrs. Evelyn Cooper named president, to succeed Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel.

Individuals interested in price rises should be alert to three things, said Miss Williams. They were quality of merchandise which, she explained, included maintenance of quality with no advance in price; the package size and seasonal price rises. The seasonal rises are bound to occur and should not excite the consumer but should elicit inquiry from him as to whether or not they are justified, she said.

New officers, in addition to Mrs. Cooper, include: Mrs. Clifford Durr, vice president; Mrs. Bernice Isaacson, executive secretary; Mrs. Charles Horsky, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Nathan H. David, treasurer; Mrs. Sigmund Timberg, publicity director; Mrs. Cynthia Wentworth Hannum, education chairman; Mrs. R. M. Blair-Smith, investigating committee chairman; Jeannette G. Fineman, living standards chairman; Helen C. Lingenfelter, membership chairman; Martha Ward Dudley, Adeline Taylor Vermilya and Louise Wilson, members-at-large.

Takoma Club Installs Officers

Mrs. Gilbert Sward (left), new president of Takoma Park Women's Club, yesterday received the gavel from Mrs. Paul W. Burk, retiring president, at the annual luncheon at Kenwood Country Club

A plan to save at least 250 active workers among the 300 members of the Takoma Park Women's Club was outlined yesterday by the new president, Mrs. Gilbert G. Sward, who assumed her duties at the annual luncheon held at Kenwood Country Club.

Her two other objectives for the year were an active and growing fund for the proposed clubhouse and a definite part in defense work.

She urged immediate purchase of a clubhouse site before available property is gone. With abandonment of plans for a community building, the club has an opportunity, she said, to sponsor something worth while for Takoma Park and to offer the children of the community an auditorium for their entertainments. It is something to be thought over during the summer and taken up in the fall, she said.

She announced she would appoint a large committee within the club, with many subchairmen, to do its part in bringing about community cooperation in all defense efforts.

Mrs. Paul Burk, the retiring president, presided at the luncheon. The other new officers are: Mrs. Frank A. Richmond and Mrs. D. V. Sandifer, vice presidents; Mrs. Frank Marshall, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter DeGroot, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Frederick G. Umhau, Mrs. Burk, Mrs. Frank A. Nichols and Mrs. Benjamin Abbott, directors.

The program included dances by Mary Klingenhagen, Catherine Mendun and Edith Foster, accompanied by Mrs. Waldo Schmidt; readings by Mrs. T. W. Katenkamp, of Baltimore, and songs by the club choral group, under the direction of Mrs. Edmund L. Green. Mrs. C. B. Smith offered the invocation.

BUSY SUMMER—The June bulletin of the Women's City Club carries a message from the president, Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, which promises "more than usual activity at the clubhouse this summer."

"Women's clubs are being urged to stand by and give whatever aid they can to their country and community and this club will, as usual, do its part," she says.

"Club members are urged to introduce newcomers to Washington to the attractions of the club. Let us make our clubhouse a mecca for those who are here aiding defense."

The bulletin also announces that Mrs. C. D. Lowe, who has just retired as president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, has accepted appointment as membership chairman of the club for the coming year. Mrs. Frances Williams is the retiring chairman under whose direction the membership has been substantially increased.

The club has announced a series of "suburban parties," beginning with one at the home of Mrs. George W. Eastment, Saturday, June 14.

A group of club members will run a "jitney" from 3:45 to 4:15 to take members and guests from the bus and car terminals at the District line at Georgia and Alaska Avenues to the Eastment residence at 9311 Old Bladensburg Road, Silver Spring.

CORNELL OFFICERS—Carmen Johnson has been elected president of the Cornell Women's Club for the coming year.

Other officers who will serve with her include Linda Sloan, vice president; Catherine Strong, secretary, and Mrs. James Henry, treasurer.

The club will have a picnic to which members of the men's club and their wives have been invited on Saturday, June 7, at the home of Mrs. Frederick Snyder, Cummings Lane, Chevy Chase, Md. Members of the committee in charge of arrangements include Mrs. Harold Morrison, Mrs. Winston Hobbs, Mrs. William Lockhart, Mrs. Horace Stevenson, Mrs. William L. Norfleet and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist.

Marvins Entertain Today for G. W. U. Hospital Board

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, and Mrs. Marvin, who is president of the Woman's Board of the University Hospital, will entertain today for members and associate members of the board at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

There will be only three men in the company, Dr. Marvin, Dean Walter Bleodorn of the Medical School who, with Mrs. Bleodorn, will be guest of honor, and Dr. Stirling Ruffin, one of the two men included in the associate membership of the board. The other male member is Prof. Charles Smith, who is now in California.

The annual meeting of the board will preceede the luncheon.

W. R. C. to Take Part in Exercises

Mrs. Myrtle Burke, president of the Department of the Potomac, Woman's Relief Corps, Auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, with her official staff, corps presidents and members, will participate in the joint memorial exercises to be held at the headquarters of Allen Spencer Mussey Tent, Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, at 2015 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, at 8 o'clock tonight.

Flag Day, June 14, will be celebrated by the Department of the Potomac, of which John M. Kline is the commander. These exercises will be sponsored by the Woman's Relief Corps. Mrs. Addie Hickman, patriotic instructor of the corps, and Everett Warner, for the Grand Army of the Republic, assisted by the committee, Mrs. Delia L. O'Brien and Mrs. E. Helen Temple, will have charge of the program.

On Saturday, June 21, at 5 p. m., the Department of the Potomac, W. R. C., will have its annual outing at Hains Point, with games and a picnic lunch.

Wilson College Alumnae Honor Mrs. Ruth Bean

Mrs. Ruth Richards Bean, of Cambridge, Mass., who was president of the 1905 graduating class at the normal school which was the predecessor of Wilson Teachers College, was honor guest at an informal dinner of alumni of that year at the Dodge Hotel last night.

Mrs. Robert Hay made arrangements for the dinner, attended by about 15 members of the class. Miss Grace Houchen of Bethesda, Md., is president of the alumni group.

Marietta Park Leaders Named

Appointment of committee chairmen and announcement of plans for a new Spanish class next year featured the annual banquet of the Marietta Park Women's Club last night at Commonwealth Farms, Colesville, Md.

Mrs. Ivan H. Sims, president, named the following chairmen: Art, Mrs. James Longley; education, Mrs. Harold Leath; Echo editor, Mrs. Walter Jaeger; hospitality, Mrs. H. E. Cleaves; literature, Mrs. Harry DeLung; music, Mrs. E. J. Hickey; philanthropic, Mrs. I. L. Stormont; program, Mrs. Walter Jaeger; publicity, Mrs. J. G. Osborne.

New officers who were installed are, in addition to Mrs. Sims: First vice president, Mrs. Jaeger; second vice president, Mrs. Stormont; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles Sterner; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Allen Bond Harrison; treasurer, Mrs. Marguerite F. Golden; custodian, Mrs. J. L. Winebrinier.

Before the banquet Mrs. Sims was honored at a cocktail party given by the executive committee, at the home of Mrs. Lawrence S. Gross.

Wellesley Club Picnic

The Washington Wellesley will hold its annual picnic today at 5 p. m. on the grounds of Beauvoir School, 3500 Woodley Road Northwest. A group of club members will entertain informally with a program of folk dancing, and the war work committee's summer projects will be discussed.

58 Madeira School Girls Graduated

Dressed in white and carrying bouquets of red roses, 58 senior girls yesterday received their diplomas from Mrs. David Laforest Wing, headmistress of the Madeira School, Greenway, Va., in the institution's thirty-fifth commencement exercises.

Forced indoors by the weather, the exercises were held in the sports building. Among the graduates were Joan Elizabeth Morgenthau, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau, and Lois Van Antwerp MacMurray, whose father, John Van A. MacMurray, is Ambassador to Turkey. Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau and Mrs. MacMurray attended.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, widow of the former Speaker of the House, also attended. Her daughter, Pauline, is an undergraduate at the school.

First to receive her diploma was Margaret Douglas Coleman, Englewood, N. J., senior class president. Among the graduates were 11 Washington girls.

Freedom Trough Discipline

In her address to the graduates, Mrs. Wing defined democracy as "freedom through discipline." She said "discipline does not mean punishment, retaliation or any negative thing, but it means a method of learning how to live in the civilization in which the child is born."

She reminded the graduates of their heritage of freedom, and pointed out that Fairfax County, where their school is located, was the "fountainhead of liberty in this country"—the home of George Washington and George Mason.

She said the girls had been taught to interest themselves in the civic affairs of Fairfax County and had contributed generously to the Red Cross and to the Community Chest because "we owe a debt to the community in which we live and our community begins at our front door."

A birthday gift of $7,530 for the school was presented to Mrs. Wing by Mrs. Waldron Faulkner, alumnae fund chairman. The donation was raised by contributions from alumnae and former patrons of the school.

Graduates were:

Jane Bemis Anderson, Carol Lee Atwood, Barbara Baird, Katherine Anne Baxter, Mary Bolt, Cynthia Ayres Borden, Jessie Bowman, Cynthia Helen Brants, Anne Conyers Bryan, Hally Ballinger Bryan, Ellen Smith Cargill, Olive Ruth Carter, Mary Louise Cheek, Mary Grove Clause, Margaret Douglas Coleman, Mary Compton, Louise Willard Crosby, Mary Adeline Davis, Frances Van Meter de Butts, Henriette Marie de Sieyes, Vivien Constance Elmslie, Barbara Polk Foss, Susan Jane Galliher, Anne Booth Hale, Elizabeth Harriman, Jane Gregory Heyer, Joan Margaret Hoddick, Patricia Curran Holton, Katherine Elizabeth Hutchison, Eliza Garretson Jackson, Mary Katharine Jones, Alice Joslin Kingsbury, Lois Van Antwerp MacMurray, Sally Lou Madeira, Barbara Cooper McCague, Mary Rachel McKnight, Fayetta Crowley McKown, Elizabeth Phillips Meek, Nancy Robinson Miller, Mary Margaret Moore, Joan Elizabeth Morgenthau, Anne Alida Newell, Geraldine Damon Putman, Georgiana Hamilton Rogers, Marjorie Ann Rosenthal, Jean Elizabeth Shepperd, Eliza Cochran Shumaker, Louise Smith, Ruth Smith, Lucile Borden Tennant, Jean Trippett, Francise Walton, Edith Hanington Ward, Mary Cantwell Weems, Charlotte Smith Wilcox, Dorothy Rae Willebrandt, Nancy Witter, Martha Worrall.

District Realtors Hold Outing at Bay Ridge

Bay Ridge, Md.—Yesterday was the scene of the eighth annual outing of Washington Real Estate Board. More than 400 members and guests of that organization spent the day in sports events.

Forming a motorcade at headquarters of the board at 1417 K Street Northwest, the picnickers proceeded to the scene under escorts of metropolitan and Maryland State motorcycle police. The sports program began at 10 a. m. with a golf tournament for The Washington Post Cup and other prizes. A baseball game, horseshoe pitching, racing and swimming events completed the athletic programs.

A dinner followed by prize awards and an entertainment program concluded the pleasant day.

Shot in Tavern, Mrs. Robertson Dies in Hospital

Mrs. Margaret Robertson, 24, of 706 Seventh Street Northeast, who was shot in a Muirkirk, Md., tavern Monday, died last night in Casualty Hospital.

Mrs. Robertson, wife of Minor Robertson, of the Seventh Street address, told police she had been shot by Daniel Meehan, 46, proprietor of the Muirkirk Inn. She also told a story of having slipped and fallen to the floor on the .22-caliber pistol, officers reported.

Meehan also told police the latter story. He is now held on an open charge by the Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville.

Ample Power For Defense Needs Seen

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., June 3.—With the Nation's electric power industry expanding to meet the challenges of defense production, "an allegation of power shortage is unwarranted," C. W. Kellogg, president of the Edison Electric Institute, declared today.

Addressing the institute's ninth annual convention, he told the utility executives and electrical manufacturers the "power situation will be found to have been adequately provided for."

"In addition to the unprecedented increases of seven and a half million kilowatts in generating capacity to be added in 1941 and 1942, a great basic element of strength in the electric power situation is the ample reserve of generating capacity that has been built up over past years," he explained.

"The excess of 30 per cent over the annual peak loads, represented by the installed capacity of generating equipment in this country, is required partly by the insufficiency of stream flow at times to operate all hydro units at full capacity and partly by the maintenance requirements of steam units.

"But there is still left over a generating margin averaging perhaps 10 to 15 per cent to be drawn upon as needed."

Listing "further resources," Kellogg said steam and water generating stations can exceed their rated capacity by 10 to 15 per cent for "moderate periods."

An additional "huge increase in energy" would be available, he added, from operation 24 hours daily, seven days a week.

"This alone could add 15 to 20 per cent to the annual power output of all electric generators, sufficient to carry a further increase in industrial production of nearly 20 per cent."

William P. Witherow, chairman of the defense committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, told the institute "splendid leadership" and industry's "full cooperation" are making the defense production drive successful despite bottlenecks and discouragements.

"By the end of this year," predicted Witherow, president of the Blaw-Knox Co., Pittsburgh, "there will be such a whirl of activity in the production lines of our country that all records of all kinds of any country at any time will be exceeded, and American industry will show its people results which they know it is capable of accomplishing."

'Ideal Father' Nominee Takes Care of Babies

"I am convinced," Mrs. Frank L. Sellin writes the Father's Day Editor, "that my husband is the ideal father of the District and nearby suburbs."

Didn't he, she points out proudly, take full charge of their 6-month-old boy for a solid week when she was called out of the city a few years ago, making the formula and feeding him and changing his apparel at the frequent intervals necessary?

"When another baby boy came along and I was just a little indisposed, he charged right in and washed diapers in the washer, sterilized bottles, made the formula and fed the baby many times," Mrs. Sellin continues in her letter nominating the husband in The Post's Father's Day contest.

"What convinces me that my husband is the ideal father is that before we had children he enjoyed apartment life with all its conveniences, but for the health and happiness of his children he moved to the suburbs where it takes plenty of work keeping coal fires burning and raising green vegetables for their vitamins."

The Sellins—mother, father, two sons and a daughter—live in Chillum, Md.

Mrs. Bellin's entry is among the first received in The Post's search for Washington's ideal father. Is yours in yet?

If not, let's hear about your dad. Or, if he is gone and you know someone else's father whose hat ought to be tossed into the ring, send his name, address and a description of his qualities to the Father's Day Editor, in care of The Washington Post.

Entries must be postmarked no later than midnight June 10. The winner will be announced June 13, just two days before Father's Day.

Incidentally, if you wish names withheld in connection with quotation of excerpts from your nominating letters, just say so and your wish will be followed.

A. M. A. Votes To Appeal In Trust Suit

Copyright by New York Times

Cleveland, June 3.—The American Medical Association took formal action today to fight to the last ditch the antitrust suit brought against it by the Government. The House of Delegates voted unanimously to appeal the decision of the U. S. District Court under which a fine of $2,500 was imposed on the association. The action was taken at an executive session.

Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran of the U. S. Public Health Service at a symposium on national defense informed the association that "no group of equal size can do so much for the Nation's safety as can the medical profession" and pointed out that by saving manpower through preventing illness the equivalent of a million trained men per year can be provided for defense work.

A resolution calling for the admission of women physicians into the Medical Reserve Corps on the same basis as men was rejected by the House of Delegates on the ground that this action would interfere with defense work due to lack of provisions for women in the various military units and the confusion and delay which would result from efforts to make necessary arrangements.

Resolutions concerning compensation for physicians serving on Selective Service boards were rejected.

Surgeon General Parran pointed out in his address that the plea of Great Britain for 1,000 young American physicians has not been met, and the House of Delegates at its executive session this afternoon recommended that the board of trustees formulate a policy and plans relative to the supply of physicians for aid to Britain as requested by the American Red Cross.

Johns Hopkins Weighs 3-Year Defense Course

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 3.—A Johns Hopkins University committee is considering the possibility of inaugurating courses of three years instead of four to speed training of specialists in the national defense effort, President Isaiah Bowman announced today.

Dr. Bowman made his announcement at commencement exercises, at which diplomas were presented to 500 graduates and the honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Daniel Willard, a Hopkins trustee who recently retired as president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad and became chairman of the board of directors.

Asserting that the university was "dedicated to national defense," Dr. Bowman said the three-year courses, if established, would be designed to expedite the training of such professional men as physicists, chemists, engineers and doctors.

"We believe," he said, "that it is easier for a patriotic man to go into the armed services and display his patriotism publicly than it is to train for a post in a minor but essential profession or industry where your visibility is low.

"A man's duty is to serve where he can serve best. We are entering a campaign, not a raid. We already know that every resource at our command, of science and spirit, is required to bring that campaign to a successful issue."

Dr. Bowman said there were deficiences in certain professions and skills vital to national defense and asserted that "the intelligent thing to do, the patriotic thing to do, is to enter courses of training and make up the deficiency."

Graduates from Washington, D. C., included:

Bachelor of Science
Sister M. Ann Francis Peach.
Master of Public Health
Edgar Bernard Johnwick.
Doctor of Medicine
Anne Elizabeth Pulcher, Milton Gusack, Eugene Meyer 3d, and Katherine Kempner Rice.
Doctor of Philosophy
Charles Edward Gauss and Alexander Nelson Dearmand Marchant.

Spiritual Need Is Stressed To Graduates

Emphasis on spiritual values in education is necessary to stop western civilization's drift toward chaos, Judge John A. Matthews, of New Jersey, Knight of Malta, told the graduating class of Trinity College yesterday.

"Values in education," he declared, "must be measured so that material prosperity and worldly pleasures will not be the sole end and aim of either education or life."

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Catholic Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, conferred diplomas on 77 graduates. Miss Sylvia Rivera, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, was the highest honor graduate, receiving the distinction cum laude.

Other members of the graduating class:

House Appropriations Group Praises NLRB

National Labor Relations Board has had a new experience. It has been praised by a Congressional committee, the House Appropriations Committee. "It appears," the committee said in its report on the board's 1942 appropriation, "that there is a genuine cooperative spirit now existing in the board and that the future holds promise for an effective, fair and impartial administration of the Labor Act." The committee also recommended an increased appropriation which would be sufficient to hire 92 additional employes, 8 in the enforcement division, 4 trial examiners and 7 field attorneys.

The committee, however, refused to go along on the board's request for $128,000 to reallocate positions that would raise the salaries of several hundred of its employes. Only $3,620 was allowed in pay raises for Civil Service employes whose jobs had been reallocated by the Civil Service Commission. Board Member William Leiserson told the committee that the board had recommended that its employes be brought under Civil Service by the Ramspeck Law, with almost no exceptions.

Representative Hobbs, of Alabama, collapsed last weekend from overwork. He's recovering . . . William LaVarre, the new chief of the American Republics unit of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, has directed his own exploring expeditions into Central and South American countries. He is a writer and lecturer . . . Washington National Airport is rushing plans to open next week . . . Group Health Association is moving along. It has added three new doctors to serve its 7,000 members and their families. The cooperative is considering a plan to build its own building.

Railroad Retirement is making a survey of unemployed railroad men for OPM . . . Agriculture Secretary Wickard has appointed a committee to study agricultural emergencies. Milton Eisenhower is chairman . . . Agriculture Recreation Association will sponsor a moonlight cruise down the Potomac tonight . . . Railroad Retirement has reduced its administrative costs to 2.5 per cent on each dollar paid out in benefits. The board was applauded for the reduction by the House Appropriations Committee . . . Federal Playhouse will present another of its performances in Agriculture Auditorium on June 12.

3 Pay Scales on Same Job

Inequity Department: The Navy Department Building is being repainted. On the job are employes of the Public Buildings Administration who are paid 62 cents an hour, Washington Navy Yard employes paid 75 cents an hour and employes of a private contractor who are paid $1.71 an hour.

Wage and Hour's lawyers, even in the field, will be placed under Labor Solicitor Jerry Reilly by the 1942 appropriation bill. Reilly wanted departmental attorneys under him but he didn't want to be responsible for field attorneys . . . Robert Smith's personnel division at the Labor Department is given 1 per cent of the department's total appropriation. That's the goal of all personnel chiefs . . . The report of the House Appropriations Committee criticized Labor Secretary Perkins for failing to set up standards of health and safety for workers in factories working on Government contracts. The committee contended that the Walsh-Healy Act gives her the authority to do it.

Dr. John Steelman, of the hard-working Conciliation Service, was given funds to hire 63 additional conciliators at salaries ranging from $2,000 to $4,600. Eighteen of the conciliators will be on the regular pay roll and 45 will be hired under a defense appropriation . . . Civil Service exams: Policemen for the Metropolitan Police Department and the National Park Service, $1,900 a year. Applicants must apply not later than June 16 and they must live in Washington or the metropolitan district which covers a radius of 12 miles from the Capitol Building.

Maryland, which recently tightened up on marriage laws, now has made divorce easier. The new law on divorces became effective Monday reducing the residence time from two years to one year and desertion from three years to 18 months. One Montgomery County attorney, Kenneth Lyddane, yesterday filed six divorce petitions under the new law.

Traffic Cut By Staggered Working Hours

Inauguration of staggered working hours for Federal employes on March 31 has resulted in a maximum 15 per cent reduction in traffic volume at certain downtown points, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer reported yesterday.

In weekly checks since the system was installed, it was found that along a section of Constitution Avenue the traffic count had dropped from a total of 6,288 vehicles between 8:30 and 9 a. m. before the change to 5,270 after.

Similar improvements are evident throughout the business area, Van Duzer declared. Checks were made at the following locations:

Pennsylvania Avenue between Seventh and Eighth Streets Northwest; Fourteenth Street Northwest between G Street and New York Avenue; Sixteenth Street Northwest south of Scott Circle; Massachusetts Avenue Northwest between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets.

Sixth Street Northwest between H and I Streets; Louisiana Avenue between North Capitol Street and Union Station; Virginia Avenue Northwest between Twenty-second and Twenty-third Streets; Thirteenth Street Northwest between I and K Streets and Constitution Avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets.

D. C. Employes Also Will Be Paid On Stagger Plan

The District will follow action of the Federal Government and stagger the paydays of its 14,000 employes, Commissioner John Russell Young said last night.

The stagger system of paying workers already has received approval of the three Commissioners, but official steps were postponed until it was known what Federal officials decided to do.

With an opinion from Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech that no legislation is necessary to put the stagger system in effect, Commissioner Young said the plan would receive official action at the board meeting Friday.

District Auditor Arthur W. Pilkerton has informed the Commissioners that the city's $27,600,000 annual pay roll can be so revised that the staggered system could become effective immediately.

Girl Fires Industrial Home School Draperies

A 15-year-old girl, disgruntled inmate of the Industrial School, was removed to the District Receiving Home last night after she set fire to draperies in the girls' locker room of the school.

Conrad Van Hyning, acting chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, said the girl set the blaze after going into a "rage." He had not learned the cause of her dissatisfaction, Van Hyning said.

Another inmate, aged 14, suffered a minor cut of the finger in pulling a fire alarm. The fire was extinguished before firemen arrived.

Trolley Motorman Robbed of $22

Two colored men, one with a pistol, robbed Motorman N. B. Fink of $22 shortly before last midnight in a Capital Transit street car on East Capitol Street, between First and Second.

Fink, 50, of 3232 M Street Southeast, reported the thugs failed to get $25 in bills which he kept in his pocket. They boarded the car at First and East Capitol Streets, took the motorman's change carrier and got off at Second Street.

There was one passenger on the car, but he failed to halt the robbers.

Howard Singer Shows He's on Way to Artistry

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Howard University School of Music presents Lawrence Whisonant, barytone, in his senior recital Tuesday evening in Andrew Rankin Chapel. Accompanist: Andres Wheatley. Program of songs by Vivaldi, Bononcini, Donaudy, Rossini, Brahms, Strauss, Wolf, Verdi, Debussy, Duparc, Rakhmaninov, Harry Burleigh and Cecil Cohen.

About to be graduated from Howard University School of Music with the degree of bachelor of music, Lawrence Whisonant gave his senior recital last evening in Andrew Rankin Chapel. Obviously, the young barytone has won both popularity and esteem on the campus, for the audience was large in numbers and benevolent in mood. The cordial applause was not a mere gesture of friendliness, but was merited by a promising singer who is on the right road to artistry. He has an excellent vocal equipment and his use of it shows awareness of the finer points of technique and interpretation.

BROWN

Aided by a deft and sympathetic accompanist, Andres Wheatley, and favored by an auditorium with good acoustics, Whisonant made a much better impression than in a previous joint recital this season.

In his program there was evidence that he does not intend to be confined by routine. There were, to be sure, some familiar items, such as Rossini's "La Danza," Rigoletto's denunciatory aria, "Cortigiani, vil razza;" Debussy's "Beau soir," and Rakhmaninov's "To the Children." But for his Italian group he had sought out Vivadi's "Un certo non so che," Bononcini's "Per la gloria" and Stafano Donaudy's "Quando ti rivedro."

His group of lieder avoided both the commonplace and the easy by including Brahm's "O wuesst' ich doch den Weg zurueck" and "Der Gang zum Liebsten."

Varied Program At Jewish Center

Jewish Community Center presents its Modern Dance Group (Flora Blumenthal, director) and its Women's Chorus (Miriam Berman, director) on Tuesday night in Cafritz Auditorium.

Two ensembles in the process of development were presented last evening at the Jewish Community Center in a varied program. Flora Blumenthal, director of the modern dance group, was assisted by Greta Atkin, Ruth Goldman, Dorothy Grossman, Sadelle Kaplan, Pearl Rappaport and Frances Tuppler in a study of primitive rhythms.

Miriam Berman directed a small woman's chorus in folk songs of Yiddish, Italian, German and Russian origin. The singers were Dorothy Brodsky, Esther Chernikov, Mary Golomb, Jeanette Luftig, Ida Penn, Hilda Penn, Sonya Spray, Ida Scolnik, Hilda Herzel, Janet Jacobs and Lillian Penn.

Woman, 2 Men Kill Selves Here in Day

Three persons took their lives in Washington yesterday.

Wilmot R. Squier, 39, well-known advertising executive, was found in the gas-filled kitchen of his mother's apartment at 65 M Street Northwest.

Julian Lee Cash, 25, killed himself with a .22-caliber rifle in his apartment at 51 Randolph Place Northwest.

Mrs. Virgie T. Groves, 45, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of her home at 1708 Long Place Northeast.

All were listed as suicides by the coroner's office.

Mr. Squier, president of the Washington Advertising Club in 1937, the youngest man ever to hold that post, was found by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Dorothy M. Squier, who entered the apartment with the janitor, Benjamin Allen, when she returned from work.

He was resting on four chairs near the kitchen stove. All gas jets were open.

Mr. Squier resigned the advertising managership of the Washington Gas Light Co. about three months ago, Detective Sergt. Fred W. Rawlinson said he was told.

Survivors include his wife, and three young children.

Cash's suicide followed a five-day separation from his 19-year-old bride of five months.

"I can't live without you," said a note to Mrs. Cash. "I hope you will forgive me."

The body was found slumped in a living room chair, a bullet wound in the temple, by the bride, June, and Cash's brother, William, 26.

Mrs. Cash said she and her husband had separated last Thursday because of a disagreement over finances. She had returned to the apartment Monday to get some clothing, she said, and her husband appeared in good spirits.

However, he did not report for work Monday afternoon at the Certified Bakery, where he was employed as a shipping clerk, and failed again to appear yesterday. The wife and brother went to the apartment at the request of the husband's employer.

Mrs. Groves was found in her kitchen by her husband, Cornelius, who told police his wife had been despondent recently because of ill health.

Retirement Aims Aired By Workers

Government Employe Groups to Press Plans Before House Committee Hearing

Representatives of Government employe organizations will tell the House Civil Service Committee what they think of proposals to liberalize civil service retirement benefits as the committee resumes hearings on more than a dozen bills at 10 a. m. today.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, yesterday urged the committee to amend the Ramspeck retirement bill to permit defense agencies to call back to work retired scientists, chemists and other specialists whose services may be essential to the defense program.

Mitchell read into the record a letter to Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, committee chairman, in which the commission gave general indorsement to the Ramspeck bill. The commission's stand on the measure and the amendments Mitchell proposed have been approved by the Budget Bureau.

Other changes in the bill proposed by the commission would provide a grade of retirement for employes who have worked for the Government for 35 years and would permit retiring employes to withdraw contributions to the retirement fund.

The Ramspeck bill would bring retirement privileges to some 400,000 Federal workers not covered by existing law. It would give workers the option of retiring at 60 years of age if they have served 30 years and at 62 years of age if they have spent 15 years in the service.

The bill also would give employes with 30 years' service a chance to retire when they become 55 years old.

Under existing law, compulsory retirement ages run from 62 to 70 with voluntary retirement starting at 60.

"Unqualified indorsement" of the bill was given the committee yesterday by Robert H. Alcorn, speaking for the Navy Yard Retirement Federation. Grace B. Klueg, also of the federation, urged enactment of the Randolph bill to pay annuities to widows of Government workers.

Moser declared Alifas' presentation to be "an imposition on the presumed generosity of Congress."

The Navy is having difficulty getting skilled mechanics for work in its shipyards because of the low Government wage scale, Alifas declared.

More than Congressional generosity is involved in Federal pensions, H. Eliot Kaplan, of the National Civil Service Reform League, told the committee. He called payment of retirement annuities "good Government practice."

Clarence Stinson, of the National Association of Letter Carriers, called for optional retirement after 30 years' service without age restriction.

2 Charged With Food Theft, Still Hungry

Two men were charged last night with housebreaking in connection with $90 worth of food they are said to have stolen but never had a chance to eat.

Workmen saw the men leaving a grocery store at 815 Fifteenth Street Northwest, with chicken, fish, vegetables, ham, steaks and bread and notified police.

Four First Precinct patrolmen arrived almost immediately, trailed the men to their homes, lodged them in jail without giving them time to attack the food. The men were booked as Abe Costello, 29, of 4908 C Street Southeast, and Arthur Byrd, colored, 33, of 1510 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

2 Women Hurt By Automobile In Safety Zone

Two women were injured last night when struck by an automobile while standing in a safety zone at Fourteenth Street and Spring Road Northwest. They were Emma Thomas, 66, of 1414 Quincy Street Northwest, suffering cuts and bruises, and Blanche Walker, 48, colored, 516 U Street Northwest, hip injury. Both were taken to Emergency Hospital.

Police said the driver of the auto was Marcus Brewster, 30, of 4304 East-West Highway, Bethesda.

Robert Hill, 5, of 1338 Twenty-eighth Street Southeast, was in Casualty Hospital with a possible fractured skull after he fell out of a taxi in which he was riding with his mother, Mrs. Ruth Hill, as the taxi turned a corner.

Junior Worthey, 4, colored, of 1109 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a possible skull fracture and fractured leg after he ran from between parked autos into a passing auto. Police said the driver, who took the child to the hospital, was Dr. William H. Greene, 38, colored, 702 S Street Northwest.

Edward Callahan, 70, of 1400 Lawrence Street Northeast, was taken to Providence Hospital with undetermined back injuries last night after he was struck while crossing the street at Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast. Police said the operator of the auto was Benjamin F. Green, jr., 24, colored, 2812 Sherman Avenue Northwest.

Installation By Columbia Heights Group

Combining business and pleasure in an active session closing its civic year, Columbia Heights Citizens Association installed officers, voted a half-dozen resolutions, and listened to a musical program.

The unit went on record favoring establishment of a nine-man recreation board.

Members also voted a motion offered by George H. Brown, president, which declared it would be "unwise to enter into any extensive highway projects based upon revenues from gas line taxes" because of the uncertainty of future gasoline prices and taxes.

In other action, the association favored the Capper bill for staggered Government paydays; attacked the action of the Commissioners in advocating standup drinking and liquors sales until 2 a. m. Sunday; supported in principal the proposal for the consolidation of police and municipal courts; sought an antinoise campaign here.

Officers installed were as follows: Brown, president; Dr. A. V. Smith, first vice president; Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, second vice president; E. B. Hoffman, third vice president; Walter I. Swanton, recording secretary (he will also serve as corresponding secretary); Col. G. B. Young, treasurer; delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations, Brown and Mrs. Howard.

Huff to Get Welfare Job, Says Report

Chief of District Penal Institutions Is Expected To Succeed Bondy

Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of District Penal Institutions since 1937, has been nominated to succeed Robert Bondy as director of public welfare, it was learned reliably at the District Building late yesterday.

The nomination was made by the Board of Public Welfare in executive session Monday, it was further reported.

Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the welfare board, said any official announcement of the nomination "must come from the Commissioners." He said all members of the board had been sworn to secrecy.

Report Expected Today

The Commissioners said they had not as yet received any report from the welfare board, but expected one today. Formal action is expected at Friday's board meeting of the Commissioners.

Bondy resigned May 31 to take an executive post with the American Red Cross. He will remain in Washington as director of services to the armed forces.

Huff was absent from the city yesterday and unavailable for comment. He was named general superintendent of District Penal Institutions in May, 1937, and took office June 1 of that year.

Was With Parole Board

At the time of his appointment, Huff was executive officer of the Federal Parole Board. He has been in prison and social service work since immediately after the World War. He served in the last war as a captain.

Huff was born February 8, 1896. In 1916 he received a Master of Arts degree from the University of Pittsburgh and did graduate work in the social sciences at Harvard, Alabama and George Washington universities.

In June of last year, Huff resigned his post here to become warden of the Federal prison at McNeil Island, Puget Sound, but was taken ill and spent several weeks in Mount Alto Hospital. When he recovered, the Commissioners renamed him to the local penal job.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

How to Be a Film Critic In One Simple Lesson

Veteran Gives First Aid to "Four-Year-Old"; That Crazy Radio Act Will Arrive on June 13; This, That and the Other About the Theater

Since we have banged away so persistently on the contention that all pictures should be photographed in Technicolor in the interest of complete realism, it seems worth setting down just what impending releases will be revealed in natural tints. Ready to go are "Billy the Kid," "Blood and Sand," "Blossoms in the Dust," "Moon Over Miami," "Shepherd of the Hills" and "The Reluctant Dragon." In production, "Aloma of the South Seas," "Bahama Passage," "Belle Starr," "Dive Bomber," "Mr. Bug Goes to Town," "Smilin' Thru" and "The Yearling." In preparation, "Bambi," "Jungle Book," "Louisiana Purchase," "Reap the Wild Wind," "Shadow of Their Wings" and "Weekend in Havana." Who is producing which will come out in due course.

That Antic "Act" Not Far Off

Ralph Edwards and his radio adaptation of the old parlor game, "Truth or Consequences," will arrive on the stage of the Earle Theater for the week beginning Friday, June 13 . . . This is no ordinary "quiz show" . . . The questions are fired at the victims merely as an excuse to tangle them up in the consequences of failure to answer correctly . . . "The Rhythm Rockets invite you to their Second Birthday Party and promise you a Capitol good time. Cosmos Room, Carlton Hotel, Saturday, June 7, 11 P. M. to ?" . . . Thanks for the memory . . . More soldiers, sailors, Marines and other service men are attending the Earle Theater this week than ever before in the history of the house . . . Makes First Hollywood Film

Having hoisted himself to the rank of international celebrity with a basketful of brilliant French comedy-dramas and doubled that rich reputation by his first English-language hit, "The Ghost Goes West," Rene Clair now has made his first American film in Hollywood. It is "The Flame of New Orleans," starring Marlene Dietrich, with Bruce Cabot, Andy Devine, Roland Young and Mischa Auer. With a cast like that, what has RKO-Keith's got to worry about?

MARIA MONTEZ AND MISCHA AUER,
described as "the most improbable love team of the year," tune up their more violent emotions between scenes of Universal's new musical comedy feature, "Moonlight in Hawaii." This, however, is purely extra-curricular, since Auer plays an orchestra conductor in the picture and Senorita Montez, Santo Domingo's gift to the screen, an Hawaiian charmer. Johnny Downs and Jane Frazee take care of the film's bona fide love-making

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 3 (INS).—Those two white hopes of the boxoffice, Lou Costello and Bud Abbott, are moving to M-G-M for "Rio Rita" and I don't care which other stars are lined up for this musical, I'm betting the exhibitors make these boys the top attraction. What a business their "In the Navy" is doing—second only to the record they set in "Buck Privates." It's no secret that the boxoffice isn't what it used to be, but Lou and Bud are dragging them into packed houses.

PARSONS

Now about this deal with M-G-M. The boys will make one picture a year at Culver City with Universal still holding first call on them the rest of the time.

ↀ

"Blood and Sand" which heaped such encomiums (good word) on the head of its director, Rouben Mamoulian, seems to have been lucky for him, for he has been paged by Helen Hayes to direct her in "Candle in the Wind," the Maxwell Anderson Theater Guild play. A Helen Hayes play is always an event and the combination of Hayes and Anderson is one that has the theater-going public greatly intrigued. Rouben has one picture to make for Twentieth Century-Fox before he goes to Broadway to direct the Anderson stage play which is a modern story laid in occupied France Darryl Zanuck is looking for a story for Mamoulian to get going as early as possible so he can keep his date on Broadway.

The handsome Latin, Alberto Villa—and that's the way his name is to be spelled from now on, will study English for three months before he has a role of any great importance. Buddy de Sylva, who recognizes in Villa a potential star of ability, realizes the boy must be able to speak better English before he attempts to act, so teachers have been engaged and when he has mastered the intricacies of the English language he will be starred in "Gentleman From Buenos Aires," a Paramount musical comedy.

ↀ

Over the weekend, about the only movie purchase that seems to have been consummated is "Jollity Building," the profile of a building currently appearing in the New Yorker. Kenneth MacKenna bought this series, by A. J. Liebling, for M-G-M to be incorporated into the "Maisie" series for Ann Sothern.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Eleanor Lewis, Joe Pasternak's capable secretary and one of the nicest girls in Hollywood, married Tillman Marcom at Las Vegas today; Bettye Avery, once engaged to Gov. Lehman's nephew, is now wearing Pat di Cicco's ring; congratulations to Queenie Vassar and Josep Cawthorn who celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary on Sunday.

When Gene Tierney eloped to Las Vegas, she obtained her plane reservation under the name of Belle Starr. Although Count Cassini was on the same plane they did not speak; Lupe Velez chattering like a magpie at the Brown Derby with Stephen Crane; George Murphy presented Bob Hope with a birthday cake at the Mocambo. Bob was cohost at the Pirates Den with Fred MacMurray and in ringside seats were Henry Fonda, John Wayne, Ian Hunter, Johnny Weissmuller, Jerry Colonna and Rudy Vallee and all of them helped entertain.

Ginger Rogers and Jimmie Stewart dancing at Ciro's brought back memories of the time when Ginger was Jimmie's favorite dancing partner;

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, June 3.

The popularity of slapstick comedy on the screen is one indication that this civilization, however dubious in other respects, hasn't lost its elementary sense of humor.

HOPPER

Some think that in these critical days, we haven't time for the nuances and innuendos of the ultra-sophisticated comedies of a short while ago. Our brains are weary and humor must be broad and bold to impress. Others, like Harry Langdon, the old-time comedian, think directors have run out of tricks and must start all over again. Whatever it may be, there's hope for a world that can still laugh at the falls Henry Fonda took in "The Lady Eve," the corny humor of "Buck Privates," or at Bill Powell's getting his head caught in a door for "Love Crazy."

And Bob Hope's "Caught in the Draft" is the best of all. The picture has you in stitches, and little Eddie Bracken, who made his first picture appearance a year ago in "Life With Henry Aldrich," not only is a knockout, but a standout. He's terrific, and I don't often use that word. So is Lynne Overman, but that's an old story. And Dottie Lamour's clothes are so smart you hope she'll never go back to saronging.

When Maxie Rosenbloom took the elevator to his hotel room, he carried his large suitcase under his arm. The operator eyed him for a couple of floors, then said, "Just set it down, sir."

"Nix on that," replied Maxie, "this elevator has enough lifting a lug like me. I'll carry me bag."

ↀ

With picture premieres taking place in odd corners, I'm wondering if Sam Goldwyn will hold the premiere of "The Blonde and the Burlesque Queen" at Minsky's, and let the real burlesque queens show the glamour girls how it's done—or vice versa . . . Model Georgia Carroll claims Carrollton, Md., is named after her umpty steenth grandfather, who was also a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Who says are movies ain't got class?

ↀ

Billy Gilbert's advice to young actors is this: Never wait for something to turn up. The actor who waits for a god part to fall in his lap is like the guy sitting in a field of clover with a pail between his knees, hoping a cow will back right into him.

ↀ

Fred Astaire had a letter from an actor fan of his in England, a dancer who asks for the routine of Fred's newest dances. "You see," wrote he, "I'm on night patrol, watching for planes on the moors in the north of England, and I just want to keep in practice during the night watch."

ↀ

Alexis Smith, the only femme in "Dive Bomber" is that conceited! And no wonder. She lunches daily with Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Regis Toomey, Ralph Bellamy, Allen Jenkins, Director Mike Curtiz and Producer Bob Lord. She may get another part soon, but she'll be boasting about this one to her grandchildren, if she's ever lucky enough to have any.

ↀ

West Side Tennis Club, on June 14, opens its new taproom with a "Babee in Toyland" party. I'm anxious to see some of our babes mechanized—their faces have been for a long time . . . Sight of the week is Veronica Lake doing water scenes for "Sullivan's Travels" in a bathing suit . . . And Bulgy Jack Oakie doing a hula in a grass skirt for "Navy Blues."

New Pictures Bolster Old In Theaters

Earle

"REACHING FOR THE SUN." Joel McCrea and Ellen Drew have the leads in this comedy of a Michigan clamdigger who goes to work in an automobile factory to make enough money to buy an outboard motor. Eddie Braken becomes McCrea's partner, but a girl enters the picture. Albert Dekker, Billy Gilbert, Bodil Ann Rosing and Regis Toomey are in the cast. Victor McLaglen headlines the stage revue, with Hector and his Pals, Margery Daye, Siggy Lane and the Roxyettes supporting the celebrated film star. Eileen Ritter continues her Sing-a-Song-with-Mike routine. Opens Friday morning.

Capitol

"A WOMAN'S FACE." Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas and Conrad Veidt are starred in this psychological thriller that is reported to give Miss Crawford her finest role in years—that of the scarred leader of a group of blackmailers. She falls in love with the doctor who renews her beauty, Osa Massen, Albert Basserman, Donald Meek and Marjorie Main complete the principals. On the stage, Major Bowes' fifth anniversary party will feature 25 "amateurs," some of whom have been touring for six years. The Rhythm Rockets, Lynn Allison, Sam Jack Kaufman and Art Brown also will be on deck. Opens tomorrow morning.

National

"FANTASIA." The Walt Disney full-length Technicolor cartoon has entered its fourth week on E Street. Performances are at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m., with all seats reserved. The symphonic score is played by the Philadelphia Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski conducting.

RKO-Keith's

"CITIZEN KANE." The Orson Welles production is in its third week on the Fifteenth Street screen. Welles wrote the story, adapted it to the screen, directed and plays the leading role—that of a powerful newspaper publisher. Showings at 2:30, 5 and 8:30 p. m., with all seats reserved for the evening performance only.

Metropolitan

"MEET JOHN DOE." Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck return in this latest Frank Capra film after two weeks at the Earle. The story concerns a newspaper publisher's promotion to an average man as a national hero. Edward Arnold, Walter Brennan, Spring Byington, James Gleason, Gene Lockhart and Regis Toomey are the other players. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"ROAD TO ZANZIBAR." As a result of an eleventh-hour decision, this Paramount comedy, costarring Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour, will be continued for another week, making its fourth on F Street. It has proved one of the smash laughing hits of the season. The supplementary short subjects also will be held over.

Little

"FLIGHT FROM DESTINY." The Thomas Mitchell triumph continues for a second week, with Jeffrey Lynn, Geraldine Fitzgerald and James Stephenson in the other pivotal roles. The story concerns a murder committed by a philosophy professor who has but six months to live.

Trans-Lux

"BEAUTIFUL ONTARIO." The Canadian province is the subject of the new week's travelogue at the newsreel theater. An "Information Please," with Author Louis Bromfield as guest expert; "Diving Thrills," with a team of water experts and a "Popeye" cartoon also are billed. Opens Friday morning.

Glen Echo

Wilson Line

S. S. MOUNT VERNON of the Wilson Line offers cruises twice daily to the George Washington estate, Mount Vernon. Steamer leaves the Seventh Street wharves at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. daily, with moonlight cruises down the Potomac nightly at 8:30. McWilliams' orchestra is aboard for dancing.

Potomac Line

S. S. POTOMAC cruises down the Potomac each evening, sailing from Seventh and Water Streets at 8:45 o'clock. There are midnight cruises every Saturday evening, sailing at 12:30 a. m. This weekend the McFarland Twins—George and Arthur—orchestra will play for dancing on both of the Saturday cruises.

Open-Air

"TIN PAN ALLEY," with Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie and Betty Grable, is the current film at the drive-in auto theater on the Richmond Highway. "Daytime Wife" and "Margie" form a double bill runnnig from tomorrow evening through the regular midnight showing Saturday night.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, June 3.

EVE CURIE: Did you cross the border to return here under the quota—preparatory to becoming an American citizen? . . . COL. LINDBERGH: All the front-pages recently announced that Sinclair Lewis had joined the sponsorship of the America First Committee. That isn't true. While the Nobel Prize winner doesn't favor convoys or our going to war, he is opposed to the America First Committee.

LEONARD LYONS

LORD HALIFAX: The Duchess of Windsor wants the wall of her Nassau home painted in flesh color. The decorators have had difficulty in getting the proper color. The Duchess therefore decided to take her own measures. "First," she ordered, "paint the walls white" . . . The decorators complied, and painted all the walls white. The Duchess thereupon removed her powder-puff from her case, and patted the flesh-color powder against the wall. "See?" she said, pointing to the powder-mark, "That's the color I want."

o+o

BARBARA HUTTON: Your cousin, Jimmy Donahue, applied for a post in the Air Corps, was accepted—but then he was rejected . . . MAYOR LaGUARDIA: David Niles, who worked with you on the Independent Committee during the recent Presidential campaign, will have a new job in Washington. Niles will become one of Sidney Hillman's aides . . . MOSS HART: Gertrude Lawrence will have to forego her plans to return to London, for her vacation. Instead, she wired the White House, volunteering for any job in which she can serve . . . COL. FRANK KNOX: Col. William J. Donovan, who visited the war fronts for you recently, will reenter the Government service shortly.

C. V. WHITNEY: The Ranee of Sarawak, who wants to fly back to her country in time to attend the one hundredth ansary of the First White Rajah's ascension to the throne, hasn't been able to get a reservation on your company's Clipper. Her husband, the Rajah, contributed over $1,500,000 to Britain, to help the Empire in its fight, but he couldn't get possession of the $900 in American currency, necessary for the trip . . . The Ranee therefore will leave from San Francisco, on an American ship. She plans to remain locked in her cabin when the vessel stops at a Japanese port—lest the Japanese detain her, in preparation for the Axis drive against the East Indies and Sarawak.

JESSE JONES: When the President creates his new department for Political and Economic Warfare, one of the principal posts will go to William Clayton, the Texas cotton man you first brought to Washington . . . JACK KIRKLAND: Anthony Brown, the producer of "Tobacco Road," was in the Stork Club Saturday night—after the show closed its run of more than seven years. He was asked about some of the scenes in "Tobacco Road" . . . "Oh, that. That was last week," Brown shrugged. "I'm only interested in my new show" . . . GOV. LEHMAN: Fiorello LaGuardia, who appointed you as a regional director of Home Defense, will appoint eight other regional directors.

ATTORNEY GEN. WILENTZ: The mysterious code-sheet which was found with a Bible, when your men raided the Bund's Camp Nordland last weekend, is part of a code system now commonly used by Nazi agents. Each agent is assigned a book—a book such as the Bible, "Gone With the Wind," "For Whom the Bell Tolls," or any other best-seller which can be obtained in any library in any town, no matter the size. The code numbers refer to a certain page in that book. The page number varies each day, and is arrived at by adding a series of numbers—the agent's personal number, plus the numbers in the date the message is sent. And so if Agent Number 58 sends or receives a code message on June 2, 1941, the page number would be 36—arrived at by adding the numerals 5-8-6-2-1-9-4-1.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA: The civilian defense committee of 20, which the President referred to in his declaration of unlimited emergency, will be increased . . . ADMIRAL H. R. STARK: Although the Hood has been sunk, not all of it went down in the Atlantic. A chessboard, inlaid with black walnut taken from H. M. S. Hood, was used in the chess-championship matches played in Staten Island, on the same day the battleship went down. It should be placed in one of the naval museums . . . BILLY ROSE: The first change Bob Sherwood will make, in the entertainment program for the Army camps, will be the privates to have the front seats—instead of the officers and their wives who, at the early shows, had reserved seats up front.

THOMAS E. DEWEY: At the 21 Club last week, a socialite lady was stationed at the door, selling $1 tickets for a show whose receipts would go to your civilian committee for work in the camps. She succeeded in obtaining large contributions from each arrival—collecting $50 and $100 from each purchase. When a tall handsome man, wearing a private's uniform, arrived, and proffered a $100 bill, after she gave him a ticket, the lady decided it was unfair to ask a $31-a-month private to pay so much. And so she began to count out the change—giving him $99 . . . Just then, a waiter approached the uniformed man. "All set," he told the private. "Your table is ready—Mr. Rockefeller."

Aero Body Asks Martial Law In Defense Tieups

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., June 3.—Establishment of martial law where interference with national defense requirements are involved and summary execution" of convicted saboteurs was "demanded of Congress and the national Administration" today by the National Aeronautic Association.

The organization, in convention here, is composed of several thousand members and is the largest group in the United States devoted to the promotion of American aviation. The membership includes Charles A. Lindbergh.

Resolutions Listed

The "demands" were included in resolutions adoted, as follows:

1. Make eligibility requirements for flying cadet personnel more practical by reducing the minimum age limit from 20 to 18 and education requirements to accredited high school graduates. This resolution was adopted after discussion in which it was contended that flying cadet procurement in the United States Army Air Corps was behind its quota.
2. Revised aviation organization structure in Government.
3. Standing committees on aviation in Congress.
4. Experienced aviation men and women in aviation jobs.
5. Immediate maximum expansion of the Federal airways system.
6. Immediate construction of maximum national airport system protected by uniform zoning principles.
7. Immediate construction of an adequate high-frequency radio system.
8. Overnight delivery of all first-class mail.
9. Maximum expansion of weather service implemented by expansion of training in higher educational institutions.
10. Continuation of civilian pilot training.
11. Further development of aviation curricula in the public schools.
12. Technical aviation training in certified trade schools by Government contract.

Brig. Gen. Donald H. Connolly, Civil Aeronautics Administrator, told the convention that Adolf Hitler's "evil deeds have put aviation forward 20 or 30 years."

"Hitler has misused the airplane," he said. "He has taken an invention which can—and eventually will—make good neighbors of the nations of the world, and used it to kill and enslave his neighbors. But to cope with him we are being forced to develop aviation beyond our wildest imaginings."

Devon Francis, aviation editor of the Associated Press Special News Service, was reelected president of the Aviation Writers Association at the annual business session of the group. Governors reelected included Joseph Edgerton, aviation editor of the Washington Star.

State to Ask Bids On New Potomac Span This Week

Baltimore, June 3 (AP).—The State roads commission has virtually completed surveys incident to construction of the $800,000 Sandy Hook Bridge across the Potomac River 2 miles below Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Bridge Engineer W. C. Hopkins said today.

Hopkins said bids for construction of the bridge would be advertised for within a few days, on completion of details on the Virginia site.

The State of Virginia is building a road to connect the bridge with West Virginia and is also constructing a road connecting with a highway to Washington. West Virginia will build a bridge across the Shenandoah, entering the Potomac at Harpers Ferry.

Traffic from Maryland will cross the new Sandy Hook bridge into Virginia, then enter West Virginia by following the west bank of the river into Harpers Ferry.

Huge U. S. Plane Engine Plant All but Bombproof, Experts Say

Hartford, Conn., June 3.—The Pratt & Whitney factory, which produces more than a third of America's military airplane engines, could stand a lot of bombing and still keep turning out 2,000 horsepower double wasps, experts agreed today.

Although in an apparently vulnerable seaboard position, the factory could absorb a score of bomb hits without shutting down because of its hugs size, fireproof construction, interchangeable tool system and subcontracts that spread its operations over New England and the Ohio Valley.

A group of 11 American foreign correspondents, recently returned from war zones, who were taken through the plant on a tour arranged by the National Association of Manufacturers and the War and Navy Departments, walked through 3 miles of main aisles. That distance alone would be more than that of 500 30-foot bomb craters laid end to end. Military men and company officials said the plant had not been designed with air-raid precautions in mind but that blackout plans had been prepared.

Other Bombproof Features

Besides its size—1,600,000 square feet—here are some of the plant's main bombproof features: It is single-story construction—no debris can fall from one story to another; there are duplicates of all vital machines in different parts of the plant; the floor of much of the section where heavy work is done is of wood-block over concrete, so thick that machines require no special bases. They could be shifted to any part of the factory.

Under one huge building is a cafeteria with a reinforced concrete roof that would afford some shelter against light bombs. In addition, the factory sublets the making of many of the 9,000 parts that go into a big engine to 600 factories through the Eastern States.

Frederick B. Rentschler, chairman of the board of directors, said Pratt & Whitney was keeping pace with airplane production and predicted that by this time next year the American engine industry would equal and probably surpass German output.

Justice Hughes had a longer and more useful career than an ironing board in a large family.

I remember that famous Presidential campaign in 1916 when Woodrow Wilson's campaign managers said Hughes would lose and verified the defeat with the slogan, "Whiskers divided against themselves must fall."

However, Justice Hughes was President for a night, or not quite long enough to veto a rumor. That was the year the outlying districts outlied each other.

They say the next Supreme Court will be without chinstraps for the first time in 80 years. Why, there won't be any place where an indignant citizen can get a grip.

Fast Boats Rushed To Carry Tanks

New Orleans, June 3 (AP).—Mass production of a new type fast boat able to transport 25,000-pound tanks and 75-MM guns will start here Thursday, Maj. E. E. Linsert, of the United States Marine Corps, announced today.

Maj. Linsert said this is the "first satisfactory type ever developed" for transporting such artillery and infantry equipment

Robot Bomber Planes Visioned in Near Future

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—The day of aerial battles and bombing forays executed by aviators on the ground a thousand miles away may still be far off, but it's steadily getting nearer.

The basis of such imaginings is that old will o' the wisp of aviation, the pilotless, radio-controlled airplane.

It's been dreamed about for so long that flying men yawn when you mention it. But the same skepticism marked the embryo days of every notable advance, from Noah's Ark to the automobile and television. And right now there's so much smoke in the radio-plane field that there's bound to be fire not far in the offing.

In the first place, both the Army and the Navy have been experimenting with radio-controlled planes.

During recent naval operations in Honolulu it was unofficially but reliably reported that a pilotless plane, controlled by radio from another plane, was sent off from an airport and flown over cruiser units at sea.

And the Army Air Corps officers at Selfridge Field, Detroit, have been making no secret of surprising experiments with robot ships.

The planes in use there are obsolete two-seater biplanes, converted into single-seaters, with one set of controls, operated through radio-controlled mechanism by a "flier" on the ground.

Costly to Produce

The other set of controls, disconnected but usable at the flick of a switch, is in the cockpit with an observer flier, who goes along to grab the ship if it gets out of control and to save all the apparatus from being smashed.

The main reason these planes haven't been adopted widely for target practice and actual fighting is their cost. A two-engined plane costs around $25,000, and a bomber at least $50,000. When you have spent that much for a plane, you might as well put a man in it to make sure that it is operated correctly as to entrust uncertain apparatus to do the same job. When the cost of making a robot plane gets a lot lower, and the demand for fliers exceeds the supply more than at present, it might be feasible to put a fleet of robots in the air.

How such a ship would operate in actual combat may be imagined from the statement of an American volunteer in the British Air Service, Patrick Breen, of New York, who thought, from its strange behavior, that he might have seen one in operation during a German bombing raid on London.

"The plane was a twin-engine bomber," he related, "and it was at less than 5,000 feet, because I could see the insignia on its tail.

Flight Described

"Antiaircraft guns blasted away at it, but it continued on a direct course across Victoria Station in a direct line for the Parliament Buildings and the River Thames. "It did not change course one bit. It did not climb or glide or turn all the time it was in sight, which certainly led me to believe that the machine was radio-controlled, probably from a plane 'way up."

An enthusiastic experimenter with robot planes is Reginald Denny, the movie actor. He was a British aviator observer in the World War, and he got so interested in model airplanes a few years ago that he gave up acting to manufacture them.

"Television Eyes"

He has developed a 14-foot wing-spread radio plane, ideal for aerial target practice, with a trick parachute device he invented which floats the plane gently to the ground if it is disabled. He announced the other day that his plant had been awarded a contract to build a number of them for the Army.

So radio-controlled planes are considerably out of the pipe-dream class, and if they can be operated as effectively as the present model ones the day is bound to come when full-size ones will be hurtling through the air on real missions.

The main drawback in operating them, to date, is that being controlled from the ground they are useless beyond the horizon where the operator can't see what's happening to them.

But there's an answer for this problem from no less an authority than Dr. Lee De Forest, the radio pioneer, who, with U. A. Sanabria, electrical engineer-inventor, is applying scientific knowledge to an idea that has occurred to a lot of people—making robot planes effective at long distances by equipping them with television mechanical "eyes."

Comdr. Jones, Navy Aide, Kills Self in Ulster

LIEUT. COMDR. WALTER R. JONES

The Navy announced yesterday that Lieut. Comdr. Walter Raymond Jones, assistant naval attache in London and former commander of the Presidential yacht Potomac, had committed suicide Monday.

From Londonderry, Ireland, the United Press reported that Commander Jones committed suicide aboard a British warship there while temporarily insane, according to the verdict of an inquest.

Jones was stabbed in the heart with a bayonet and died within a few minutes. Though he had been suffering from a nervous breakdown for some time he had insisted, contrary to medical advice, on staying at his post and refusing to take a holiday.

A native of Grand Ledge, Mich., Commander Jones, 43, was well known here. He served with the Navy Department public relations branch from 1928 to 1930 and at the navy yard here from 1933 to 1935. In 1934, he was named White House aide and the next year given command of the Presidents' launch, U. S. S. Sequoia.

Later, Commander Jones supervised the fitting out of the Potomac for President Roosevelt's use, and commanded it until ordered to duty with the fleet in 1937. He returned the next year to command the Potomac and serve as White House aide, serving until he was sent to London last winter.

An uncle, J. C. Jones, of Grand Ledge, Mich., was listed as the next of kin.

Japanese Get Big Oil Stores

Saigon, French Indo-China, June 3 (AP).—United States oilmen in Hanoi reported today that the Japanese took 127,000 gallons of American aviation gasoline with other oil stocks when they seized American merchandise which had been en route to China at Haiphong May 5.

Members of the French Indo-China government, who called the seizure a "Japanese military robbery scheme," referred it to Vichy, which was reported to have protested to Tokyo.

Turks Can Put Up Good Fight If They Would

By Louis F. Keemle,

United Press Analyst.

Turkey is an important factor in the battle between the Axis and Britan for control of the eastern Mediterranean. It might be the decisive one of the eastern end of the Axis pincers move against Suez, the western end being Libya in North Africa.

Germany having conquered Crete by one of the most extraordinary attacks in military history, the general expectation among British military observers is that the next move on the eastern end of the pincers will be against Cyprus, thence to Syria, just a jump across the water, and down the Palestine coast to Suez.

British opinion, as reflected in the press and public utterances, has been demanding an effort to offset that by British occupation of French-mandated Syria, to protect Cyprus from the east and guard the Mediterranean outlets of the Mosul oil fields.

Surprise Move Likely

Adolf Hitler, however, calls his own shots in a military campaign. If the British expect him to move in the fashion indicated and concentrate their forces against it, past experience has shown that he is quite capable of a surprise move in another direction.

A move through Turkey would give Hitler an overland route from the Balkans, which he completely dominates. It would permit the pouring into the Near East of strong panzer divisions which could scarcely be transported by sea from Greece by the circuitous route past Crete and Cyprus to skirt Turkey.

Turkish highways and railroads are inadequate for an operation of the sort, but similar difficulties were overcome by Hitler in the Balkans, notably in Yugoslavia and Greece, where there was the additional handicap of armed resistance.

If Turkey should resist, Hitler would have a hard campaign, probably much harder than the one in Greece. Britain, meanwhile, would have ample warning to move up from the south and try to check the advance at the Syrian border.

Looks to Russia, Not Britain

But Turkey's position is at the best debatable. Ankara has given pledges of friendship to Britain, and has received from her valuable stores of airplanes, artillery, anti-tank guns, mechanized equipment and other essential weapons.

Turkey, from the best available sources of information, has a stronger army than any of the Balkan states which have succumbed. She also has formidable defenses along the Dardanelles, and enough naval and air strength to put up a strong fight against invasion.

Rosicrucian Order Leader Denies Pianist's Charges

Los Angeles, June 3 (AP).—Answering a $1,000,000 damage suit brought by Jeanette Scott Seymour Young, 27, concert pianist, Ralph Maxwell Lewis, of San Jose, Calif., has filed in court a general denial of all charges.

Miss Young's suit stated she became engaged to Lewis, president of the Rosicrucian Order, Amorc Branch; that he and others had her placed in the Norwalk State Hospital for the Insane, and that she was forced to undergo a sterilization operation there.

Lewis denied they were engaged and said the only time he could recall having seen Miss Young was during a five-minute interview at the Rosicrucian convention at San Jose July 12, 1934.

He said he had nothing to do with Miss Young's commitment to the Norwalk Hospital and that hospital officials informed him she "never was unsexed by any method" while there.

Lewis declared that documents on file with the Los Angeles County clerk indicated Miss Young had gone to the hospital voluntarily.

PAUL YOUNG'S SWITCHES PLANS. That most-hilarious nitery, Paul Young's, will close for the summer after next Saturday night instead of carrynig along until June 9 as originally planned. The switch has been prompted by certain of the new ABC regulations which tend to tone down Sunday eve partying . . . So you'd better get set to enjoy Paul Young doin's to the top between now and Saturday midnight. Al Spieldock's madly boiling "jive," De Lloyd McKaye's uncanny "boogie-woogie" and Mac Pepper's high and wide jesting will all be in high speed until the curtain rings down. And how we're going to miss them later!

A duel of violin music recently took place in Ciro's Famous Village when Durward Bowersox, of the Rainbow Room Orchestra, and his comely missus dropped in to visit with Violinist Evelyn Scott. Durward and Evelyn went to grade school together.

SNAZZY STEPPING. Some of our town's smoothest dancing pairs are always to be seen around the Mayflower Lounge. For sheer sleekness it's hard to top Janet Hartz and Walter Gallagher. You who talk a good rumba might take a lesson from Ann Page and Harvey Blair. The married folks do all right, too. Especially Mr. and Mrs. William Van Dusen and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Krafft. Among the gifted dancing visitors are Mr. and Mrs. Bob Considine. Sports Writer Considine is as handy with his tootsies as with a typewriter.

SEVENTY PER CENT ODDS. "Appearance counts for 70 per cent of a showman's success. That's what we were told in vaudeville. We had to look li. e a combination of Beau Brummel and an Esquire picture before an agent would give us a buzz." So said Jimmy Summerville, leader of Hi Hat's Four M's, a vaudeville veteran and a finished showman. As an example of what he meant, take a look at the new uniforms of the Four M's. They're impeccable.

SLAPSTICK VIOLIN. A pair of fiddlin' funnies are Powell and Knox, who head Lotus' "Broadway Revue." Their fiddling takes on the character of a feat when they wield their bows while dancing and doing acrobatics.

Glen Echo's bandsmen have the strangest hobbies. Dick Leith's is growing mustaches. But they always disappear the day after Maestro Paul Kain notices the first hirsute shadow on Dick's lip. Drummer Sammy Ferro's hobby is wood carving, which is said to "astonish his friends." We'll bet it does!

APPROACHING PARTIES. "Miss Treasury" will be selected at the annual outing and picnic of the Treasury Recreation Association at Marshall Hall on June 22. This is always a huge and happy party . . . The Kappa Gamma Sorority will sponsor a moonlight cruise aboard the good ship Mount Vernon on June 24. There'll be "many added attractions." Just as if they needed any beyond the Kappa Gamma girls. . . . Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, opines that the sweetest party he'll attend this year will be on June 7, when his little daughter, Patricia, will be 10 years old.

EYE-CATCHING COSTUMES. The white cable lace trimming used on a black frock by Jane Marlow, violinist of Restaurant "823." Looks like white icing put on with a pastry tube . . . The ethereal chartreuse chiffon worn by Louise La Tour, crystal reader of the Pall Room. And she carries a huge royal blue chiffon hankie that matches the backs of her fortune telling cards . . . Ida Clarke, blonde organist of the Lounge Riviera, looks verra chic in bright red chiffon with a long evening wrap of white wool.

SHORT STORIES. The twin baby daughters of Milton Strauss, of the Shoreham's Barnee-Lowe Orchestra, have been named Judith and Janet . . . This somehow reminds us that Joe Collins, leader of the Mad Hatters at the Neptune Room, says that the oldest request number he's received was "It's Delightful to Be Married," asked for by an elderly couple who remembered it from Anna Held's heyday. . . . Dick Wilson, new leader on the Starlight Roof, is a native son of Little Rock, Ark. . . . George Smith, bassist with Jack Schafer's Casino Royal Band, is studying his questionnaire . . . Mayfair's Chordsmen supplied musical background for the New York presentations of "Glamour Preferred" and "Mr. and Mrs. North." They played from a stage box . . . Favorite heroine of Owner Fred Johansen, of the Silver Fox, is the late Mrs. Sally Pickett, noted society editor who used to patronize his plushy Pierre's when it flourished next to the Metropolitan Club . . . If you're out on the Kenwood links and see a handsome, curly-headed young man, it may be Maestro Jack Coffey, of the Metrohome Room, who alleges he's shooting in the low 80's.

Valentina, Madrillon's sultry new chanteuse, has a mania for fancy shoes, turbans and oriental jewelry. And she always carries a good luck charm given her by her father, Eduardo Fontana, tenor of the Metropolitan. It's a little Chinese god of happiness.

PET SUBURBAN NITERIES. NIGHTINGALE. Rodd Raffell's 14-man orchestra gives that smoothie 1941 touch to all the new music, with much credit due also to Pianist-arranger Dan Wilson. Their version of "Do I Worry?" is a dizzy and dazzling example of Raffell-Wilson technique.

RIVER BEND is by way of being quite a haven for officers and soldier lads from Fort Belvoir. It's that combination of George Stein's jolly dance music and chicken dinners perfecto and biggo.

FOODERY. The lemon chiffon pie at Olmsted's is so delish that we never get around to ordering any other dessert . . . the steaks at the Plymouth are thick as some people's heads. But the comparison stops there. For the Plymouth steaks are sumptuous and scrumptious . . . Dick's grill is featuring a summer luncheon of fat and interesting sandwiches, desserts and beverages. . . . Most people think of Kavakos Grill as primarily a dancery. But the food served from their grill is fine, savory and hearty.

Browns Beat Nats in Night Walkathon, 14-12

Leonard Blasted From Mound After Early's Homer Ties Night Game Score

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, June 3.—The difficult feat of making 20 hits and losing a ball game was performed by the Nats tonight. Despite their lustiest attack of the season, they got themselves licked, 14 to 12, by the St. Louis Browns.

Far, far into the night raged the three-hour battle, but it was decided in the fifth inning when the Browns began crossing the plate in a seemingly endless parade. Nine runs the Browns packed into that fifth inning and their ten hits in the inning fell only two shy of tying the record established in 1902 by the Athletics.

Only 3,058 fans turned out for the nocturnal battle on a chill mist-filled evening but in that fifth inning the Browns seemed intent on scoring one run for each person in the park.

Leonard Chased

They knocked Dutch Leonard loose from a 5-3 lead in that fifth, and knocked him out of the box. They banged Walter Masterson for five hits when he poked his nose into the inning, and when last seen in the fifth the Browns were also mauling Bill Zuber about unkindly.

All told the Browns collected 18 hits off four Washington pitchers. Vernon Kennedy finally found his way into the box and gave up the last two St. Louis runs. Bucky Harris' pitchers were giving runs back to the Browns at a faster rate than the Nats could score even on an evening when the Nats were combining a normal two-game output of hits into one contest.

Gamely enough, Jack Early and Cecil Travis attempted to keep the Nats in the ball game with sheer slug. Early swatted five straight hits including a home run with two men on base that wiped out an early 3-0 lead of the Browns. Travis, awakening from his recent batting slump, pumped out four straight hits.

Tying Runs on Base

Despite the Browns' nine-run outburst that gave them a 12-5 lead in the fifth, the Nats had the tying runs on base in both the eighth and the ninth, but St. Louis' fourth pitcher, George Castor, halted those threats and the Washington hitters were probably exhausted anyway.

Leonard made a botch of the ball game from the outset and was knocked from the box for the fifth straight time—a sad commentary on the 1941 effectiveness of his knuckle ball.

Roy Cullenbine, the Browns' league-leading hitter, was the particular tormentor of the pitching. He collected five of the Browns' hits, including two doubles and a triple.

Early jolted Elden Auker out of his 3-0 lead in the fourth inning when he clouted a home run onto the right-field roof after Travis and Myer had singled, and in the fifth the Nats moved in front, 5-2, on singles by Cramer, Travis and Early.

Cullenbine tripled off the center-field wall. Clift flied out to center, Cullenbine scoring. Grace singled to center and came in as Berardino doubled to left. With two runs across and the score tied a 5-5, Masterson replaced Leonard. Ferrell greeted him with a single to left, Pinch-hitter Swift singled to center, Lucadello flied out, McQuinn singled to center, Laabs singled to right, Cullenbine doubled to right for his second extra-base hit of the inning, and Clift drew a walk. With six runs across in the inning, Zuber replaced Masterson and Grace greeted him with a two-run single. Berardino singled to center for the last run of the inning.

The Nats tried to get back in the ball game in the sixth. Case singled, and Lewis hit home run behind him. Singles by Travis, Myer and Early produced two more runs in the inning, and the Browns' lead was cut to 12-9.

Rally Goes Pfffft

It was 12-10 after the Nats seventh when Archie led off with a pinch-hit single to left against Bill Trotter. Lewis eventually drove in a run with a double to right.

But just as the Nats were visioning a possible tie, Vernon Kennedy, former Brownie, let the game get out of hand in the seventh. He walked four batters, including the pitcher, forced one run across the plate, and saw another score on McQuinn's single to right. There was a suspicion that the Browns had traded a Trojan Horse to the Nats.

Now trailing by four runs, the Nats got tough with Trotter in the eighth. They scored twice with the help of singles by Vernon, Early, Pofahl and Case, and a wild throw by Lucadello. The tying runs were on base when Lewis flied out.

There was a slight flurry in the ninth when Cramer led off with a single but Travis hit into a double play. Vernon drew a walk, but Myer flied out. It was the end, but not of a perfect evening.

Billy Conn Finally Gives Up Light Heavy Title

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Billy Conn today officially became former light-heavyweight champion, relinquishing his claim on that title as he and Joe Louis met before the New York State Boxing Commission to sign articles for their 15-round heavyweight championship bout at the Polo Grounds June 18. Each posted a $5,000 forfeit.

Conn's pilot, Johnny Ray, said that inasmuch as Conn had won the light-heavy crown in New York he felt it fitting that it be relinquished before the New York commission. The action paves the way for recognition of the winner of the Gus Lesnevich-Jimmy Webb fight as champion.

Mrs. Brandon Beats Mrs. Walper at Manor

Medalist in D. C. Women's Championship Play Remains Featured Player After 1st Round

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Thomas O. Brandon remained in the featured role of the District Women's Championship yesterday at Manor by following up her medalist performance of Monday with a first-round victory over the 1939 titlist and last year's runner-up, Mrs. Leo Walper.

Mrs. Brandon's victory, which came as quite a surprise here although she has a fine tournament record on the West Coast and in Hawaii, was accomplished by a 3 and 2 margin, after leading from the third hole.

As a great majority of the initial round matches ran true to form the luck of the draw served up a prize package for today's quarter-finals, Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the Maryland State champion, against Mrs. T. F. Neblett, Manor's newcomer, with a varied list of Southern titles to her credit.

There is a headlinee match in the lower bracket, too, as Defending Champion Elizabeth Houghton faces a former crown-wearer, Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley. Both scored easily, Miss Houghton over Mrs. Woodlief Thomas, 6 and 4, with her best round in some time, and Mrs. Meckley over Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, 5 and 4, despite losing the eighth and ninth holes to a birdie and par.

Mrs. Davy Impressive

Mrs. Myron Davy was an impressive 6 and 4 victor over Mrs. M. K. Barroll, and the Columbia player qualified as today's opponent of Mrs. Brandon, her partner in the team matches, in another of the exceptional second-round pairings. Mrs. Davy played the round out and was 34.

Mrs. Hume Peabody, sole remaining Army and Navy Club representative, pulled out of a two-hole deficit at the turn to defeat Mrs. L. G. Pray, the host club champion, 2 and 1, with a last nine comeback.

Mrs. Peabody, who reached the semifinals two years ago, will meet another host player today in Mrs. H. J. Simons, who defeated Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts in the only last-hole match of the day in the championship flight, 1 up. Mrs. Simons was also two down at the turn, but evened the match midway on the back nine, won the sixteenth and protected her margin by halving the final holes.

Mrs. Neblett needed par in for

Florida Race Future Hangs On Tax Plan

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., June 3.—Sam H. McCormick secretary of the Miami Jockey Club, said today he saw no hope for horse racing in Florida if Congress added a 12½ per cent Federal tax on pari-mutuel wagering to the 15 per cent "take" voted by the State Legislature.

Such a tax, McCormick declared, is "inconceivable."

The legislature recently voted an extra 5 per cent tax to obtain old age pension funds. The previous "take" was 10 per cent, the track getting 7 per cent and the State 3 per cent.

"I cannot see how it is possible for any track to operate if there is a 27½ per cent mutuel take," McCormick said.

"Players simply won't bet under those conditions."

Miami Jockey Club officials are attempting to devise a plan whereby the Hialeah Park track can operate under the 15 per cent law and still present its high class stake program. Hialeah is the scene each winter of the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes for 3-year-olds and the $50,000 added Widener Cup for handicap horses.

Braves' Errickson Weds Home Town Girl

Final Rites Set Today In New York

Private Services Will Be Held This Morning For Family, Friends Of Star Player

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Lou Gehrig in the same semi-privacy in which the great first baseman of the New York Yankees battled disease for two years.

From all parts of the country messages of condolence today poured into Gehrig's home and the offices of the ball club. Baseball notables arranged to be here for the last rites, and fans who never had been closer to him than the bleachers of Qankee Stadium, filed past his bier for one final look at the unforgettable "Iron Horse," who played 2,130 consecutive games in 14 years.

For hours after his body was placed on view in an uptown funeral parlor tonight, baseball fans and notables filed past the bier. Babe Ruth, his old teammate, and Bill Klem, veteran National League umpire, were among those who arrived early, threaded their way through the huge crowd outside the building and paid tribute at the flower-banked casket.

A minute of silence in Gehrig's memory was observed at the National League games at Polo grounds and Ebbets Field and flags on public buildings throughout this metropolis were lowered to half-mast at the direction of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

Big and Small Pay Tribute

The mourning was so general that arrangements were made for the public to view the body this afternoon and night instead of limiting this privilege to intimate friends. During the hours the casket was open, first at the Church of the Divine Paternity in upper manhattan and later at Christ Episcopal Church in the pretty Riverdale section of the Bronx, thousands of persons passed through.

They included residents of the neighborhood, policemen, laborers, men and women from all walks of life, and nine boys fumbling baseball caps and gloves in awkward hands as they looked for the last time on an old hero. They were members of a class baseball team at the High School of Commerce where Gehrig himself began his sports career.

But the funeral at 9 a. m. (E.S.T.) tomorrow at Christ Church, a little chapel a block from Gehrig's home, was to be limited to the family and friends.

McCarthy, Dickey Fly In

Manager Joe McCarthy and Catcher Bill Dickey of the Yankees arranged to fly here from Detroit. Dickey, who was Gehrig's, roommate in the ball club's travels for many years, some time ago promised his friend that he would come from wherever he might be in the event of death.

William Harridge, President of the American League in which Gehig starred, headed from Chicago in company with Leslie O'Conner, secretary to Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

Honorary pallbearers named included Mayor LaGuardia, McCarthy, Dickey, John Kieran, sports columnist of th New York Times; Christy Walsh, publicist; John Maher and Mary Fraschi, members of the Municipal Parole Commission on which Gehrig served for the last year and a half; Dr. Caldwell B. Esselstyn, his personal physician, and four members of the

Lou Gehrig More Than Most Durable

St. Louis, June 3.—The pity is, of course, that the fullness of the man's character could not be properly appreciated, save by his intimates, until Lou Gehrig was dead. Gehrig was something more than the most durable ball player of all time. Within the "Iron Horse" of the diamond dwelt a heart that beat with all of the human emotions.

POVICH

Not until "Gehrig Day" on a July afternoon in 1939 at Yankee Stadium was the public first privileged to study the man as other than a ball player. He was at the end of his career, wasting physically as the victim of a dread, incurable disease. In deep tribute to him, there were speeches and gifts. Sympathy for the big guy was the keynote. It was known that he was not long for this world.

It was not until Gehrig, himself, stepped into the circle of microphones at home plate, that the 60,000 in the stands and the millions in the radio audience were enabled to make a new appraisal of the man. This was the prime display of his courage. Leaning on Babe Ruth for support, he proved capable of summoning a smile to his tear-marked face and said:

"Thanks, everybody." And then made one of the most remarkable speeches these ears ever heard. We wish memory permitted us to quote him verbatim, but the gist of his talk will never be lost upon us. Gehrig cited his long and happy baseball career. He talked of his parents and their kindness to him. He spoke of "the finest wife in the world." He told of his pride in his Yankee teammates, and he spoke of his roommate Bill Dickey.

He stood out there in the midst of that throng of 60,000, themselves wet-eyed and deeply moved, and he would not have himself an object of their pity. "Rare it is," Gehrig said, "that a man in his lifetime could have as many friends and as much of this world's pleasures as I." And then he glared into the microphones and said: "I consider myself the luckiest man in this world."

Was Happiest Serving Fellow Man

There's no harm now in relating the latter-day physical helplessness of Gehrig as a member of the New York City Parole Board. He loved that job Mayor LaGuardia had given him with the complete approval of the New York public despite the fact that Gehrig was totally inexperienced in parole work. Lou was glad now that he had a place in society except as a ball player and particularly was he pleased to be in a position where he could be helpful to fellow men.

Gehrig went to his office every day, despite the ravages of his disease, until doctors cautioned him to remain at home. Actually, the strength had gone from his body to the extent that he could not write with a pen. On official papers that needed his approval, he was reduced to making a simple mark honest.

Among the thousands of letters of sympathy, Gehrig noted one request from an Illinois fan who submitted an aged score card bearing the autographs of Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson and Babe Ruth. "Would Gehrig kindly affix his own autograph?"

From his bed, Lou called his nurse. "Bring me a pen, please," he asked. The nurse brought the pen. "Now place your hand around my fist," said Gehrig. And together, with the nurse's hand guiding the pen in Gehrig's fingers, Lou scratched out the last Lou Gehrig autograph.

Gehrig Content to Stay in Background

There's an old Yankee who has caught on as a coach in the majors, who for years has spoken of Gehrig with reverence. "I guess I never really knew the fellow even during the years I was playing with him," he said, "until I fell down in my luck. I couldn't even get a minor league job, and there was a family I ha dto support. Gehrig came to my house in Brooklyn and he left a check there that had four figures on it. 'That's a gift,' he said. 'If you try to pay it back I'll be mad with ya.'"

Never was there any friction between Gehrig and Babe Ruth, despite the fact that in their latter days with the Yankees Lou was the more productive of the home-run twins. Gehrig was content to bask in the shadow of Ruth even when his own feats were more important to the Yankees. Never was there any attempt by Gehrig to usurp the King of Swat in the public eye. Lou was content to let the Babe do the spectacular. His own private pride was the record for durability that he was making.

Gehrig never got mad at anybody. When tempers were short between the Yankees and Nats back in the early '30s, Buddy Myer barged into first base spikes first and virtually undressed Gehrig, whose uniform was ranging in tatters. Big Lou, who simply stood his ground and held the ball, just looked derisively at Myer, who was dumped unceremoniously on the baselines 10 feet beyond the bag. In that famed 1932 riot game in Washington when a half dozen Yankees were swinging bats in the general melee, Gehrig calmly sat it out on the bench because he didn't like that sort of stuff. That was Lou Gehrig.

Southern Conference Bars Richmond U.'s Star Tackle

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., June 3.—The Southern Conference executive committee has ruled Andy Fronczek, University of Richmond tackle and cocaptain-elect of the 1941 football team, ineligible for further grid competition in the loop.

President F. W. Boatwright of Richmond was advised of the decision by mail today from Dr. Allen W. Hobbs, of North Carolina, president of the conference. Dr. Boatwright said he was "disappointed" but that the university would abide by the committee's ruling.

Richmond's faculty committee on athletics asked Dr. Hobbs for a ruling early in the spring when it learned that Fronczek, voted a tackle berth on the all-conference team last year, played in a "freshman" game for Drake against Creighton while a transfer student there in 1939.

Fronczek said he did not consider the game a regular freshman contest. Conference rules bar any ath-

Mrs. Belin Strokes Way Into City Net Tourney Semifinals

'39 Champion Wins Over Sara Moore

2-Time Titleholder Returns to Form; Willie Herbert, Margo Lee Advance

By Jack Munhall

Two-time Champion Mary Cootes Belin bid fair to brand herself a poor prophet yesterday as she flashed back to her 1937-1939 form and led two other players into the semifinals of the City of Washington women's tennis tournament at Army-Navy Country Club.

Demonstrating she has lost none of the competitive fire which she feared she might have because of "too many social doubles," Mrs. Belin outlasted Sara Moore, the 1933 champion, in three sparkling sets. Mrs. Belin won, 6—2, 4—6, 6—2, in her first match, after a bye and a default, and proved to herself and to the few remaining witnesses to the last contest of the day that she can still respond under pressure. Monday Mrs. Belin was skeptical of her chance of gaining the finals due to her lack of keen competition.

Joining the tall and willowy Mrs. Belin in the semifinals were Defending Champion Margo Lee, the Monday bride-to-be, and Willie O'Steen Herbert, the former District champion, who has won about every important title hereabouts except the City of Washington. Miss Lee overpowered Frances Rowan, 6—1, 6—2, and Mrs. Herbert romped over Jane Wilmerding, 6—1, 6—2.

Decker-Smith Match Held Up

The scheduled fourth quarter-finals match between Charlotte Decker and Peggy Keyser Smith was postponed until today when Miss Decker reported sick and asked a day of grace.

The Belin-Moore match, ballyhooed since they were bracketed in the same half of the draw, lived up to all expectations. Miss Moore, appearing somewhat slower than in 1938 when she last took part in this tournament, still employs a clever two-sided attack which keeps any opponent busy. Though Mrs. Belin's two winning sets of 6—2 were decisive, many of the games went to deuce and there was, until the last point of the match, some uncertainty as to the result.

For Miss Moore, after overcoming a deficit of 3-0 and 40-love to win the second set, fought off five match points before she finally let Mrs. Belin through to victory by netting a cross-court forehand. The rains which fell intermittently all afternoon made a dramatic interruption in the match. When Mrs. Belin led 3-0 and 40-love they were forced to halt play and wait until showers blew over.

Won the Hard Way

When they resumed their game Mrs. Belin sportingly offered to begin the fourth game over again, but Miss Moore declined the advantage and won that game the hard way, and then went on to run off four more games and forge ahead, 5-3. Mrs. Belin made a mild rally by taking the fifth game, but Miss Moore won a deserved victory in that set by closing out in the tenth.

Doubles drawings were made yesterday and play will begin today among the eight tandems entered. Top-seeded are Brs. Belin and Mrs. Rowan, followed by Miss Decker and Mrs. Herbert. Mrs. Herbert and Miss Lee won the doubles title last year but split up their team this time because of Miss Lee's forthcoming nuptials.

Yesterday's Results

Quarter-finals—Mary Cootes Belin defeated Sara Moore, 6—2, 4—6, 6—2; Margo Lee defeated Frances Rowan, 6—0, 6—1; Willie O'Steen Herbert defeated Jane Wilmerding, 6—1, 6—2.

Hughes Hurls One-Hit Ball, Phils Win, 7 to 0

Novikoff's Single in Eighth Ruins 'Perfect' Game for Ex-Baltimore Hurler; Cubs Beaten

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 3.—Twenty-one-year-old Tommy Hughes gave Chicago only one hit—a single by Lou Novikoff in the eighth inning—today as the Phillies shut out the Cubs, 7 to 0.

The tall right-hander from Ashley, Pa., purchased from Baltimore this spring, pitched flawless ball against the Cubs for seven innings, facing just 21 men.

In the eighth Hughes gave up two walks—his first and last of the game—besides Novikoff's single but a hidden ball play worked by Shortstop Bobby Bragan prevented Chicago from getting a man on third base. Hughes fanned six, got two hits and drove in a run.

The Phils hopped on Bill Lee in the first for a pair of runs on Merrill May's single, Nick Etten's double and Danny Litwhiler's single. They added three more in the second on Harry Marnie's triple, Stan Benjamin's double and singles by May and Litwhiler, Hughes' single in the third scored Marnie.

William-Mary Books 4 Major Grid Powers

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., June 3.—William and Mary's 1942 football team will play a ten-game schedule which includes four contests with Southern Conference rivals and four major intersectional tilts.

Athletic Director Carl Voyles released the card for two seasons hence today, stating that it was completed with the signing of a one-game contract with the University of Oklahoma at Norman, Okla., on December 5, 1942. This game will be a highlight of Oklahoma's bicentennial celebration.

Voyles said he might possibly shift an early season game to the November 14 open date.

The schedule: September 19, Hampden-Sydney; 26, Navy at Annapolis; October 3, Virginia Tech at Blacksburg; 10, Harvard at Cambridge; 17, George Washington; 24, Randolph-Macon; 31, Dartmouth at Hanover; November 7, V. M. I. at Lexington; 26, Richmond at Richmond; December 5, Oklahoma at Norman, Okla.

Pirates Rally And Turn Back Braves, 9 to 5

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 3.—Although outhit, the Pittsburgh Pirates defended their sixth position in the National League against the Boston Braves today by rallying behind Lefty Ken Heintzelman for a 9-5 victory in the series' finale.

The Pirates clinched the game in the third inning when they drove starter Frank Lamanna from the mound while pulling into a 6-1 lead. Two passes and two singles gave the Pirates two runs in the second and they scored four more after two were out in the third. Lamanna filled the bases and then gave way to Jim Tobin. Singles by Al Lopez, Heintzelman and an error by Sebby Sisti enabled four more Pirates to score.

Floyd Vaughan connected for his second homer of the season when the Pirates added two more runs in the fourth and they scored their final tally against Joe Sullivan, the fourth Boston flinger to see action, in the ninth.

Heintzelman kept the Braves under control until the eighth, when three singles and two walks resulted in four runs. Gene Moore, who led the Boston attack, hit safely for the seventh straight time while getting four for four.

Tigers' First-Inning Outburst Beats Yanks

Detroit Scores Four Runs After Two Are Out to Win, 4-2; Rookie Peek Is Victim

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 3.—The New York Yankees should have started today's game with the Tigers in the second inning. As it was, the Detroiters got off on the right foot and scored all their runs in the first inning for a 4-to-2 victory over the New Yorkers.

Young Steve Peek, rookie right-hander up from Newark, was the fellow with the shaky start. After the first inning, he blanked the Tigers with four hits the rest of the way, but the door was locked too late.

Dizzy Trout gave up eight hits to the Yanks, compared to the seven the Tigers totaled. He had a shutout through the third inning, was tagged by a homer by Joe DiMaggio in the fourth and was in trouble only twice after that.

The Tigers did their damage with two out in the first frame. At that point, with Charley Gehringer and Rudy York on base through walks, Bruce Campbell singled for one run, Pinky Higgins doubled for two more and Birdie Tebbetts clouted a two-bagger for the final tally.

After DiMaggio's homer in the fourth—his eighth of the year—the Yanks threatened again in the fifth on singles by Peek and Red Rolfe, but George Selkirk forced Rolfe and DiMaggio was an easy third out. In the seventh, the Yanks came up with their second run on a walk to Johnny Sturm, Rolfe's two-bagger and Selkirk's long fly. Rolfe was the day's leading hitter, with a double and two singles.

The Yanks played under the direction of Coach Art Fletcher, Manager Joe McCarthy left by air for New York to attend the funeral of Lou Gehrig.

Rookie Wins For Giants Over Reds, 7-3

By the Associated Press

New York, June 3.—Young Bob Carpenter, the rookie right-hander from Knoxville who has proved the Giants' surprise package pitcher of recent days, tossed his second straight five-hitter today to lead the New Yorkers to a 7 to 3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The 23-year-old elbower, turning in his third victory of the season without defeat, had the benefit of a 13-hit Giant attack which blasted Paul Derringer off the hill in two innings under a five run barrage. After that, he just breezed in, although he weakened slightly in the eighth and ninth to give the Reds all their runs on homers by Jim Gleeson and Ival Goodman.

Two singles and Babe Young's triple produced two Giant runs in the first inning. Three more came across in the second on Billy Jurges' homer following Burgess Whitehead's double and Johnny Rucker's triple. Jojo Moore's two run homer in the seventh wound up the scoring.

Louis May Meet Pastor-Scott Bout Winner

There's no rest for the weary, meaning Joe Louis, if the present plans concerning the outcome of the Bob Pastor-Buddy Scott heavyweight fight June 16 in Griffith Stadium materialize.

Believe it or not, Promoter Mike Jacobs is lending a keen ear to the pleadings of James Joy Johnston in behalf of his fighter, Pastor. Johnston informed Joe Turner yesterday that Jacobs had gone so far as to promise him that Louis will meet the winner of the Pastor-Scott battle.

Charlie MacDonald, promoter at the Hollywood, Calif., Bowl, is after such a match, and his preference is Pastor, who is a big drawing card on the Coast. Baltimore promoters painted a golden picture of a Louis-Scott fight in the Monumental City when Jacbs was in Washington for the Buddy Baer fight, and if Scott beats Pastor he may be the man Louis fights in the distant fall before retiring as undefeated heavyweight champion of the world.

Tomorrow at 2 p. m. is the closing time for entries to the Bannockburn Invitation Tournament, which starts Friday with an 18-hole qualifying round.

Hunt, of Navy, Paces College Net Advance

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., June 3.—Joe Hunt of Navy, seeded No. 1 in the Third District Intercollegiate Tennis qualifying tournament, today won easily over Fayette White of Presbyterian College of Clinton, S. C., 6—0, 6—4.

Hunt's smashing forehand was in rare form as he breezed through nine straight games until White broke in to fight to a 4 to 4 deadlock in the second set before Hunt went on to victory.

Tomorrow Hunt will meet Kerdasha of Presbyterian, a protege of Bobby Riggs who has wired Art Hendricks, Navy tennis coach, that Kerdasha is the man to beat the favored midshipman. Kerdasha today teamed up with White in opening doubles play to oust a Navy pair and defeated Bill Godfrey of Navy in singles play.

The summary:

Singles quarterfinals—Kerdasha (Presbyterian) defeated Godfrey (Navy), 6—3, 6—4; Kloter (Navy) defeated Decker (Miami), by default; Wyatt (Navy) defeated Spreen (Navy), 6—3, 7—5; Hunt (Navy) defeated White (Presbyterians), 6—0, 6—4.

Doubles quarterfinals—Burkom and Royal (U. of Md.) defeated Godfrey and Kolter (Navy), 8—6, 6—2; Kerdasha and White (Presbyterian) defeated Scherer and Spreen (Navy), 6—4, 7—9, 8—6.

Milwaukee Club Is for Sale, Says League President

Milwaukee, June 3. — George Trautman, president of the American Association, revealed today that the Milwaukee Association baseball team might be sold this week.

"There is nothing alarming in the situation," Trautman said. "Nothing is happening here that has not happened many times before in baseball and in our league."

The league president did not reveal who was interested in buying the club.

Leo Miller, former president of the Indianapolis American Association Club, was in the city for a conference with Brewer officials. He was reported to be representing Frank McKinney, an Indianapolis banker, who with Donie Bush formerly held a 50 per cent interest in the Louisville Colonels. They sold their interests last winter when Bush retired because of ill health.

The Brewers have won only 11 of 40 games this year. They are in last place in the association.

Wyatt, Dodgers Blank Cards, Tie for Lead

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 3.—The high-flying Dodgers rode into a tie for the National League lead again today on the shutout pitching of Whitey Wyatt.

Applying his fourth coat of whitewashing of the season, the long, lean right-hander handcuffed the St. Louis Cardinals with six hits for a 6-to-0 Brooklyn victory.

It was Whitey's ninth win of the year against two defeats, and was achieved through a nine-hit Brooklyn blast off Morton Cooper and Sam Nahem, featured by home runs by Pete Reiser and Dolph Camilli. By taking the victory, the Dodgers finished on top in this "crooshial" series, 2 games to 1.

It took the Dodgers only one inning to put the game on ice. With one away, Billy Herman singled and Reiser blasted his fourth round-tripper of the campaign over the screen in right field. Camilli's homer—his twelfth of the year—produced a fourth-inning run. The Dodgers polished it off in the sixth with three more on Reiser's single, walks to Camilli and Cookie Lavagetto, an error by Marty Marion, which let in one run, and a two-run single by Mickey Owen.

The defeat marked the first time this year the Cards have been blanked, but they can't bee too put out about it, because the job was done by the league's leading whitewash painter. Whitey was in serious trouble only once. That came in the first inning when Terry Moore singled and Don Padgett and Enos Slaughter followed with walks to load the bases. But Frank Crespi bounced into the third out to end the threat.

After that, only two Cards got as far as second base. Crespi doubled with one away in the seventh and Jimmy Brown did tht same with two down in the eighth, but each time the runner "died" right there.

Georgia School Loses To Defense Program

Macon, Ga., June 3 (AP).—Mercer University, whose varsity football ranks have been thinned by the defense program, scholastic and other reasons, may have to abandon intercollegiate competition for a year unless freshman players are declared eligible.

Charles W. Hubbard, business manager whose report yesterday also informed President Spright Dowell that a serious financial situation existed in the athletic department, said the Dixie Conference had been asked for permission to use eight freshman players next fall.

G. U. Alumni Dinner Tickets Are Going Fast

Georgetown University alumni in great numbers are buying tickets for the annual alumni dinner Saturday night at 7 o'clock at Mayflower Hotel, it was reported last night.

Thomas A. Cantwell, '08, one of the Hoyas' greatest pitchers who won fame with the Cincinnati Reds, will present varsity "G" awards, while Joseph O'Mahoney, LL. B. '20, will be principal speaker. Through the courtesy of Lawrence J. Teller, law '16, part of the program will be broadcast on the air.

Eastern High Nine Whips Western, 7-3, in Interhigh Playoff

Ches Spieser Hurls Fine 3-Hit Game

'Unknown' Pitcher Gives Tide Lead In 3-Game Series For Championship

By Bill Burnett

The "strategy" of starting an untested pitcher, for some strange reason, worked for Eastern High's nine yesterday and it emerged a 7-3 victor in the first clash of a three-game series for the 1941 public school championship of Washington.

With his two dependable Kenneths—Deavers and Curles—to choose from, Eastern's Coach "Chief" Guyon elected to send young Chester Spieser, a slender right-hander, to the mound to start hostilities at the Western diamond. The move proved a good one, for Spieser hurled three-hit ball the first six innings until he was lifted, in another "strategic" outburst, in favor of Deavers.

Though a wild assortment of Western misplays was Eastern's best friend, the blow that broke up the game in the White Tide's favor was contributed by its own right fielder, Jack Hoffman.

Eligibility Protested

With mates on first and second in the fifth inning, Hoffman, whose appearance with the Tide caused an eligibility protest earlier in the season, leaned on one of Charley Hines' tosses. The ball cleared the right field fence by inches, and was inside the foul marker by less.

Altogether, Eastern, which had scored one run in the third frame without benefit of a hit, tallied four times in the fifth. Five safeties, a hit batsmen, one of Jake Hilleary's three errors and a fielder's choice were recorded then.

The splurge put Hines, Western's starting pitcher, on dangerous ground, and when he walked Don McLaughlin and pitched a single to Billy Hite to start the sixth inning he was replaced by Clarence Kuldell with eight hits charged against him. The latter started with a wild pitch, was largely responsible for Shoemaker's passed ball which allowed one Tide runner to score, but settled down to hurl hitless ball for 3 2-3 innings.

Scores on Bad Throw.

Eastern's other run in the sixth was the result of Shoemaker's wide throw to second trying to catch McLaughlin stealing.

Western's runs, in the first and fourth stanzas, were almost as tainted as Eastern's. The Raiders needed only Cady's single, a walk issued Jeffries and a fielder's choice on Leach's grounder to score their first run. Ray Love's one-base hit accounted for both runs in the fourth. Shoemaker previously having walked, Karas having reached first on Reds Vernon's miscue, and the pair having been moved up by Don Cockrill's perfect bunt.

The teams resume their best two-out-of-three series Friday at Eastern. If a third game is necessary it will be played next Tuesday at Anacostia.

Palace A. C. Nine Will Play Three Games Tomorrow

The Palace A. C. baseball team apparently thinks it "can take it."

In a superman effort the laundry nine will play three games tomorrow, all within the space of seven hours. At 5 p. m. it will meet the War Department nine in a Federal-Commercial League game at the East Ellipse. And without a rest it will move out to Ballston Stadium for a night double-header in the Washington-Virginia League. The first encounter will be with Village Motors and the second with the Arlington Macabees.

Palace's hurlers at the start of the three clashes will be, respectively, "Boots" Johnson, "Lefty" McIntyre and John Walters.

Giants Send Shoffner To Slipping Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., June 3 (AP).—Milburn Shoffner, veteran major league southpaw, has been acquired from the New York Giants to bolster the pitching department of the slumping Memphis Chicks, Vice President Frank Longinotti announced today.

Shoffner, who worked in 20 games for the world champion Cincinnati Reds last year, winnng one and losing none, will join the Chicks Thursday.

Pastor Lauds Methodist Duckpinners

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor and a topnotch bowler, last night told members of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Bowling League that Christian fellowship enjoyed through recreation is more important than big averages.

Speaking at the annual league dinner in the church social hall, he voiced pride that 190 people had participated in the congregation league this year, and reminded that many also took part in the city-wide Methodist league.

In the latter league, Mount Vernon's team won second honors in the men's division and first honors in the women's group. The men's bronze trophy was displayed at the dinner.

Talma L. Smith was toastmaster, and Miss Helen Scott introduced the following new officers of the Mount Vernon League for the coming year:

Ladies, Miss Maxine Ott, president; Elsie Heckman, secretary-treasurer, and Adeline Bott, official scorer. Men's, Walter Graham, president; Lewis Buckingham, vice president; Talma R. Smith, official scorer; Charles Wray, treasurer; Ralph Huls, secretary, and Gilbert Kloth, publicity chairman. Handling arrangements for the dinner were John Eckstine, retiring president of the Mount Vernon League, men's unit, and Mrs. Eckstine.

Sidat-Singh In Softball Game Tonight

Wilmeth Sidat-Singh, former Syracuse University football and basketball great, will head picked colored softball players, playing as the Recreation Collegiate All-Stars, into action tonight against the Senate Beer ten, current leaders of the Merchants Night Loop, at 9:15 in Ballston Stadium.

Recognized as one of the few Hindu athletes performing in the United States, Sidat-Singh will be ably supported by a host of well-known colored stars. Heading the list is Red Briscoe, former Virginia State sensation and Washington Bruin pro basketball ace, who will play the infield for the All-Stars. Others who will see action are Everett Payne, Sylvester Hall, Reginald Perry and a pair of fast-ball hurlers, Otis "Speedball" Troupe and "Curveball" Weatherspoon.

In their initial test against the power-hitting All-Star line-up, the Beermen will either employ Veteran Abe Rosenfield or 16-year-old Billy "Lefty" Sullivan on the mound.

In the first game of the twin-bill, Plaza Wine & Liquor, lone victors over Senate this year, face stiff opposition in Carr Bros. & Boswell in a skirmish starting at 7:45.

National Rifle Matches Are Off

Columbus, Ohio, June 3 (AP).—One of the country's top-flight sports events—the national rifle matches—dropped from the 1941 calendar today with announcement that Camp Perry would not be available for the three-week cartridge carnival beside Lake Erie.

The National Rifle Association announced that the Army's 30-caliber division of the classic would be canceled, due to the national defense program, definitely limiting the 1941 competition to the smallbore and pistol classifications.

The smallbore rifle contests have been transferred to the Mount Gilead (Ohio) range of the Ohio Rifle and Pistol Association and the National Pistol tournament to the L. A. Young range in Detroit. Both will be held the last week in August.

Chalky Wright Beats Puentes in 10 Rounds

New York, June 3 (AP).—Chalky Wright, 128¼, of Los Angeles, a leading featherweight title contender, outpointed Guillermo Puentes, 136½, of Colombia, South American lightweight champion, in a hard eight-round bout at the Queensboro Arena tonight.

It was a slugging match from start to finish with only one knockdown. A right to the jaw caught Puentes coming off the ropes in the fifth and dropped him for a count of five, which was interrupted by the bell. A right hook opened a cut over Wright's left eye in the second and Puentes' mouth was cut by an uppercut in the fifth.

Lawson Little Seeks To Hold Own in Open

Defending Titleholder Figures It'll Take Patience When Shooting Starts Tomorrow

By Bill Boni

United Press Sports Writer.

Fort Worth, Tex., June 3.—Having made an enviable habit of holding onto what he'd won as an amateur, 200-pound Lawson Little hopes to be able to do some more of the same when he steps out in the U. S. Open Golf Championship on Thursday as defending titleholder.

Little won the United States and British Amateur Championships in 1934, then repeated in 1935, the only time it's ever been done. As an amateur he was far and away the best of the crop. But as a pro he's up against a little more rugged competition.

Still he thinks his chances should be as good as any other man's when the boys start shooting for keeps over the Colonial Club course Thursday morning.

"If I can hit my drives the way I did at Cleveland last year," said the burly San Franciscan, "and putt well on these greens, which have been putting beautifully so far, I'm going to be right up in there.

It'll Take Patience

"But its going to take patience to win this tournament. By that I mean that the long hitters—and I'm one of them—won't just be able to step up on those tees and belt the ball. Where the short hitters will be playing for fairway spots 50 and 60 yards wide, our targets will be only 30 and 40 yards across, not as wide as the greens on some holes. We're going to be using No. 1 irons and spoons instead of drivers.

"That will be true on the seventh, ninth, tenth and eleventh, and even more so on the fifth. That fifth hole—469 yards long, dog-leg to the right and 90 feet across where the drives are going to land—will be played for 5s by most of the boys. They'll be hitting three No. 4 irons down that one, and figuring par 4s as just so much gravy."

In spite of practice scores that have been high, from 74 to 77, Little feels quite content with his game. He's been hitting some fine golf shots and believes he's timing his practice so his game will be just about at its peak for the three days of the championship.

The two players he singles out as especially likely to do well are little Paul Runyan and tall Byron Nelson—Runyan because of the accuracy that compensates for his lack of length, Nelson because he is among the best of the pros at placing tee shots either by hooks or fades.

Incidentally, while the "card" length of the course is 7,005 yards now that the fourth hole has been cut from 250 to 220, reports from many players hint at yardage-stretching at a few points. Mentioned most frequently are the par-3 eighth and sixteenth, listed as 198 and 207 yards, respectively. A lot of the lads have been dropping their shots pin-high on the fly with No. 4 irons and even 5's.

The usual reaction is to look at the green, look back at the yardage figure on the card, and then look incredulous.

Helmer Hurls, O'Donnell's Nine Scores

Allowing only 3 hits in the six innings play, Pitcher Bill Helmer, of O'Donnell's Grill nine, paced his team to a 5-3 victory over Little Tavern yesterday in The Washington Post-Industrial League.

Helmer's only difficulty came in the first inning, when the Tavernmen scored all their runs. He fanned seven and issued two bases on balls.

O'Donnell's got only four hits off Wheatley, but two were for extra bases.

Mrs. Brandon Winner Over Mrs. Walper

a 78, but walked in from the thirteenth hole, where she defeated Kenwood's Mrs. J. W. Jago, 6 and 5. Mrs. Stokes, a heavy favorite over Mrs. Charles Lynch, was pressed all the way to turn in a 3-and-2 victory with a round of 83.

Toss-Ups All

Mrs. Brandon was out in 41, a popular first nine score for the first flight winners, and two up on Mrs. Walper and the Indian Spring shotmaker could not reduce the advantage and finally bowed out on the sixteenth green.

All four quarter-final matches are strictly toss-ups. Mrs. Neblett and Mrs. Stokes have played several rounds together since the former joined Manor soon after moving to Washington from New Orleans and they have been strictly nip-and-tuck affairs. It looks like another one today in the feature attraction. Mrs. Brandon and Mrs. Davy are also consistent partners and evenly matched while there is little to choose between Mrs. Meckley and Miss Houghton or the match between the two lesser-known qualifiers, Mrs. Peabody and Mrs. Simons. The top-flighters tee off between 9:50 and 10:05.

The weekend salt water fisherman has been getting all the tough breaks the past several weeks. With fishing improving daily up and down the Chesapeake Bay, the weekender, because of the poor weather, does not hit it as his brother angler who fishes weekdays.

The special weekend weather report as given in our fishing column every Friday morning has been quite accurate up to date. We are told many salt-water fishermen are watching for it, and planning their trips accordingly.

The report is specially prepared for us every Thursday night by the Weather Bureau. It covers the weather for Friday and Saturday, leaving Sunday to be conjectured.

The weekend trouter has not been hitting it much better, if at all. Although he does not worry so much about rainy weather, something is always wrong. He goes out on his favorite trout stream and meets an angler who tells him that on such and such a weekday, oh boy, how the trout hit.

Considerable rain has fallen up Frederick and Thurmont, Md. However, no appreciable rise in the streams has been noted. The ground has been so dry it soaks up all the water without leaving a run-off. A little more rain and then there'll be some real catches made. And we're hoping to catch a big one ourselves. There are still plenty of big trout in the streams. We've seen plenty of them, but with the water so low and clear they are just not in any striking mood. At least, what rain we've had has changed the temperature and composition of the water and, we hope, trout fishing will pick up.

Here is good news to trout anglers. Sunday a law went into effect in Maryland making it illegal to fish any trout stream out of season. This applies only to streams that have been stocked with trout. This new regulation will eliminate the temptation of taking trout out of season. It is these carry-over trout that the angler wants to get hold of when the season opens, as he is a trout worth while. He becomes beautifully colored, a smart scraper, and further, when he is served on the table for dinner, you can distinguish a whale of a difference in flavor and quality of flesh. We hope the regulation will be strictly enforced.

Trout fishing in the Elk River, between Banner Elk and Elk Park, N. C., has been producing some big ones. Paul Cookes, of Elk Park, caught a 22½-inch brown trout weighing 4½ pounds. David Riddle, of Johnson City, Tenn., landed a 21½-inch brown trout weighing 3 pounds.

Mrs. Max Lentz, of Marion, N. C., last week caught her limit of 12 trout on Neal's Creek in the Mount Mitchell area, which is set aside for feminine anglers. Average length of fish kept was over 11 inches with a total weight of 20 pounds—all of which proves that the feminine anglers are getting good.

Heavy rains that fell on most of Maine's vast forest areas this week resulted in the reopening of these regions to stream fishing.

Still closed, however, was the area around Millinocket and East Branch of the Penobscot. Moisture is needed in these two sectors to make them entirely safe.

Masterson Joins Redskins; Many Ends

Although two of his veteran ends have yet to sign contracts, Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty will have plenty of material to choose from, General Manager Jack Espey announced yesterday with the signing of Bob Masterson, outstanding flankman of the past season.

Seven ends are under contract, and two draftees are expected to sign after completion of their college work. Charlie Malone and Wayne Millner, the first string ends of last year, have not yet signed a 1941 contract.

Masterson's signing marks the fourth year he has put his name on a Redskin contract, but it was not until last year that he hit a stride which paced the entire flock of Skin flankmen.

A demon on defense and offense, Masterson was also one of the Redskins' highest scorers, getting 42 points to tie with Halfback Jimmy Johnston for second place. Dick Todd led with 54.

Masterson caught 18 passes in 1940 for a total gain of 283 yards and touchdowns. And his accurate toe added 15 points after touchdown and 1 field goal.

Flag Etta Drives to Length Victory in Charles Town Mud

Kelly Up, Victor Pays $10 Ticket

Vendor's Lien Runs Second; Red Idol Takes Show Spoils; Double Pays $71.40

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 3.—Patrons of this track are just about convinced now that J. Richardson's Flag Etta can run on any kind of race track. The 5-year-old mare competed today on an oval deep in mud and drove to a length victory in The Front Royal Purse, featuring the program. In her previous outing, Flag Etta found the going fast and scored by four lengths. In her race before that, she operated on a good track and won by five lengths.

In making it three victories, in a row, the daughter of Flag Pole and Junetta took command early and answered Jockey Willie Kelly's urging with speed enough to hold E. B. Lee's Vendor's Lien safe at the close. Third money in the field of seven, going seven furlongs, went to the Shenandoah Stable's Red Idol. Despite her fine record, Flag Etta paid her backers a $10 mutuel. Her time over the rough, deep track was 1:28 2-5.

The program began with an upset of major proportions. J. F. Donaldson's Busy Time came from behind to win under good handling by Apprentice Jockey G. Acosta. The $43.40 shot pushed Miss B. Faulconer's Pete's Gold into second position, while the Shenandoah Stable's Terry May was third.

Two Washington-owned horses won on the card. C. E. George's Highland Song, with Jockey Johnny Shanks, a Capital boy, in the saddle, struck to her running guns and took the second race to pave the way for a $71.40 pay off in the daily double. The 7-year-old mare finished in advance of Scarlet Flame and Chief Hollis to bring her individual backers a $13.80 mutuel.

J. Dobb's Corsica put the finishing touches on the twin bet by taking the third race. Jockey Danny Scocca, a Washington jockey, rode the $10.80 winner and brought her home in front of H. B. Langdon's Canrock and Mrs. Tom Lewis' Goodwine.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUSY TIME, $43.40, $14.00, $5.00; PETE'S GOLD, $3.60, $2.40; TERRY MAY, $2.40.

BUSY TIME moved up boldly approaching the turn, responded to a hard drive to wear down PETE'S GOLD and was opening a gap at the end. PETE'S GOLD was rushed to the front, could not resist the winner and closed gamely. TERRY MAY was forced to race between horses entering the stretch and came gamely when clear. SLEEPY closed some ground.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:08½. Off at 3:09. Winner, C. E. George's b. m. (7), by Gallant Knight or Strolling Player—Highland Belle. Trained by C. E. George. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:51⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGHLAND SONG, $13.80, $6.20, $3.60; SCARLET FLAME, $6.20, $3.40; CHIEF HOLLIS, $2.80.

HIGHLAND SONG assumed command early, withstood bids of SCARLET FLAME and closed under a drive. SCARLET FLAME, off slowly, came to contention boldly and tired in the closing drive. CHIEF HOLLIS was in close quarters early and closed with good energy. PUSHKIN was forced wide for racing room and came gamely at the end.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won ridden out; place same. Went to post at 3:37½. Off at 3:38. Winner, J. Dobb's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORSICA, $10.80, $7.00, $4.00; CANROCK, $5.80, $3.80; GOODWINE, $3.40.

CORSICA came around the leaders to take command on the backstretch, drew clear, swung out entering the stretch and was under punishment at the close. CANROCK was messed about going to the first turn, responded to a hard drive to improve his position, but was no match for the winner. GOODWINE was hard handled and was held safe. KINGOO made up some ground in the closing stages.

Daily Double, HIGHLAND SONG and CORSICA, Paid $71.40

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:03½. Winner, D. Galotta's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FUSIONETTE, $4.40, $3.20, $3.00; CLYMENE, $8.40, $5.40; SAXON PRINCESS, $7.40.

FUSIONETTE, shuffled back early, came to contention with good energy, took command and had to be kept to pressure to stave off CLYMENE. The latter was off slowly and was carried wide at the first turn, circled horses to improve his position and hung right at the close. SAXON PRINCESS gained with a bold move entering the stretch and weakened thereafter. PARADISE GIRL went evenly.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:32½. Winner, Mrs. P. Webb's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OVERBOST, $8.00, $4.20, $2.60; MAD DE MIE, $5.20, $3.60; SCHLEY AL, $2.60.

OVERBOST took the lead while racing wide at the turn, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. MAD DE MIE was under a hard drive throughout and showed a good effort. SCHLEY AL saved ground and was held safe. WALE SIGNAL could not reach serious contention.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:57½. Off at 4:58. Winner, S. Richardson's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAGETTA, $10.00, $5.40, $3.80; VENDOR'S LIEN, $6.20, $3.60; RED IDOL, $3.40.

FLAGETTA took the lead at the first turn, was well handled and held VENDOR'S LIEN safe at the end while under pressure. VENDOR'S LIEN was closest to the pace, made repeated efforts, but was not good enough. RED IDOL was strongly handled and weakened in the closing test. BAROGRAPH was shut off badly going to the first turn and failed to rally.

SEVENTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:27. Winner, Miss Ethel Collins' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—I'M THE GUY, $9.60, $4.40, $2.80; COCKLEBUR, $3.40, $2.60; SPOUT RUN, $2.40.

I'M THE GUY shook off COCKLEBUR to take a clear lead, drew out gradually and won easily. COCKLEBUR saved ground while closest to the pace and was weakening at the close. SPOUT RUN was hard ridden and had no excuses. WESTLY, off slowly, was not a serious factor.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:55½. Off at 5:56. Winner, T. Kirk's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CURVES, $7.80, $3.80, $2.60; TROSTAR, $3.60, $2.40; ASTERISK, $3.60.

CURVES was well placed from the start, drove through to take command approaching the stretch, opened a good lead and was kept to a drive to the end. TROSTAR had speed in spots and closed with good energy. ASTERISK set the early pace and came under punishment at the end. TWO ACES improved his position while losing ground on the outside and hung in the stretch drive.

Selection at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Visited Hagerstown yesterday morning and found the racing plant there spic and span with a new coat of green and white paint. Brother Harold Bester also has the barns shining in the same colors. He will stage the meeting that follows this and expects plenty of action. The Maryland half milers are giving minimum purses of $500 this year with the jockeys getting $25 for winners and $10 for a loser. The groom of the winning horse gets $5. Well, Clymene ran a good race. In fact, with better luck in the early stages she would have taken it all. Trainer Carroll James had her as sharp as a tack. I hope some of you followed me with a buck across the board. The next time she will have her real route and I look for her to take the chief money. Sammy Palumbo had only two mounts yesterday so he canceled them and took the day off, Jockey Frank Solimena got in from New York and will accept mounts here. Lou Cappo has his book. George Napier was another saddle artist to put in appearance. If it doesn't stop raining soon we're going to have to buy those flamingoes a raft. The Front Royal Remount Horse Show and sale will be staged at Front Royal, Va., June 27 and 28. Entries close June 20. The boy who holds the starting flag is trying. He even wears a jockey's hat. Miss Mona Manya, trainer here, has an offer to go back on the stage and may accept. She is a dancer. Jockey Pappy Witmer, who weighs a mere 85 pounds, probably weighed 200 after riding Barograph in yesterday's feature. He was covered with mud when he came back. One of the toughest jobs here yesterday was that of the team of horses pulling the starting gate from point to point. They really earned their oats. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—NAVIGATION gets my call in the opening sprint. Seems capable of carrying top weight in this company. PLEASANT LADY has been consistent and is dangerous. LILY LAD should earn a piece of the pay.

Second race—SUNNY ROSE showed enough last out to warrant a top pick in this field. Needs only the right ride. WAR SCARE belongs close with these. BRAINCHILD will be right there if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—EMMA H. in present form might beat any horse and I'm forced to string along. BALLYHAUNIS was under a strong drive to win last out. CRUSAND for the minor money.

Fourth race—MISS KSAR has all her speed now and will be hard to beat at this sprint route. JAMES PAL showed a return to form last out and will be a threat. TAUT should take care of the others.

Fifth race—J. HAL deserves plenty of attention in the off going. The long route will be right up his alley. KAI-MIN is cheap, but fit as hands make horses. BIG JACK gets in light and could surprise. I'm passing up ROYAL BUSINESS in this going.

Sixth race—NANNYKINS will find the abbreviated sprint route favorable and I'm going to strip along. ROMNEY ROYAL'S last was a beaut. STUBBS has downed this kind on occasions.

Seventh race—MARANDAN appears suited by conditions in this test. Gets steadying weight and likes the route. GRAND LUCK is in rare form and belongs close. Closing ability gives BROOMORIA a chance.

Eighth race—JUSTA JIMMMIE gets my call in the day's finale. He appears ready to turn back this gang. SCHLEY GOREE and FIVE O'FOUR to take care of the place and show.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take BUDDY AL, NIJINSKY and MISS PILGRIM.

Best bet—MARANDAN.

Farish Bares Plan to Sell Oil to Japan

N. J. Standard Head Says Agreement Made With U. S., British Knowledge

By the Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., June 3.—The Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) outlined to stockholders today details of an agreement to sell additional supplies of oil to Japan "negotiated with the full knowledge of the American, British and Netherlands East Indies governments."

W. S. Farish, president of the holding company with interests wherever the world gets its oil, read a prepared statement to the annual meeting with the preface that the question of oil shipments to Axis powers had been raised and the concern wished to explain its program.

The New Jersey corporation, which meets in this rural borough of 2,700 residents, explained it owned 50 per cent interest in Standard Vacuum Oil Co., with Far Eastern headquarters in the Netherlands East Indies.

No Delivery Yet

"About six months ago this affiliate joined with a Dutch-British oil company, a major producer of oil in the Netherlands East Indies, in special arrangement, over a limited period, to sell Japan additional supplies of oil and ordinary oil products. One hundred octane aviation gasoline, for example, was excluded.

"The agreement was negotiated with the full knowledge of the American, British and Netherlands East Indies governments.

Farish said Standard Oil has marketed oil in the Orient for more than 50 years and "even today, notwithstanding increased deliveries to Japan under terms of the special sales agreement, the total movement of oil from the Dutch East Indies to Japan, including shipments of the Dutch British company, as well as those of Standard Vacuum Co., are much smaller than Japan imports currently from other sources of supply."

Loyal to U. S.

He said the New Jersey concern at all times endeavored to adhere strictly to the policy of the United States Government.

"So long as the United States maintains normal relations with another country, Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) must also maintain normal relations. If the company on its own initiative, undertook to establish embargoes on shipments of oil from one country to another it might find itself running directly counter to the policy and interests of its own Government. Obviously it cannot permit itself to be drawn into such a position."

Exports are Limited

Farish said the company's record could be stated very simply:

"Exports of oil from the United States are subject to rigid control by the Government itself, which has drawn precise specifications to determine whether a given crude oil or project must be licensed for export.

"The shipments thus controlled are in general those of military utility, since the export control is based on national defense. All American oil companies conform to these regulations."

Farish said Standard Oil did not ship to the Far East. The Japanese, he commented, used their own ships.

The stockholders, voting 19,222,093 shares, reelected all directors.

Farish said he was "particularly gratified" with the compaiy's business in the first six months of this year compared with a year ago.

Earnings Are "Healthy"

"Our guess is that earnings for the first six months will be very healthy and will run between $75,000,000 and $80,000,000," he said, adding that if things kept going as they were he hoped the directors would be able to declare a $1 a share dividend at the end of the year. The year-end payment last December was 50 cents regular and 25 cents extra.

Discussing possible oil shortages on the Eastern Seaboard due to lack of tankers, Farish said the oil industry was working on two major plans. One involved the building of a pipe line from Texas to New York and Philadelphia and the other the formation of an industry-owned corporation to build tankers.

The pipe line project, he said, was "pretty well along" but it was necessary to await Federal legislation "to enable us to do it."

The oil industry, he said, "could do many things if it could work naturally and normally."

Federal Aid Needed

"But in this instance," he added, "it cannot get across rights of way without the Federal Government declaring an emergency and helping us. We cannot operate jointly without running afool of the anti-trust laws. So, before we can build a pipe line, we must have those things taken care of."

Farish said Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana was building a "butyl" rubber plant at Baton Rouge costing between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000 that would produce 15,000 tons of synthetic rubber a year and raw materials therefor as well as 20,000,000 gallons of alcohol.

"In general," he said, "we have found that butyl rubber has many useful advantages over natural rubber and we expect it to grow in consumption and in demand in various rubber products, not necessarily tires, but inner tubes and other things."

Iron Ore Shipments Set Record in Month

Cleveland, June 3 (AP).—Shipments of iron ore on the Great Lakes exceeded 11,000,000 gross tons in May to set a record.

The Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported last month's total of the vital defense material was 11,081,199.

The previous record was established in August, 1937, when 10,851,361 tons were loaded.

Stocks Turn Buoyant in Brisk Buying; Active Leaders Gain About $1 a Share

New York, June 3.—The stock market today put on the best rally in about two weeks with little in the way of outstanding news to account for the upswing.

The list, hesitant at the start, began to climb near midday and gains ran to a point or so for active leaders and around 2 for a handful of "blue chips." Dealings were lively for a brief interval, then slackened. Closing prices were under the tops in many instances.

The Associated Press Average of 60 issues held a net advance of .4 of a point at 40.1, largest for any single session since May 20. Transfers totaled 417,940 shares, also the biggest turnover since May 21, they compared with 255,306 yesterday, one of the smallest volumes since last August.

Brokerage explanations of the comeback varied. Most felt the buying revival was due principally to the fact selling had dried up to virtually nothing in the face of depressing war developments, labor rifts and the cloudy tax picture. Speculative reasoning, therefore, was that bottom may have been reached and that chances for a forward shift were better than even.

Then, too, mounting wages and strength in commodities turned on a little more inflationary psychology. Drawbacks, however, still were seen in broadening governmental controls and the possibility spreading priorities and price "ceilings" eventually would hit corporate earnings and dividends. Hopes Congress would trim the excess profits tax proposals of the treasury were said to have aided sentiment to some extent.

Share gainers of 1 to more than 2 points included Washinghouse, Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Eastman Kodak, Du Pont, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Cerro de Pasco, and American Telephone. International Paper preferred got up 1⅞ to a new high for the year. The majority of utilities, rails, aircrafts and rubber were narrow.

Fractionally improved were U. S. Steel, Bethelehem, General Motors, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Anaconda, Kennecott, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union and General Electric.

Well in front in the Curb were Brewster Aero, Aluminum, Ltd., Glen Alden Coal, N. J. Zinc, Humble Oil and Great Northern Paper. Celanese participating preferred jumped 5¾. Around 89,000 shares changed hands here versus 56,000 Monday.

Medium priced railroad bonds and a selected group of industrials and utilities tacked on gains of fractions to a point or so today as the general list remained hesitant with a steady undertone.

Trading was enlivened considerably in the final hour when there was a burst of selling in German Government issues and brokers were unable to find any specific piece of news to account for it. The 5½s ended down 1¾ at 7 and the 7s (Dawes Loan) lost 7-8 at 9⅛. Both issues were off more at one time. In contrast, Japanese Governments, Tokyo Electric Light 6s and several other foreign issues, including Denmark 6s and Canadain 4s moved up fractions to a point.

Transfers of $5,222,400, par value, were light, as bond volume goes, but well ahead of $4,006,300 on Monday. The Associated Press average of 20 rails added .2 of a point and the industrials and utilities .1 each.

Well up in front of the advancing column were Nickel Plate 5½s at 75, Western Union 5s at 79 1-2, Alleghany stamped 5s at 49 3-8, International Hydro Electric 6s at 40, Rock Island General 4s at 19¾ and Consolidated Oil 3½s at 105⅛.

Wheat Ignores Bearish News, Rises Sharply

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 3.—The wheat market shrugged off the most discouraging news in weeks today and ran up gains of 2 cents a bushel on a comparatively trivial trade report.

Four private crop experts estimated that the 1941 winter wheat crop would total 680,000,000 bushels, an increase of 37,000,000 bushels over their May report and indicating a harvest approximately 90,000,000 bushels greater than that of 1940.

This news, ordinarily extremely bearish, was almost completely ignored by the grain trade. However, a routine dispatch from Kansas City that mills were buying wheat futures started prices upward from levels approximating yesterday's finish, and the net gains of the day ranged from 1½ to 2 cents a bushel.

Wheat closed near the day's peak levels, 1½-2 cents above yesterday's close, July, 98@97⅞; September, 99¼. Corn, ½-¾ up, July, 73⅞@74; September, 75⅛@73¾. Oats mixed and ⅛ lower to ⅛ higher. Soybeans, ½ cent off to ⅛ up. Rye, ¼ down to ¾ higher, and lard, unchanged to 2 up.

Corn worked upwards in sympathy with wheat. Oats and rye were quiet, although rye derived some strength from wheat. Soybeans were not in active demand.

Lard was steady and not affected by hog market weakness.

Other Commodities Strong

New York, June 3 (AP).—Leading commodities futures extended their post-holiday rise over a broad front on a new wave of consumer and speculative buying. Some staples picked up a considerable part of the losses suffered on last week's reaction.

Santos coffee futures closed up .07 to .18 of a cent a pound; cottonseed oil, up .10 to 1.14 of a cent; cocoa, up .23 to .25 of a cent; silk, up 1½ to 3 cents; cotton, up 50 to 70 cents a bale.

Hides futures ended unchanged to .16 of a cent higher. Rubber, depressed in recent sessions, was ¼ of a cent higher to .21 of a cent down. The price of wholesale refined sugar was boosted by some refiners to 5.10 cents from 4.95 cents, restoring the quotation that had ruled for several months prior to May.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples rose to 85.10 per cent of the 1926 average from 84.93 per cent Monday.

Stores Report Rise In Materials' Cost

New York, June 3 (AP).—The cost of materials used by department stores is going up.

The National Retail Dry Goods Association said a survey showed prices of many store suppleis had advanced 25 to 50 per cent since last October against an average increase of 10 per cent in the year ended last September.

Bending board from which boxes are made, cotton twine and paper of all types were among the items commanding much higher prices, the survey showed.

Week's Gold Imports Slump to $5,955,472

By the Associated Press

Gold imports slumped to $5,955,472 in the week ended May 23. The Commerce Department said that shipments were less than half of the preceding week.

As usual, Canada sent most of the metal, $4,207,812 worth. Next largest shipment was $947,612 from the Philippines.

Crude Oil Output Heavier in Week

Tulsa, June 3 (AP).—Daily crude oil production in the United States increased 3,650 barrels to 3,779,975 for the week ended May 31, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Eastern fields were up 400, to 110,000; Illinois, 15,590, to 338,000; Louisiana, 6,300, to 325,700; Texas, 4,250, to 1,406,250, and East Texas, 50, to 373,700.

California declined 11,550, to 613,250; Kansas, 8,050, to 208,900; Michigan, 20, to 37,990; Oklahoma, 200, to 413,425 and the Rocky Mountain States, 1,100, to 105,740.

Business Is Good, Say 94% of Bankers

New York, June 3 (AP).—The magazine Banking announced today its monthly index of business opinion stood unchanged at the level of the previous month with 94 per cent of 3,000 bank officers reporting business continued good or improved and 6 per cent reporting a decline.

Auto Sales Continue Heavy Although New Models Near

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, June 3.—Heavy buying of new motorcars continues unabated with indications that the contra-seasonal trend will carry on through June and leave no surplus at the end of the model period.

Generally the closing weeks of a model season see a sharp tapering in demand on the theory that new models only a few weeks away are more desirable.

From present indications the new models scheduled for initial appearance around August 1 will be no less desirable from any angle—construction, styling, roadability and riding qualities—but they are going to cost more and they certainly are not going to be any more plentiful at the start of the new model year.

Seemingly more important right now than any other consideration to the car buyer is that a scarcity of vehicles is virtually certain at the beginning of the industry's new year.

The exact amount of the increase in prices for 1942 models hinges at the moment on the extent to which the excise tax on automobiles is boosted in the forthcoming new bill expected to be ready for Congress in the next few weeks.

The present excise rate is 3.5 per cent. Numerous proposals have been heard regarding the change to be made in this levy. These have ranged from a doubling of the present rate to an impost as high as 25 per cent. While most trade sources agree the 25 per cent proposal is an extreme figure, they are convinced that the increase probably will be substantial and that it must be passed on to the buyer.

Retail representatives in many instances have utilized the potential increase in prices and probable scarcity of cars to boost current sales but the manufacturers have said relatively little publicly regarding these impending developments. All are agreed, however, that there is no chance of avoiding an upturn in retail listings.

It is because of this situation that the motor car industry is selling more new and used automobiles per week than it ever has in its nearly four decades of mass output of motor vehicles.

Current guesses are that barring additional labor troubles the Nation's automobile assembly plants will turn out the scheduled 5,200,000 of its 1941 models by July 31 and that all of them will have been sold before next year's models are in dealers' hands.

SEC Blocks Dissolution Of Utility

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission ordered the North American Co. yesterday to abandon a meeting scheduled at Wilmington, Del., today to vote dissolution of North American Light & Power Co., an intermediary holding company. The commission said that it would back up its order if necessary by seeking a Federal Court injunction.

This unprecenented step followed a day of arguments during which S. Pearce Browning, jr., counsel for North American, challenged the commission's jurisdiction and invited an immediate court test rather than accept a proposal by Chairman Edward C. Eicher of the SEC to delay the meeting long enough to permit a full study of the proceedings.

The decision to order North American not to vote its controlling interest in Light & Power and to enforce this with a request for a restraining order by the Federal District Court at Wilmington followed a brief truce during which North American agreed to defer the meetng from 10 a. m., to 2:30 p. m. today.

Commissioner Robert E. Healy made it clear that without that 4½ hour delay the SEC would have gone into court yesterday afternoon because today would have been too late.

Reading the order from the bench, Healy charged that in its move to dissolve North American Light & Power Co., North American was "taking upon itself the function of this commission" in determining what needed to be done under the intergration provisions of the Holding Company Act.

He made a last-minute appeal for North American to reconsider going ahead with the meeting today, and told Browning that he believed that it was "fairly due the commission and the court that you state whether you intend to obey this order."

Browning noted that the order was just being entered and said that he was not qualified to comment.

Involved in the proceedings is the proposed distribution of more than $20,000,000 of assets when Light & Power is dissolved.

SEC attorneys charged that North American, as principal owner and creditor of Light & Power, stood to profit about $7,000,000 on less than $9,000,000 invested in Light & Power debentures and preferred stock.

North American attorneys brought out, however, that the SEC lawyers had not given consideration to North American's $22,000,000 investment in Light & Power common stock which would be completely lost.

General Motors Gives Pay Boosts To Over 35,000

Detroit, June 3 (AP).—Between 35,000 and 40,000 salaried employes of General Motors Corporation throughout the United States are being given salary increases, it was learned today, coincident with the formal signing of a contract between the corporation and the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) granting 170,000 hourly rated workers a 10 cents an hour wage increase.

All salaried employes receiving $200 or less a month were given a $15 a month raise, while adjustments are being made on an individual basis for workers receiving more than $200 a month.

The increase for hourly rated workers was provided for in contract amendments negotiated last month and ratified last week by all General Motors U. A. W.-C. I. O. local unions.

U. S. Commerce Office To Open in Richmond

Richmond, Va., June 3 (AP).—Richmond was designated today as one of 12 cities in which the Department of Commerce will maintain a regional office, representing both the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and the Bureau of Census.

The office, which will be under the direction of C. Roy Mundee, now manager of the local office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will serve the territory of the Fifth Federal Reserve District, embracing Virginia, North and South Carolina, West Virginia and Maryland.

Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones sadi the regional office here would be "a Department of Commerce in miniature."

U. S. Spending At Daily Rate Of 27 Million

By the Associated Press

Defense spending jumped to a new peace time high of $27,000,000 a day last month and to $836,606,782 for May.

The Treasury said the month continued the steady rise in defense spending which began last July 1. July expenditures were $177,325,479, or about a fifth of the May total.

For 11 months defense costs aggregated $5,240,420,822—nearly half the total Federal costs of $11,229,288,081. The proportion has been increasing, and lately defense costs have been approximately two-thirds of all Federal expenditures.

Next year, the Budget Bureau has estimated, defense costs will totoal $15,500,000,000 and the total budget $22,169,000,000.

Although revenues of $6,331,203,008 in the last 11 months were far ahead of last year, the tax gain did not equal the rise in spending, and the 11 months deficit was $4,898,085,073, compared with $3455,692,542 a year ago. Partly due to the new defense savings campaign, the Federal debt has been rising daily to new records, and now is $47,720,765,723—nearly $5,000,000,000 higher than a year ago.

Corporate Earnings

Vick Chemical Co. reported indicated net profit for the March quarter of $628,056, or 92 per cents a share, compared with $595,655, or 86 cents a share, in the like 1940 period.

Addressograph-Multigraph Corp. and Canadian subsidiary reported indicated net profit for the three months ended April 30 of $499,812, or 66 cents a share, compared with $272,559, or 36 cents a share, in the like 1940 period.

Diamond Match Co. and subsidiaries reported net profit for the March quarter of $504,793, or 40 cents a common share, compared with $513,820, or 41 cents a share, in the like 1940 period.

Food Prices Rise On Heavy Sales

New York, June 3 (AP).—An advance in prices by food distributors was reported today by the American Institute of Food Distribution, Inc.

"Sales records of distributors," said the institute, "are finally reflecting in higher wholesale and retail prices the steady advance in food levels prevailing since January.

"Movement into consumption has continued so heavy that few distributors have much low-cost stock left to sell. This is forcing them to advance prices, supported by an outlook for sustained or higher prices on food produced during the coming summer."

Engineering Awards Near Peak in May

New York, June 3 (AP).—Heavy engineering awards for May totaled $409,371,000, the third highest May volume on record, Engineering News Record reported today.

The total was exceeded by only the 1929 and 1930 figures for that month. Awards averaged $87,874,000 a week, an increase of 45 per cent from the same month a year ago, but 14 per cent below the weekly average for April.

Synthetic Elastic Production to Swell

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 3 (AP).—The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company announced today it is undertakngi a $325,000 expansion program which will double production of koroseal, a synthetic elastic used extensively for defense requirements, at its Niagara Falls plant.

"Increasing demand for the synthetic in the national defense and commercial fields necessitated the expansion program," a company statement said.

Capital Ranks Third in World In Telephones

With 38.84 telephones per 100 people, Washington today ranks third among the large cities of the world in telephone development, according to recent statistics published by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. San Francisco, with 44.85 per 100 inhabitants and Stockholm, Sweden, with 40.16, rank first and second, respectively.

The report showed that London, England, which before the present war actually had more telephones than any other single city outside the United States, on March 31, 1939, had only 17.81 telephones per 100 people, or less than one-half the ratio in Washington. A total of 1,669,904 telephones made New York the largest city in the world from a telephone point of view. That number represents more telephones than there were in all of France and nearly as many as there were in all of Asia, where half the world's population lives.

The report further showed that on January 1, 1940, out of a total of 42,642,252 telephones in the world, 20,830,950 were in service in the United States. The 21,811,302 telephones throughout the rest of the world were equivalent to only one telephone for every 100 people, whereas the United States has 16 telephones per 100 population.

Mail Revenues Up 12%

Postoffice receipts in Washington continued upward in May, setting a new record of $777,141 for that month. The increase over last year was $83,049 or 12 per cent, according to mail officials here.

January	$705,804	$672,270
February	727,323	626,825
March	759,105	698,348
April	794,564	705,744
May	777,141	694,092

For the first five months, mail revenues totaled $3,763,938, compared with $3,397,282 in the same period last year.

County Issue Awarded

The Washington investment houses of Ferris, Exnicios & Co. and Fenner & Beane were among a group of underwriters who were low bidders on an issue of $800,000 Montgomery County (Md.) refunding bonds, maturing from 1946 to 1961. The offering met excellent response, more than 50 per cent being sold by early afternoon, it was reported last night.

Pure Oil Offering

Smith, Barney & Co., which has an office in Washington, offered yesterday 8,946 shares of the 5 per cent preferred stock of the Pure Oil Co. at $90.50 a share. The stock represents part of the holdings in the company of the former partnership of Edward B. Smith & Co.

Republic Steel Reports Output At 103.4% Rate

Cleveland, June 3 (AP).—Defense-busy Republic Steel Corporation operated at 103.4 per cent of capacity for May, establishing new all-time ingot production records at its Chicago, Cleveland and Massillon open hearth plants, the Nation's third-largest steel producer announced today.

A new high was also established in the tonnage of electric furnace ingots produced at Canton, making a new total ingot production record for the central alloy district. All previous records weer eclipsed on the company's bar mills at Canton, Massillon and Youngstown, at Chicago and at Gadsden, Ala. Total production of bars for the corporation as a whole likewise established a new high.

Achieve 'Impossible,' Engineers Are Told

White sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 3 (AP).—Achievement of the "impossible" is the goal which American engineers must set for themselves if the Nation's Army is to have the best in equipment, Capt. J. E. Engler told automotive experts today.

Engler, attached to the U. S. Army Quartermaster Corps, speaking before the Society of Automotive Engineers, declared that "for us to assume that certain conditions may never be met in the field of action is to close our conscience."

Engler opened the second day of the S. A. E. convention program which will continue through Friday for general discussion of automotive design.

Chemical Firm Elects

New York, June 3 (AP).—George W. Dolan has been elected executive vice president of Mathieson Alkali Works, and J. V. Joyce, comptroller, has been elected vice president and comptroller, it was announced today.

Spafford Gets 1 to 3 Years in Security Fraud

Robert B. Spafford, of Baltimore, has been sentenced to one to three years, imprisonment upon a plea of guilty of four indictments in the District Court here charging him with fraud in the operation of a securities busines here and in Baltimore, it was learned yesterday.

Justice James M. Proctor pronounced sentence May 29 in District Court. Indictments against Robert O. Downs were dismised after Spafford admitted full guilt and through counsel assured the United States attorney's office that Downs had no knowledge of the misappropriation of customers' securities.

The indictments charged that Spafford, without the knowledge or consent of customers, converted to his own use clients' securities.

Spafford and Downs, operating as a partnership under the name of R. B. Spafford & Co., were formerly registered as brokers under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. The registration was withdrawn June 15, 1938.

Gehrig Paid Last Tribute By Thousands

staff of Mayo Clinic, Drs. Paul O'Leary, Henry Woltman, Harold C. Harbein and Bayard T. Horton.

Edward G. Barrow, president of the Yankees, headed a group of Gehrig's close personal friends who were named as ushers.

Following the services tomorrow, the body was to be cremated.

The death of the 37-year-old former star ballplayer, who shared with his one-time teammate, Babe Ruth, most of the slugging records in baseball, came peacefully last night while his wife, the former Eleanor Twitchell, of Chicago; his parents, his mother-in-law, and his physician stood by.

He had dropped out of the Yankee line-up voluntarily May 2, 1939, after 15 years of never missing a game. The next month at Mayo Clinic, in Rochester, Minn., his disease was diagnosed as "amyotrophic lateral sclerosis," a hardening of the spinal cord which causes the muscles to shrivel.

Fought to the End

He had to receive an injection in his back daily for two years, rest punctually and retire at 8:30 each night. But this restrictive routine never interfered with his going to his office each business day as long as his strength allowed. The final torturous stages of his ailment caused him to make the trip in a wheel chair, however, and about a month ago he gave up going altogether.

He sat by the window of his home and insisted to each of the friends who visited him that he would "lick this thing." Finally yesterday shortly after noon he went to sleep and never awakened.

lete who has participated in a freshman or varsity game in another school. Fronczek and Richmond athletic officials appeared before the committee at Chapel Hill in April and the decision was deferred until announced today.

Dr. Boatwright made public the letter from Dr. Hobbs, as follows:

"Since our meeting here on April 19 I have made inquiry from the authorities at Drake University and Creighton University, also from the president of the Missouri Valley Conference. They are all definite in their opinion that the game in which Mr. Fronczek played was a regular freshman game. There was no doubt of it in the minds of any of the persons from whom I got information. The president of the conference said that Drake did not violate the rules in playing Mr. Fronczek.

"I have sent all the information which I have received to the members of the executive committee and they are unanimous in the opinion that Mr. Fronczek must be declared ineligible for Southern Conference football. There is no reflection in this matter upon the authorities at the University of Richmond as the case has many points which would not appear clear on its face."

Athletic Director Glenn F. Thistlethwaite, of Richmond, said the action was "a crushing blow to us. Conscription will take others of our good players and it will be difficult to muster a creditable team to play our unusually ambitious schedule next fall."

Of Fronczek, coach Thistlethwaite said "he is one of the finest gentlemen and one of the greatest football players I have ever seen. We fought all the way for him as we deemed him worthy of every effort we could make in his behalf. He will be missed greatly by the football team."

Weights, Measures Inspectors Open Conference Here

The men whose job it is to detect merchants who do not give honest measure to consumers gathered in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday. The occasion was the thirty-first National Conference on Weights and Measures, held under the auspices of the National Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce.

James O'Keefe, sealer of weights and measures of Chicago, said his agents last year made 109,551 inspections, 13,344 investigations, and prosecuted 329 violators, who were assessed fines totaling $5,355.

Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of Bureau of Standards, opened the conference. Other speakers were: C. E. Tucker, chief of the bureau of weights and measures, California; Dickson Reck, consumer division, National Defense Advisory Commission; John P. McBride, director of standards of necessities of life, Massachusetts; Harry Mayer, National Scale Men's Association; Charles M. Fuller, sealer of weights and measures, County of Los Angeles, California; C. P. Grimth, vice president of S. F. Bowser & Co., C. E. Engelhard, superintendent of weights and measures, County of Middlesex, N. J.

Call o fthe Bugles Closing in Fast On Benny McCoy

By the Associated Press

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 3.—The call of the bugles drew a little closer today for Benny McCoy, the Philadelphia Athletics' second baseman.

McCoy's appeal for a classification delaying his induction into the Army under the Selective Service Act was denied by his regional appeal board late today.

The board upheld a decision of McCoy's local board and approved the class 1-A rating which makes him eligible for immediate Army service. He had appealed on the grounds that he had dependents.

Draft officials said McCoy probably would be called later this month, although as yet no June quota has been assigned his district.

Softball Postponed

Though both games at Washington Softball Stadium were rained out last night, officials hope to resume play tonight with two games in the National Night League. Lansburgh will face Ellis at 8 p. m. and Census will tangle with Christian Endeavor at 9:15.

Brandes Quits Harrisonburg Manager Post

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Lynchburg	20	10	.667
Newport News	15	13	.536
Petersburg	13	13	.500
Salem	14	15	.483
Staunton	14	15	.483
Harrisonburg	7	17	.292

Harrisonburg, Va., June 3.—Harrisonburg, always before fighting for or holding first place in the Virginia League and now the cellar occupant, starts the new month with a new manager—as yet unnamed—while the other clubs continue in their efforts to knock off the Lynchburg Champions.

Manager Red Brandes, who has piloted the Turks since the season started, has tendered his resignation. The former Piedmont Leaguer who came to Harrisonburg from Staunton last season, suffered some tough breaks. First, he had little material to choose from, never having enough in training for a practice game. Then the two pitchers depended upon to carry the brunt went down, Lefty Ernest Utz to the hospital with appendicitis, and Bob Cleer, out with a very bad arm after winning two games.

Club officials have not indicated who will succeed Brandes, the second Virginia League pilot to pass by the wayside in the first month. Petersburg released Ed Pickeral, a veteran hurler from the Pacific Coast to take on Ed Whitted who used to perform for the Phillies and Braves some years ago. The Rebels now are at the .500 mark and are battling only one game behind their neighbors, Newport News, for second place.

All the clubs are heartened by the fact that Lynchburg, well-nigh invincible before, dropped five of seven games during the week, cutting the Senators lead over Newport News to six games. Salem took three games from the league leaders but dropped a double-header to Staunton.

On Sunday, the Salem Friends shellacked the Senators, 9 to 1, when Lefty Krupin bore down on the five heavy left-hand hitters of Lynchburg, while Red Casbier, Salem shortstop, had a field day. Casbier crashed out two home runs and a single to bat in seven runs.

The weekend produced two more of those big innings which are becoming common since Harrisonburg tallied 18 runs against Staunton in the first game of the season. Yesterday, Newport News tallied 12 times after two were out, to drub Petersburg, 15 to 2. On Saturday, Lynchburg scored 11 runs in one inning to best Salem, 13 to 8. In this inning, Bama Ray, Lynchburg outfielder, hit two home runs, likely a Virginia League record.

Salem's outburst against Lynchburg ended the winning streak of Lefty Eddie Haswell, who had won seven games in a row and whose pitching had been quite a factor in giving the Senators their big lead.

Editorial Urges New Leadership For Baptist Unity

A proposal that the Northern and Southern Baptist Convention select one man as president of the two groups as a step toward creating a symbol of American Baptist unity, is made in the current issue of the National Baptist Magazine, issued yesterday. Is published here.

The proposed president, an editorial suggests, would devote his entire year traveling up and down the land to bring "better understanding and inspiration to both groups." A group of vice presidents or others selected from both conventions, as well as the president, would constitute a committee to consider and recommend certain specific fields of joint activity, agreeable to both conventions.

Declaring that "the world today has strong forces opposing the principles of Christianity," the article warns that "strong Christian forces are needed to meet them, if the truths and beliefs for which we stand are to survive."

The Rev. Mike Elliott, pastor of Luther Rice Memorial Baptist Church here, is editor of the National Baptist Magazine, official organ of 12,000,000 Baptists in the United States. Henry I. Sweinhart, local newspaper correspondent, is associate editor. Among the editorial associates are Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention; Walter O. Lewis, executive secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, with temporary offices here, and r. William S. Abernathy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church. The magazine offices are at 815 Eighth Street Northwest.

Court Reappoints Three Members To School Board

The justices of the District Court yesterday reappointed Robert A. Maurer, Mrs. Velma G. Williams and Dr. James A. Gannon to the Board of Education for three-year terms. The terms will expire June 30, 1944.

Maurer is vice president of the board and a member of the faculty of Georgetown University law school. He is a former principal of Central High School.

One of the three colored members of the board, Mrs. Williams, is chairman of the committee on student activities.

Dr. Gannon is the newest member of the board, having succeeded the late Gratz E. Dunkum.

John Pratt Heads Junior Bar Group

John H. Pratt was elected chairman of the Junior Bar Section of the District Bar Association at a meeting held last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Turner T. Smith was elected vice chairman; John E. Powell, secretary-treasurer; and George A. Cassidy jr., director.

Elected to the executive council for a three-year term were Harryman Dorsey, Robert M. Gray and Stephen G. Ingham. Lester Cohen and William T. Hannan were elected to the council for one year. Named as delegates to the Junior Bar Conference were Frederick A. Fallard, Justin L. Edgerton and Paul F. Hannah.

Schedules for two guest judges, who will sit on the bench of District Court here this summer to help relieve its crowded docket, were announced by Chief Justice Alfred Wheat yesterday.

United States District Judge Charles G. Briggle, of the Southern District of Illinois, will serve in criminal and civil courts from June 23 through July 12. United States District Judge T. Whitfield Davidson, of the Northern District of Texas, will serve in these courts from July 7 through August 2.

Assignments of justices to the special terms of the District Court, June 28 through October 6, include:

July 15 to July 31—Justice Bolitha J. Laws or Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

August 1 to August 16—Justice James W. Morris.

August 17 to September 2—Justice David A. Pine.

September 3 to September 19—Justice Jesse C. Adkins or Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue.

September 20 to October 6—Chief Justice Wheat and Justices Jennings Bailey and Oscar R. Luhring.

Assignments to special terms from October 7 on include:

Motions court, Justice Pine; pretrial and assignment court, Justice Proctor; civil court (nonjury), Chief Justice Wheat; criminal court No. 1, Justice Goldsborough; criminal court No. 2, Justice Morris; civil courts 1, 2 and 3 (all jury), Justice Bailey, Adkins and Luhring, respectively; civil courts 6, 7 and 8 (all nonjury), Justices Letts, O'Donoghue and Laws, respectively.

Chief Justice Wheat ordered that all parts of the court adjourn all day Thursday, June 12, for the annual outing of the District Bar Association at Bay Ridge, Md.

Students at C. U. Will Receive 500 Holy Orders

More than 500 holy orders will be administered to students of Catholic University's religious houses of study in ceremonies beginning tomorrow and continuing through next Tuesday at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

One hundred and eighteen ordinations to the priesthood will take place on Monday and Tuesday at 8 a. m. The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, university rector and Titular Bishop of Bilta, will officiate on the former day, and the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of the Baltimore-Washington Archdiocese, at the latter time.

The Rev. Dr. William Lallau, associate professor of sacred liturgy, and the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., of the Sulpician Seminary, will serve as master of ceremonies and assistant, respectively, for all the rites.

Bishop McNamara will preside at tonsure ceremonies tomorrow at 8:15 p. m., and Bishop Corrigan will administer the Orders of Porter, Lector, Exorcist and Acolyte on Friday at 7 a. m. Bishop Corrigan will confer sub-diaconate orders on Saturday at 7 a. m., and Bishop McNamara the diaconate orders on Sunday at 7 a. m.

Navy Fliers Who Rescued 'Chutist To Get High Award

Two Navy fliers will be awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross here tomorrow morning for their "extraordinary heroism" in escuing a parachutist dangling from an airplane by his 'chute cords in mid-air.

Secretary Knox will present the medals to Lieut. William W. Lowrey and Aviation Chief Machinist's Mate John R. McCants for their feat. Seeing a Marine officer, Lieut. W. S. Osipoff, attempt a parachute jump at San Diego, May 15, and fail to clear his plane after jumping, the two Navy men went aloft, pulled him into their cock-pit and cut the 'chute cords with their propellor.

"This is considered one of the most brilliant and daring rescues within the annals of our naval history," declared the citation accompanying the medals.

Military Rites For Col. Lyon Held At Fort Meade

Fort George G. Meade, Md., June 3 (AP).—Full military funeral services were held today in the post chapel for Lieut. Col. Thompson A. Lyon of the 115th Infantry, who died Sunday from a self-inflicted wound.

Among those attending the services were Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general of the Twenty-ninth Division, and Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, commander of the Fifty-eighth Brigade.

Members of the Snyder-Farmer Post No. 3 of the American Legion of Hyattsville, of which Lieut Col. Lyon was a charter member, were present, as was a representative of Columbia Post No. 533 of the Washington, D. C., Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Services at the chapel and the graveside were conducted by Lieut. Col. Frederick Reynolds, chaplain of the Twenty-ninth Division, and Capt. Frank Lambert, regimental chaplain. Lieut. Eugene P. O'Grady, Catholic regimental chaplain, participated in the procession.

Burial was made in the Arlington National Cemetery.

Col. Guy Cushman Is Dead at 64

Lieut. Col. Guy Cushman, 64-year-old retired Army officer, died at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday.

A native of Rhode Island, Col. Cushman enlisted in the Army during the Spanish-American War and rose to commissioned rank. He served in the World War and was retired in 1922.

A son, Lieut. Allerton Cushman, of Fort Bragg, N. C., and a nephew, Charles V. B. Cushman, Windsor Farms, Upperville, Va., survive.

What an operation in a hospital actually sounds like—awesome as THAT sounds—has been truthfully portrayed for listeners of WJSV, even if the production man, engineers, announcer and playwright who were responsible, had to find out the hard way.

Said sound effects were included in "Doctor, Lawyer," the play entered in WJSV's dramatic competition last Saturday by Paul Alexander, who, incidentally, won the competition last year.

Alexander, WJSV production man Barry Blake, Announcer Lee Vickers and Engineers Robert Pilcher, Granville Klink and Walter Brester were happy at what they considered the realistic sound effects they were producing for the operation in early rehearsals. That is, until an acquaintance of Mr. Blake, name of Miss Patric Claiborne, wandered in. Miss Claiborne is the medical artist at Doctors Hospital and she plunged them all into gloom by informing them that their ideas on operation sound effects, while pretty dramatic, were pretty unsound.

Her solution was a logical one. As her guests, all of them attended an operation at the hospital the following day.

Only trouble was that, since it was a successful operation, hardly a sound was heard—not even the dull thud of a WJSV man fainting. And that's the way it was in the play—sound and truthful.

Bridge Contract

An unusual team-of-four hand is shown in today's box. Played during the final session of the Vanderbilt Cup matches between the winners, captained by Sherman Stearns, and the Four Aces, headed by Oswald Jacoby, it features a brilliant psychological lead by Stearns which wrecked Jacoby's slam contract.

The opening of the diamond five faced Ossie with a possible trump loser, and he dared not let the diamond ride to his queen. He preferred to rely upon an even club split, which would allow him to throw off his two diamond losers; or, failing that, he hoped if South could trump clubs, it would have to be with the spade king.

His decision proved unlucky. He took the diamond ace, led a spade to his ace, and played three rounds of clubs, discarding two diamonds. Stearns trumped the third round with the spade jack, and Jacoby still had to lose to the spade king.

11 Germans, 65 Others Become U. S. Citizens

Eleven former German citizens and 21 British were among 76 persons who yesterday became United States citizens in ceremonies at District Court. Three others were repatriated.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of District Court told the group in addressing them on their duties as American citizens:

"Let us hope we will not be drawn into war, but if we are, I know that after you have taken the oath which you take today, you will become loyal supporters of our country.

"The real American citizen has respect and loyalty for his Government and is proud to be a part of this Nation. He is ever ready to render his services, whether in peace or in war, and he considers it his duty and privilege to be ready to serve in whatever capacity he may be useful.

"The world today looks to the United States for leadership in the great struggle for the continuation of civilization, and our Government looks to its people to do everything possible to help our Nation continue that leadership."

He emphasized "an unswerving devotion to our laws" as the duty of every American citizen.

McEvoy Named Assistant Vice President of Airline

William J. McEvoy, of this city, was elected an assistant vice president of the Pan American Airways System at a meeting of the board of directors in New York yesterday.

McEVOY

Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan American, and all other officers were reelected. In addition, Samuel F. Pryor, of Greenwich, Conn., was elected vice president and assistant to the president.

McEvoy, a former newspaperman, has been on the staff of Pan American Airways in Washington for ten years. As an assistant vice president, he will remain here as a company representative.

Born Here

Born in Washington December 8, 1902, McEvoy attended McKinley High School and the National University Law School. As a youth he worked in the House press gallery as messenger. He was made assistant superintendent of the gallery in 1920. The following year he joined the Capitol staff of the United Press.

In 1927 McEvoy became the first newspaperman in history to cover an actual news event by radio telephone from the air, the story was Charles A. Lindbergh's triumphal trip up the Potomac on the cruiser Memphis after his New York-to-Paris flight.

Switched to Advertising

In 1928 McEvoy joined the N. W. Ayer & Son Advertising Agency, and the following year became the representative of the New York-Rio-Buenos Aires Air Line. When Pan American absorbed this line, McEvoy went with the larger organization.

McEvoy, a bachelor, lives with his mother, Mrs. Katherine McEvoy, at 3001 Thirty-fourth Street Northwest. He is a member of the National Press Club, University Club, Burning Tree Club, and the J. Russell Young School of Expression.

Leaders in District Defense Council to Meet LaGuardia

The Commissioners and executives of the District Defense Council will meet Friday in Baltimore with New York's Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, newly-named director of the Office of Civilian Defense, for a round-table discussion of local preparedness activities, it was announced yesterday.

The Washington group, in addition to the Commissioners, will include Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, executive officer of the Defense Council; Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, chairman of the civil protection committee, and Robert Bondy, welfare and consumer interest chairman.

The conference also will be attended by Gov. Herbert O'Conor of Maryland, Maj. Gen. W. S. Gant, commander of the Third Corps Area; Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, and the mayors of principal cities in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

Mayor LaGuardia is touring the nine corps areas to determine first hand the status of preparations in the various localities for the protection of civilians and property, it was announced. He was in Boston yesterday and following the Baltimore meeting he will go to Columbus, Ohio.

The Office of Civilian Defense emphasized that Mayor LaGuardia will not attempt to impose any plan upon local authorities in their administration of preparedness programs, but will attempt merely to develop the closest possible cooperation between existing agencies and his new office.

District officials said they would outline to the defense director all phases of local activities, including plans to register volunteer workers on June 10, 11 and 12.

Bill Proposes Tax Exemption Of 10 District Hospitals

Tax exemption would be insured to ten Washington hospitals whose properties District officials are seeking to return to tax rolls under a bill introduced yesterday by Chairman Pat McCarran, of the Senate District Committee.

The hospitals own property having a total assessed value of $6,572,170 which, if taxed, would add approximately $100,000 a year to District revenues, it was reported at the District Building.

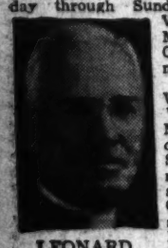
McCarran said he would name a subcommittee to hold early hearings on the measure which would relieve hospital authorities for liability for federal or District taxes "heretofore imposed" upon any property used for "legitimate hospital purposes."

The hospitals covered by the bill are George Washington, Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital, Episcopal, Homeopathic, Children's, Garfield, Sibley, Providence, Emergency and Georgetown.

District officials already have moved to tax Emergency and Children's hospitals.

Baltimore Parley To Fill Vacancies In Local Churches

Several local church vacancies will be filled when the Methodist Baltimore Conference convenes today through Sunday at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Baltimore, Md.



LEONARD

Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Washington Methodist resident prelate, on Sunday will announce a successor to Dr. Edgar C. Beery, whose six-year term as East Washington District superintendent expires. He must also name a new West District superintendent because of the death of Dr. G. Ellis Williams last month. A new pastor will be named at Lincoln Road Methodist Church, whose minister, Dr. R. H. Stone, has died.

Washington will be represented at the parley by Bishop Leonard, Dr. Beery, Dr. John R. Edwards, and lay and clerical delegates from each Methodist church, and many visitors. Lack of hotel facilities changed the original plans for holding the meeting at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church here.

Released by FBI, He's Held by Police

Seventh Precinct police last night charged William Siple, 75, of Philadelphia, with indecent assault after he was released by the Federal Bureau of Investigation where he had been questioned in connection with information in his possession about various American and British ships.

Patrolman Frank Watts, of Seventh Precinct, took the man into custody Monday night on the complaint of several Georgetown youths that he had molested them.

He was turned over to the FBI after a search revealed he had a list containing the names and numbers of employes in several American Navy yards.

Dr. Weidley, D. C. Pastor Emeritus, Dies

Dr. John Weidley, 80, pastor emeritus and for 37 years pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church here, died last night at his home at 233 Second Street Southeast after an extended illness.

DR. WEIDLEY

He was graduated from Susquehanna University in Selinsgrove, Pa., in 1887 and from Gettysburg (Pa.) Theological Seminary in 1891, subsequently serving pastorates at Bethany Lutheran Church, Pittsburgh, from 1891 until 1906, and Reformation Church from then until 1933, when he was made pastor emeritus.

Dr. Weidley served as superintendent of the National Lutheran Home for the Aged here from 1936 until 1940, and recently retired as president of the board of trustees of Gettysburg Theological Seminary after many years' service. He is a former president of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church and was frequently a delegate to the general Lutheran convention. He also was active in the Washington Federation of Churches.

Dr. Weidley is survived by his wife, Mrs. Susan Margaret Richardson Weidley, whom he married in 1891, and a daughter, Miss Mary Weidley, music director at Reformation Church.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Church and president of the Washington Federation of Churches, will conduct funeral services at the church at 212 East Capitol Street tomorrow at 3 p. m. The body will lie in state from noon until then. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

British Labor 128 to 1 Against Compromise Peace

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 3.—By the overwhelming vote of 2,430,0000 to 19,000, the British Labor Party decided at its fortieth annual convention today that a compromised peace or a peace by negotiation with Hitler or Mussolini was impossible.

Several thousand delegates representing labor unions throughout the country cast what was said to be an almost record vote on any vital subject ever presented to a British Labor Party meeting. The delegates who acted on the instruction of their local unions, represented anywhere from 1 to more than 30,000 votes each. The meeting was attended by the Labor Party members of the cabinet, members of Commons, and delegates representing every trade union in Great Britain.

Jury Returns 194 Monopoly Indictments

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, June 3.—Nearly 200 organizations and persons in six industries were accused today of fixing prices and of other monopolistic practices, in the greatest mass of indictments ever returned by a special Federal grand jury here.

Five food industry groups and one National defense industry were indicted. Those charged included 14 industrial associations, 89 corporations and partnerships and 91 officers and directors. Bail of the individuals was set at $1,000 each.

In the food industry indictments were returned against fruit and vegetable canners, dried fruit packers, evaporated milk companies, the rice industry and the sardine industry.

The defense group involved the manufacture and sale of battery separators, wooden partitions between battery plates used in automobiles, airplanes, tanks and submarines.

M. S. Huberman, in charge of antitrust prosecution, said this monopoly was nationwide.

Names of nationally known corporations dotted the list of 194 defendants. The same special jury previously accused nine other industries of monopolistic practices.

The biggest group indicted was the Canners League of California, including 41 canners and 22 officers and directors, charged with fixing prices of fruits and vegetables grown and canned in California and shipped in interstate commerce.

The Friend Fruit Association of California, 18 member packing companies and 31 officers and directors were accused of conspiracy to depress the price paid growers for fruit, arbitrarily raising the price to consumers, and monopolizing processing and distribution.

The Evaporated Milk Association, 16 manufacturers, 8 associations and 20 officers and directors were accused of conspiring to fix the price of evaporated milk made and sold in ten Western States.

One trade association, four millers, three distributors and three officers and directors in the California rice industry were charged with fixing prices for milled rice.

Monterey Sardine Industries, Inc., and five of its directors and officers were indicted of conspiring to prevent anyone else from marketing sardines brought from outside territorial boundaries of the United States into Monterey for sale to companies which can, process and sell sardines, oil and meal.

The Battery Separators Manufacturers Association, seven manufacturers, and ten officers and directors were accused of conspiring to fix prices by dividing and allocating the market among the defendants.

All indictments were returned en masse the day after Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the antitrust division, arrived in San Francisco with his chief assistants on a national tour. Arnold is concentrating on a national drive to lower food prices to consumers and raise them to growers by breaking monopolistic practices of processors and distributors.

Printers Shun Return to A. F. L.

Indianapolis, June 3 (AP).—The International Typographical Union, with some 80,000 members, has defeated a proposal to return to the American Federation of Labor, Secretary-Treasurer Woodruff Randolph announced today.

He said official returns from a membership referendum April 21 mailed to headquarters of the printers' union here gave 25,632 for and 33,498 against reaffiliation.
